Reilly gives explanation

Fireworks still explosive

By Edward Cafasso
Staff Writer

NEWTON — Fire Chief Edward B. Reilly, Jr., has written to the city's 24 aldermen in an attempt to heal the wounds created by his controversial denial of a fireworks permit requested by a Nonantum religious society.

The strongly worded, two-page letter on fire department stationery represents the first written explanation of his refusal earlier this month to grant a fireworks permit for the St. Mary of Carmen Society's 49th annual festival.

"It is my hope that once you, the members of the Board, and the interested parties understand the facts and the reasoning behind my decision, you will assist me in explaining to the public why I could not sign the permit," the letter asks.

While Reilly's letter and one published by the society last week seem to indicate conciliation of the controversy is beginning, some aldermen believe the explanation is long overdue and are still embittered by the chief's uncompromising stand on the permit issue.

In the communication dated July 26, which aldermen were supposed to have received this weekend, Reilly states he is "deeply disturbed and disheartened by the tone and direction" recent public debate on the issue has taken.

Board reacts

Staff Writer

NEWTON — Aldermen who played a key role in convincing the full board to unanimously pass a resolution "deploring" Fire Chief Edward B. Reilly's permit denial are taking a skeptical view of the chief's attempt to explain his decision.

The issue is further complicted by the fact that a two-page letter from Reilly dated July 27, apparently designed to reach aldermen along with drcp documents prepared each Friday, has not been received by at least four of the aldermen contacted.

Parenthood made easier

By Suzanne M. Dulude
Asst. News Editor

NEWTON — Alia Chandra and her "daughter," Diana Melinda, look alike. Both have that dark skin from Alia's native Philippine Islands. Both have huge brown eyes and dark ponytailed hair. But the similarities between the two stretch far beyond physical appearance.

The thing that makes this "mother-daughter" team so special is that both are adopted. Alia was adopted eight years ago by Rama and Barbara Chandra of Newton Highlands; Diana, a "Cabbage Patch doll," was adopted by Alia this past winter.

"Alia has accepted her own adoption so much better since this," Barbara Chandra said of the six months Alia and Diana have spent together. The acquistion of the doll "seemed to put an end to the mystery of adoption for Alia."

The eight-year-old Selwyn Road resident, who has been with the Chandras since she was five weeks old, came to know of Diana much the way her parents came to know of her.

"It was very spontaneous," Mrs. Chandra recalled. After calling "lots of stores" searching for a Cabbage Patch doll and being placed on waiting lists, a friend of the Chandras called one Saturday afternoon in January to say that she had purchased a doll and urged Alia to come see it.

Like the search for Diana, the Chandras had been placed on long waiting lists in two different adoption agencies in the Philippines without much hope. It was Rama's work as an electrical engineer and consultant that brought them to Manila for 18 months.

Old Hyde School

Razing awaits funding

By Edward Cafasso
Staff Writer

NEWTON — Building Commissioner James W. Cameron will be approaching aldermen "in the near future" to ask for money to demolish the fire-damaged portion of the Hyde Elementary School, Mayor Theodore D. Mann said last week.

Mann, who made the announcement during his weekly press conference, said the decision to demolish the portion of the Hyde gutted by a 1981 fire was made on the basis of an extensive examination of the building's structural integrity recently conducted by an Arlington-based firm of engineering consultants, Simpson, Gumpertz & Heger Inc.

The firm's findings, which were officially made public last Tuesday by the mayor, are based on visits made to the school by engineer Werner H. Gumpertz from last November until February of this year.

Of the six conclusions reached in Gumpertz's report on the portion of the school damaged during a 1981 fire, the most significant one states "The Old Hyde

West Newton Square construction stopped

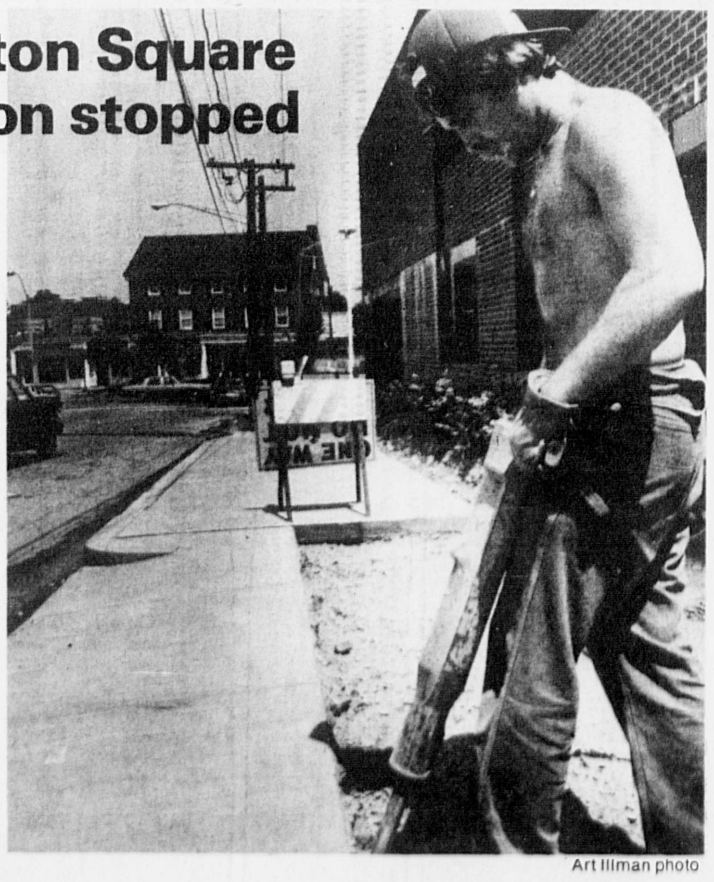

By Edward Cafasso
Staff Writer

NEWTON — A city engineer Monday stopped a private company from ripping up a portion of a West Newton Square sidewalk because permission for the work had not been obtained from city officials.

The unauthorized construction work, undertaken in an apparent attempt to repair the cliff-like driveway leading into the Martin Mill Parking Garage along Chestnut Street, was halted because it created a potential hazard to pedestrians, according to engineer James Mula.

Mula, a 28-year veteran of the city's engineering department, found workmen from Brickstone Properties, the firm who built the garage and adjoining office complex, ripping up the sidewalk during his usual inspection rounds Monday morning.

Guess who's on Mann's list?

By Edward Cafasso
Staff Writer

NEWTON — The typical contributor to the mayor's warchest in 1983 could be described as a 59-year-old, male business executive residing in the southern half of the city who gave $100 to the "Friends to Re-elect Theodore D. Mann."

The standing fundraising committee collected close to $20,000 from 265 supporters in 1983, many of them professionals in the fields of law, medicine and insurance, mayoral appointees to various city commissions, as well as some city employees and prominent developers.

Of the 265 contributions listed on the group's 1983 campaign finance report, 127 gave donations of $100 and seven contributed $200. With the exception of 50 people, all the contributors were city residents.

While Newton Centre resident Edward Mandell, a longtime Mann loyalist, believes the mayor's overall "support runs city-wide, from the common citizen to the prominent citizen," approximately 73 percent of the mayor's 1983 contributors were from Wards 5, 6, 7 and 8, which make up the southern half of the city, and of those, 51 percent were from the mayor's home territory - Ward 8.

Two current aldermen, Ward 8 respresentative Robert L. Shuman, a former fence viewer, and attorney Cynthia S. Creem, one of the Ward 8 at-large representatives, each gave $100 to the committee in 1983, while current Ward 7 School Commmittee member James P. Mnookin contributed $50.

Former assessing administrator and newly-named Personnel Director Richard V. Moynihan, a Watertown resident, contributed $50 as did Building Commissioner James W. Cameron, a Lexington resident.

Over 25 of the supporters were either mayoral appointees or city workers.

Martin H. Alpert ($100), a 54-year-old executive residing at 140 Dedham St., chairs the Newton Cable Communications Advisory Board; Norman C. Aronson ($50), a 57-year-old insurance broker living at 60 Longfellow Road, sits on the city's Crime Prevention Commission and is a trustee of the Municipal Building Insurance Fund; Dr. Barry Benjamin ($25), a 38-year-old physician from 90 Country Club Road, chaired the Oak Hill Joint Planning Advisory Group; and 36-year-old attorney Stephen J. Buchbinder, of 19 Rolling Lane, who chairs the Newton Housing Authority, gave $100 to the political committee.

One of the city's constables, Guido Cetrone, 63, of 41 West St, contributed $100 to the mayor's group; Isabell Coleman ($50), of 195 Church St., sits on the city's Council on Aging and the Health Advisory Council; and Casper A. Ferguson ($50), 68, of 41 Curve St., is a member of the Zoning Board of Appeals.

Bricklayer Donald Ferreri, a 54-year-old Shute Path resident, contributed $50 to Mann's campaign and sits on the city's Housing Authority; Gerard Gentile ($100), a 59-year-old oil dealer living at 16 Broadway, is a member of the Crime Prevention Commission and Energy Commission; Richard Glovsky, 36, of 36 Lansing Road, gave $100 and chairs the city's Human Rights Commission

City pulls Maloney off asbestos removal job

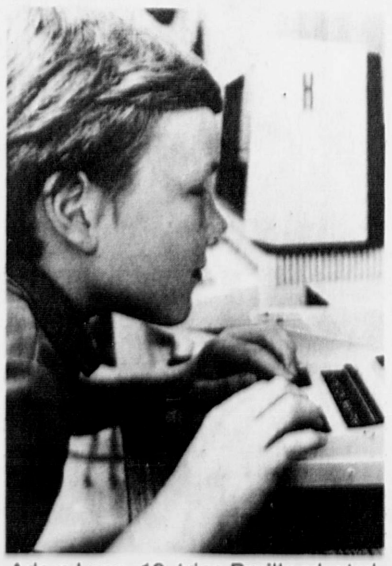

NEWTON — The G.S. Maloney Company, originally contracted for the asbestos removal at Newton North High School this summer, has been taken off the job by city officials.

According to City Solicitor Daniel Funk, the Brookline-based company defaulted on the $527,000 contract in the areas of timing and health and hygiene. Company officials were unavailable for comment.

Maloney workers, who had already been on the job several weeks, were pulled off last Wednesday. The contract has been given to the second lowest bidder, National Surface Cleaning Inc. of Methuen, which Funk said will most likely be working around the clock, seven days a week to complete the removal before school starts Sept. 5.

National Surface Cleaning was awarded a contract reflecting their initial bid of $662,000. Funk said he expects, however, they will submit a "change order" shortly, requesting further funds for the overtime required to complete the work before school opens.

According to Funk, inspectors from Hygeia Inc. of Waltham, who have been monitoring the asbestos removal for the city, documented continued contractual violations by Maloney of health precautions designed to protect both workers and the environment.

Grapple with an Apple

By Charlotte Meryman, Staff Writer

NEWTON — Mona McNamara is just winding up a two-week course in the computer language Basic.

Like many of her former classmates at Brockton High School, the slim, brown-haired teenager is preparing for college this fall.

But unlike most students, she will use her computer training to write papers and conduct research — and for her, it will be one of the keys to a successful college experience.

McNamara, who will enter Bridgewater State College in September, is visually impaired. She is learning how to operate a closed-circuit television unit that magnifies texts and a computer processor that can display commands in large type, with letters up to 36 times the standard size.

The training is part of a two-week computer course for the blind and visually impaired taught by the Carroll Center for the Blind in Newton Centre and conducted at the Educational Collaborative (EdCo) Computer Center in the Lincoln-Eliot School. Organizers believe it may be the first such credit class ever offered.

The document reiterates Reilly's previous public statement that his decision was based on previous permit violations in 1982 and 1983, when aerial displays rather than the permitted ground-based variety took place, and on the lack of adequate space in the Our Lady Help of Christians Church parking lot for a supervised display.

A majority of the letter focuses on a comment made by Ward 3 Alderman Richard Bullwinkle, who at the height of the controversy suggested the permit denial would be remembered when the chief's budget came before aldermen.

"I have prided myself on running one of the most professional fire departments in the Commonwealth. For more than 32 years I have served as a firefighter in this city and I have always tried to uphold the responsibilities of my job with a fair hand and a tone of professionalism; you and the people of this city would tolerate no less," Reilly wrote.

"It is for this reason that I am deeply disturbed by comments made by members of the Board that suggest that the fire department budget will be politicized in order to punish me for upholding the laws of this state and for the unpopular decision I had to make," he continued.

"I did not expect my decision to be popular; the people of this city do not pay me to be popular, just to do my job as a fire safety expert in as professional a manner as possible. They, and the personnel of the fire department should not have public safety tampered with in order to make a political point," Reilly said.

The letter also answers charges by members of the Nonantum community and one alderman, Ward 4 at-large representative Carol J. Robinson, that the permit denial appeared to be ethnic discrimination toward the largely Italian neighborhood.

"I would like to lay to rest the accusation that my decision was the result of my insensitivity to the people of Nonantum and the traditions of the Italian community. Those who argue this point demonstrate their ignorance of the facts and of my personal life," wrote Reilly.

He continues on to point out that his wife was born in San Donato, Italy, and raised on Chapel Street in Nonantum and that two of his family's "most memorable vacations were in the streets of Dublin, Ireland, to celebrate St. Patrick's Day, and in the village of San Donato, Italy, to celebrate the festival of St. Mary of Carmel."

"To those who would stoop so low as to suggest that my decision was motivated by lack of respect for Italian traditions, you couldn't be more incorrect. Your attitude has done little to promote a harmony of diverse cultures in our city, but instead you've opted to prey on the fears of people and promote divisions to further your own interest," he states.

His letter concludes by saying that he "made it clear" he could not attend an aldermanic committee meeting to explain the permit denial because he and his family were preparing to travel to New Hampshire for his son's wedding. Reilly left town for the event four days after the Monday meeting was held.

"I was assured that no meeting would be held. You can be sure my vacation plans coincided only with our son's wedding date in mind," the letter states.

Aldermen reaction to Reilly

All the aldermen interviewed said the letter does not address Reilly's steadfast refusal to compromise on his permit denial during a meeting with community leaders a week before the St. Mary of Carmen Society's 49th annual festival.

Several aldermen, leaders of the society and 10th Middlesex District Rep. A. Joseph DeNucci all attended the session.

After Reilly's letter was read to him over the telephone, Ward 1 Alderman-at-Large Bruce B. Carmichael, who originally submitted the resolution "deploring" Reilly's "outright denial," heatedly echoed the feelings expressed by some of his colleagues.

"I think professionalism goes a little farther than being able to tout the public safety issue. The chief was upset because there was a perceived violation. He held that against us and was just stubborn in his resolve not to grant the permit. That's not professional, as far as I'm concerned. Professional is being able to sit down and work out some arrangement," according to Carmichael.

He also called using "public safety issues" as the reason for the denial is a "double-edged sword," because fire department officials who were eyewitnesses to the alleged permit violations in 1982 and 1983 were specifically instructed by Reilly not to intervene, thereby allowing public safety to be endangered.

"So," Carmichael asked, "who's being political about citing public safety?"

"I think he exhibits a profound lack of professionalism when he doesn't take the word of public officials and community leaders, who offered to do anything to make him happy, that the wrongs will righted," he added in reference to the unbending stance Reilly exhibited at the meeting.

Ward 1 Alderman Ronald A. Marini, the chief aldermanic spokesman for the Nonantum community, said Monday, "I don't know if it's going to resolve anything. People are still upset. They feel kind of abandoned."

During the meeting with Reilly, which Marini attended, "We approached him as ladies and gentlemen, elected public officials. We took our hats off and we begged him to let us have a ground display. We offered every concession, but his mind was made up before he walked in the door," according to Marini.

He added that residents of Nonantum are wondering "what's next? When will the city stop using all of these little things against us? It's obvious that he's very concerned about his budget and he's probabl;y concerned about what will happen when he comes before us in September" when an aldermanic Public Safety & Transportation Committee is scheduled to discuss the issue.

The committee's chairman, Ward 2 Alderman Elaine Gentile, said of the controversy, "I think tempers flared and a lot of things were said in the heat of the moment. I'm glad, in a way, that the discussion is going to be held at a time when a lot of the emotions have calmed down. It's my hope that both sides will sit down at the table and talk."

Both Marini and Gentile said they have no intention of holding the permit denial over Reilly's head when fire department budget matters come up for discussion.

"We too will be professional without holding any personal vendettas. How anyone could conceive that I might do something to threaten the public safety of residents is beyond me," said Gentile.

Hyde School

Demolition funding to be sought

School, as it stands now, is unsafe. We recommend that the building be demolished promptly. If this is not done, the loose bricks on top of the wall should be secured promptly, because they present risks to safety."

According to Mayor Mann, Cameron, after meeting with aldermen from the area, will first seek funding to erect a fence around the building to protect Newton Highlands residents from the "immediate safety dangers" presented by bricks falling from the top of the weakened walls. City officials will also "watch the area carefully" for any signs of further structural deterioration, he added.

"Sometime in the near future," the mayor said, Cameron will begin the aldermanic process of seeking funds for the building's demolition.

"Regardless of how one feels about the closing (of Hyde) or school consolidations in general, very clearly there is no one who should be willing to take a chance with the safety of that community," Mann said.

He added, "The report speaks for itself. I'm not dealing with political ends ... We hope to center on the issue, the sense that there is a need to do something of a corrective nature as soon as possible to protect lives and property. That's what's before us right now."

Beside his recommendation that the old school building be demolished, Gumpertz also found that the initial handicapped housing/mixed use plan developed for the site in 1983 by City Design Collaborative, Inc. failed to take design, supervision and legal expenses into consideration and that rebuilding the site would currently cost close to $1.2 million more than originally expected.

"Unless the City of Newton is prepared to pay a premium for the preservation of the building as an historic structure, the present scheme for its reconstruction is not economically sound," he states.

According to Gumpertz, "An inadequate temporary roof (over the abandoned, fire-damaged portion) has allowed continued water penetration into the interior of the structure. An effective temporary roof would have cost nearly as much as a permanent roof."

"If the building is reconstructed without radical removal of the problem areas," he states, "the infestation could spread undetected, eventually weakening the wood until it falls. The potential failure mode is in shear, which involves unpredictable collapse, without warning."

"For these reasons," according to Gumpertz, "we consider much of the existing framing unsafe for reuse. Any reconstruction of the building should include complete removal and replacement of the framing. The total expenditure of all restoration work is estimated at approximately $3,000,000."

He concludes, "Presently, the building constitutes a danger to the life and safety of the public, because of deteriorated masonry on top of the exterior brick walls. This hazard should be dealt with at once."

Building Commissioner Cameron was unavailable for comment on how much the city paid the consulting firm to produce the Hyde report.

A birthday celebration she couldn't attend

Family, friends remember

By Charlotte Meryman
Staff Writer

NEWTON CENTRE — A soft, summer rain fell gently on the friends and family gathered around "Hillary's tree."

Twenty-one years ago, Hillary Sherman's parents celebrated her birth by planting an apple tree in the yard of their Rhode Island home. Friday, a year after her death, the staff and students of Camp Echo Bridge honored her life with another young tree. In a simple ceremony, they placed the slender, seven-foot, flowering dogwood in a small green behind the Mason-Rice School, just a few blocks from the Shermans' Newton Centre home.

Although her developmental disability kept her from attending the neighborhood school with her older sister and brother, Hillary spent her summers there in the Recreation Department's special needs camp and it was one of her favorite places.

For those who knew her, the vibrant, caring young woman is still very much alive. The gathering Friday was a celebration of who she was and a promise to carry on her legacy of kindness.

"It would be easy to let this occasion open our grief," Hillary's brother, Ralph, told the group of over 50 staff, friends and special needs children gathered in her honor. "(But) let us today resolve that the dark background of Hillary's death will be transformed by ... the tree we planted."

His message was echoed by Lou MacDonald, special needs director for the Recreation Department and a special friend of Hillary's.

"Every year, when we come back and see the tree grow, we'll think of Hillary and we'll think of her with a smile on our face," MacDonald said.

Hillary Sherman

Those who joined together in the Mason-Rice gym after the planting shared an enormous bowl of ice cream with sundae toppings, one of Hillary's favorite foods. Enjoying the treat along with the rest were Mayor Theodore D. Mann, who made a brief statement honoring both Hillary and the city's special needs program, and Russell Halloran, commissioner of Parks and Recreation.

"Not only the family, but also a lot of the campers had a hard time dealing with (the loss)," explained Ralph Sherman, who began working this summer as a counselor at Echo Bridge. "They were saying things like, 'Can you bring her back?' This might help them understand that it's forever."

The ceremony's positive tone was also crucial for the children.

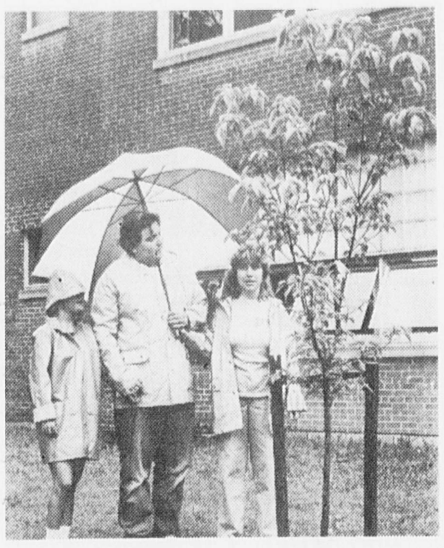

"It was the first death of a kid their own age for many of them," Sherman noted. "And for these kids, because it's one of their own, it's very frightening, very worrisome and very hard to accept. That's why we had two ceremonies — the tree ... and also the party."

Hillary was painfully aware of her own disability and sensitized to the handicaps of others, her mother said. Once, after telling her about a friend in a wheelchair whom she had helped, Norma Sherman recalled, Hillary told her, "Mommy, some of my friends no walk. Some of my friends no talk. Some of my friends no hear. But I help them all. They all my friends."

Hillary's family has now taken on the tasks she left behind. Her parents continue to do advocacy work for many of the city's special needs children. They have established a scholarship in her name for Echo Bridge weekend trips. And with contributions made in her memory, they have donated a talking computer to the non-vocal teaching lab at the Kennedy Memorial Hospital, where she spent three years learning to talk.

For all of them, the new tree will serve as a symbol of growth and hope and potential. And for Janet Inman, one of Hillary's campmates, the flowering, white dogwood will also provide a place and a time to remember.

"Now we've got the tree, I can say my prayer," she said quietly.

Unauthorized construction halted

"They had no authority to do it. So, I stopped them," he said, "They'll have to have it temporarily patched so there is no liability on the city if someone gets hurt down there."

The workers were apparently called in to repair the garage's main two-lane accessway, which has been useless since the complex opened because the floor of the garage does not meet the grade of the sidewalk's curbcut, creating a "cliff" ranging from seven to 14 inches high along the edge of the public sidewalk leading into the garage.

Because of the snafu, customers of the complex have been forced to use a single lane, originally designed as an exit closer to Washington Street, as both an entrance and exit into the garage.

City engineers and public works officials had warned Brickstone representatives of the disjointed driveway before the garage was built earlier this year and again when the project neared completion about a month ago, warnings that were "ignored," according to Mula.

The slopping grade of the sidewalk, which is city property, cannot be significantly altered because it would then allow water to flow into private property, creating liability on the city's part should anyone be hurt, especially during the winter months, he added.

Mula said the excavated portion of the walkway near the intersection of Chestnut and Washington streets will have to be repaired at the company's expense until a decision on how to handle the ill-fitting driveway is made by City Engineer Paul Giunta, currently on vacation until next week, and Public Works Commissioner James L. Hickey, who was scheduled to return to work Tuesday.

Attorney Jason Rosenberg, who handled neighborhood negotiations over the complex, said Monday the site's developer, Martin Spaget, should be arriving in the area by today.

"No developer would intentionally try to end up with that type of result," said Rosenberg. "Obviously, an error was made by someone down the line in setting the grade."

Spaget and city officials have been attempting to negotiate some mutual compromise to solve the driveway/sidewalk problem, but have so far been unable to reach an agreement on what should be done, he added.

Spaget's development of the former Mayflower Furntiure Company site, a longtime West Newton Square fixture, took place "by right" and created some frustration among neighborhood leaders who saw the complex and the garage's proximity to the square's intersection as only heightening the area's current traffic congestion.

City traffic officials maintain that the complex has not created any additional traffic problem.

Spaget, who maintained throughout the development that he wanted to be a "good neighbor" to the area, has already given the city a check for $15,600 to hire additional traffic officers if they are needed and has given up five of the garage's parking spaces for use by vehicles from police headquarters across the street.

He has also bought a defunct city roadway, Felton Street, opposite the Chestnut Street end of the complex, with the eventual goal of creating eight more parking spaces for customers of the site's mortgage and loan firm.

Hub convention site has merit

Mayor Ray Flynn's dream of a Democratic National Convention for Boston in 1988 is not at all a bad one. The Hub of our universe has a lot of hotel rooms to fill, its Athens of America culture panache, and just as much architectural quaintness as San Francisco if you except the cable cars.

Economic stimulus in form of millions of dollars to be spent is important. National attention would be fixed on Boston and Massachusetts, somewhat of a backwater in the great party powwows.

As a political decision making device, the conventions have become meaningless, of course. First-ballot rubber stamp acclamation of the presidential candidate who arrives with a majority of delegates locked up is now the pattern. A rules fight or platform issues might generate steam, but not really that much.

Conventions are a Madison Avenue showpiece in which PR people endeavor to whoop up a spectacular for television. They are junkets for delegates, nearly all of whom have nothing to do except carry out primary mandates.

The opportunity to size up Mr. Big is offered, to be sure. Some area delegates returned with the feeling that while Walter Mondale impresses as a poised, clean-cut man to be respected, the party needs a spellbinder like Mario Cuomo. Two Hub columnists went to the extremes. One lauded Mondale as having usurped Reagan issues, the other chopped him up in little pieces with ridicule.

Nothing in the San Francisco tribal war dance changed the essentials of this 1984 campaign. The election will turn on the ability of Ronald Reagan to explain away a federal deficit pushing toward $200 billion, one which threatens an unprecedented prosperity benefiting the great majority of Americans. Democrats are assuming the strange role for them of debt-reducing conservatives.

Democrats will also hammer away at the rich versus poor aspect of the Reagan tax program and his shift of responsibility for social programs to the states. But the main thrust of Reaganomics is what the country voted for in 1980 and so long as the economy keep humming, Mondale, a Carter administration carryover, has a tough job in the last lap trying to overcome the incumbent.

On party conventions, it has been apparent for the past quarter century that a direct, one-day national primary would be an excellent method. It could do away with the long, boring campaigns, state by state, and possibly reduce the spending. No amount of sentiment for change exists within the major parties. Why do so, indeed, when the quadrennial galas are such fun? Impetus for change has to come from a coalition of such good government groups as Common Cause, rather than the partisan entities.

There will be more conventions, so Boston should get in line. Part of a one-party state, it has the credentials. Enlarged Hynes Auditorum will be a proper setting. So, why not Beantown for the Democrats?

Will Shamie get serious?

By Loring Swaim

Authoritative sources say that Ray Shamie is lying in wait for Elliot Richardson with a secret strategy he intends to implement closer to the September primary.

Shamie, successful high tech entrepreneur with a conservative inclination who made millions in Massachusetts, is being contested for the Republican senatorial nomination by Richardson, successful all-purpose government administrator of the liberal persuasion who made history in Washington.

In his improbable Davis Vs. Goliath campaign two years ago against the impregnable Ted Kennedy, Shamie resorted to all kinds of gimmicks and contrived wiles to get attention. He hired planes to fly banners over Boston; he posted a $10,000 reward for whomever could induce Kennedy to debate him.

Shamie spent $1.4 million of his own money jousting with Kennedy. He did so because he deeply believed in the American system which allowed the son of immigrants to make it in the private sector - not unlike Geraldine Ferraro/Zaccaro in the public sector.

Shamie was most compelling when he described his personal experience and the beliefs he has has fine-tuned about what makes America tick.

Having failed with Kennedy, he figured he could succeed against Paul Tsongas - until Tsongas withdrew. That left Shamie with no opponent - 'til a horde of Democrats came out of the woodwork, as well as Richardson.

To dispose of this "carpetbagger", Shamie has recycled his gimmicks - needling Richardson about conflicting statements in different jobs and circumstances; accusing him of opportunism; making off-beat fun in press releases- "Back by popular Demand! Another romp on the lighter side of politics by the Shamie commandos!", etc.

Richardson has responded by ignoring the peppering, being "senatorial" and taking issue with misleading exaggerations.

The Shamie tactic has tended to trivialize his message and brand him as frivolous.

According to sources, Shamie, mindful of this, intends to get serious in September and switch to the basic themes that turn him on - the glory of the free entreprise system, the opportunity it gives everyone to advance, etc., etc.

Staffers won't confirm this strategy, but sources believe Shamie is pinning his hopes this time on returning to his strongest asset, articulating the philosophy that made him successful.

Republicans are against the wall

By Mary McGrory

"Let a woman in your life,
"And your security is through."

The lament of Henry Higgins in "My Fair Lady" is fast becoming the theme song of the Republican men who are trying to re-elect Ronald Reagan. Their efforts to cope with history's first female running mate have produced stumbles and bumbles that suggest something like panic.

Since July 13, they have been traversing a mine field. At every other step, there is an explosion. One word against Geraldine Ferraro and the women of the country storm forward to upbraid them.

As one of them said, "We've somehow got to convince people that Reagan is running against Walter Mondale, not Geraldine Ferraro."

The architects of the campaign hold briefings and announce they've got it: They are going to be perfect gentlemen. But the effrontery of it all gets to them, and they blurt out things they have vowed not to say. She has kicked over their strategy for running against Jimmy Carter and the past. She is the trendiest figure on the scene.

The stately scenario that had Reagan cruising through a grateful country while George Bush did the heavy lifting of partisan assault has been scrapped.

The trouble, they are glumly realizing, is not just that she is a woman; she is Geraldine Ferraro. She is not the comfortable, coy type they are used to — the kind who talked about "gals" and knew their place. She is a scrappy, lippy, sharply turned out blonde who is willing to mix it up with all comers, including the leader of the Western world.

"We don't want to make her an issue," said Reagan campaign political director Edward Rollins. "The more we talk about her, the more sympathy she gets — and credibility."

Just hours before, Rollins had committed the worst misspeak of the current crop. He said that Ferraro could "turn into the biggest political bust of recent years." He was not intending a crass sexist slur. He was simply voicing the GOP prayer that Ms. Ferraro will be a female Gary Hart: show a spectacular early foot and fade in the stretch. As Rollins heard himself saying the words, he instantly took them back and apologized for "a Freudian slip" — which, when you think about it, didn't help much, either.

"The question isn't gender — it's experience and background. For instance, she has no acting experience and she's never been governor of California."

> The trouble, they are glumly realizing, is not just that she is a woman; she is Geraldine Ferraro ... She is a scrappy, lippy, sharply turned out blonde who is willing to mix it up with all comers, including the leader of the Western world.

Rollins' chief, the president, had not set a good example for the troops. The day after the choice was announced, which happened to be Friday the 13th, while speaking to a group of Republican women, he referred to "tokenism."

The Republican women, those steady, worshipful "gals" on whom he could always depend, rounded on him. They resented the suggestion Ferraro was not qualified. They said so to the press in the White House dining room. They were, to the astonishment and horror of Republican men, exulting in the elevation of a sister.

The president subsequently insisted that he was thinking of Margaret Thatcher, not Geraldine Ferraro. The speech had been written far in advance of Ferraro's ungluing advent to the ticket.

Vice President George Bush is also rattled. He faces the prospect of standing across a stage from her in the debates she is pressing for. He will try the "there, there, little lady, you haven't seen the cables" approach at his peril. The night school law graduate does not take kindly to condescension.

The president said at his press conference that he had no advice for his running mate for that particular crisis. It's up to the "strategists."

Bush in Texas, the testing ground for male chauvinism, was reduced to drumming up tears for Democratic Sen. Lloyd Bentsen, an also-ran in the vice presidential talent show. It was "a shame" that Bentsen didn't make it, Bush said. It was a call to male solidarity with considerable backfire potential.

So far, the worst thing they have thought up to say about Ferraro is that she is a liberal, the "sixth or seventh most liberal member of the House."

Reagan made "liberal" an expletive, and Democrats have retreated to the less toxic "progressive." Not Geraldine Ferraro.

"If they're going to call me a liberal for saving Social Security for the elderly of this country, I'm delighted," she retorted.

The president had rehearsed a good press conference answer for her earlier thrust at his "Christianity" — she said his policies do not bespeak a good Christian. He would turn the other cheek, he said, in one of the few moments when he did not seem off stride.

But he was stung, you could see, and he began bragging about increasing the social programs he usually brags about having out back.

Two administration women have shown the men a better way. Health and Human Services Secretary Margaret Heckler said she was "thrilled" by the Ferraro selection, and U.N. Ambassador Jeane Kirkpatrick pronounced herself "delighted."

It was lost on the desperate men around the president.

As Henry Higgins said:
"Let a woman in your life,
"And you are up against the wall."

Clearing up misconceptions

I wish to thank Suzanne Dulude for her informative, July 18th article entitled "Divorce without discord." There are, however, a few errors and inadvertant misconceptions that should be corrected and clarified.

For one, I do not have a masters degree in family policy. I do have a doctorate from Harvard University in social policy. Second, the quotation referring to our having a "wide knowledge base" in divorce law and precedents does not come from being trained as mediators. For example, my knowledge base in family law is grounded in over nine years of research in the area and the writing of two scholarly books on the subject ("Divorce Reform: Changing Legal and Social Perspectives 1980, a featured selection of the Lawyers' Litery Club, and "Separated and Divorced Women 1982).

It does not surprise me that the Honorable Haskell Freedman would express concern about the ability of mediators to write an agreement that makes "sense taxwise" or otherwise, for that matter. If a mediator's knowledge base is a product of one training course in mediation, the clients are bound to have an unskilled guide. Barbara White and I have been consistent in our advocacy for mediators who are knowledgeable and schooled in the areas of law, taxes and divorce, as well as in interpersonal communication skills.

Lastly, when Mediation Associates of Newton Centre was founded in 1981, it was our deliberate intent not to taint mediation by an intermingling of different services and disciplines. Mediation is not therapy and it is not law. We believe, as does the American Arbitration Association, that mediation is a distinct and distinctive service. "To mesh services" under one umbrella is to cloud the process and to risk losing quality control over the product.

Don't blame the firefighters

As a resident of Newton, the issue of whether or not there are fireworks in the city is not a major concern of mine. But as a firefighter in this city I am concerned with a statement made, involving the fireworks, by one of the alderman who was quoted saying, "Maybe we'll think the same thing when his budget matters come before us." The decision made by the Chief of the Fire Department was made in regards to public safety for the people of the Nonantum community. No matter how unpopular it may seem at the time, it should have no effect on the small operating budget of the Fire Department.

I would hope the Board of Alderman recognize this fact, and not negotiate the Fire Department budget with other issues, thereby affecting the future and safety of the Firefighters and the residents of this city.

An explosive reaction to ban

Nonantum may be looked down on by certain elements and sections of Newton. However, to mine and me it is as good and probably better than some.

For the Mayor and the Fire Chief to deny, without proper written cause, the half century tradition of fireworks display is an affrontry to the people and community.

The fiesta is a pleasurable, anticipated outing for many people. Many outsiders also benefit from this gala. And once per year, on Memorial Day, our Mayor (not mine) prances through Nonantum in the Memorial Day Parade. Let's take them both to court. Let's remember when you vote.

Matthews' letter gets flack

I was deeply disappointed, but not totally surprised, that a group of men and women, sitting as a ward committee in one of the most affluent villages of Newton, representing one of the most affluent cities in the Commonwealth of Massachusetts, if not the entire country, so far removed - if not geographically - financially, from the problems of this area of our commonwealth, would have the lack of sensitivity and knowledge to criticize the proposed rehabilitation of Columbia Point. Obviously, the committee knows little about the area and the causal factors impacting on the situation, except by "clippings" from newspapers.

This was one of the most racist and socially irresponsible letters, and I do not use the words lightly, I have ever read - as usual, "making the victim the villian."

Mr. Matthews and his committee demonstrate graphically the lack of awareness that is so prevalently articulated as it concerns minorities and the disenfranchised of America, even in "the cradle of liberty." The degradation of a people's personhood contrives to produce some of the conditions described. I do not condone violence or actions on the part of "some" residents which destroy. However, they did not build Columbia Point, rather Columbia Point was build to contain them.

Historically, the residents of Columbia Point are no more to blame for the failure of this housing that the Ward 5 Republican Committee. The truth of the matter is that the system that brought Columbia Point into being failed. What position did the Ward 5 Republican Committee take when the residents of Columbia Point were fighting for needed repairs for decent sanitary condidions and services which you take for granted? The Boston Housing Authority went into receivership because they failed to deliver proper services to the people. This is better known as "poor management."

In my estimation, the committee does not understand the dynamics of what is happening in the urban community. The revitalization of the area will indeed benefit those who are now residents. However, those who will be the most benefited are those who have grown weary of the commute from the suburbs to the city and want to be nearer their place of employment. This will be one more instance of "regentrification."

When the author and the committee speak of dispersal and discipline, it smacks of "out of sight, out of mind" and of elitism. To what environ should they be dispersed? Newton? And who should we discipline? Should we discipline only the residents of Columbia Point, leaving the management alone to do further mischief? Yes, there should be rules by which the management manages and by which the managment is held responsible as well as the residents.

Those who try to defend the manner in which the proposition of the Ward 5 Republican Committee was presented are hardpressed. I have no objections to the committee raising the issue as that is their prerogative, but I do take offense at the callous, demeaning lumping together of the residents of an area. I do believe that if you raise the issue of rehabilitation at Columbia Point, it is incumbent upon you to suggest "responsible" solutions. In my opinion "dispersal and discipline" as stated is not a responsible solution for all concerned in this issue.

Publicity hoped to raise consciousness

The recent news item in the papers about truck safety carries an important message and hopefully will raise the consciousness of the public and our justice system not only to truck safety and proper training of drivers, but also to instituting proper laws to apply when a person is seriously injured due to the carelessness of a driver.

My daughter was struck by a truck while riding her bicycle on Storrow Drive across from the MDC skating rink and the ballpark near Watertown. This man broke three laws. He was cited for (1) not slowing down or sounding his horn on approaching a bicyclist and (2) unlawfully being on a restricted road. This road is clearly marked that trucks are excluded and that it is for pleasure vehicles only. Later a witness testified in a deposition that the truck speed was 50 miles per hour in a 40-mile zone. This witness is a hydraulic truck mechanic. It is possible, too, that the driver of the truck was drinking. Two months after running Nancy down, he was arrested for drunk driving and the charges were dropped because he refused to take a breathalizer test. For refusing the breathalizer test, his license was suspended for 90 days. I was told there is no law in the commonwealth against injuring people with a motor vehicle.

For Item (2) above, the driver pleaded "responsible" and was fined $25. The Item (1) charge was dropped for unknown reasons although he testified that he was not on the road for company business in which case permission would have been obtained for the truck to enter this road. He was never charged for speeding although there is a witness statement. I spoke with an investigator iin the district attorney's office and asked him why a more serious charge was not made. The investigator said "the laws he broke were not that serious."

The truck speed when he struck Nancy was 50 miles an hour. Her shorts hooked onto the front bumper of the truck which then dragged her with her head bouncing on the pavement. She dropped off and fell between the two front wheels, was fortunately cleared by the bottom of the truck which skidded past her after impact at which time he put on his brakes. Her injuries were a broken clavicle, bruises, cuts, abrasions all over her body, four head injuries with her scalp ripped open and a facial hematoma. She was in the intensive care unit unconscious for five days with serious brain edema - fluid and swelling of the brain.

Where has Mayor Mann gone?

What has happened to Ted Mann? The controversy over the use of fireworks for the Madonna Festival was purely a power play.

I remember when Ted first ran for office he marched in many of the parades. In fact at the corner of Hawthorne and Clinton Streets he and I did a quick tarantella. At the 10 o'clock Benediction he and his wife Florence joined us at Our Lady's Church, and in his chopped up Italian the message was clear - Brotherhood.

As with all politicians, this was when the vote was needed.

When you and Reilly said no to the fireworks you said no to a great man, Anthony Gentile. This man at his own expense has given pleasure to many children with fireworks and refreshments. As you already know, he is licensed and carries heavy insurance for his works. This good man is also actively involved in sports for neighborhood children.

As a person, I like you. At Jennie De Vita's invite I joined you at J.B. Steak House, which was great. So what's happened to you? Boy, you sure ticked me off this time.

Next year is the 50th year of the festival. I am extending an invitation to you and your wife to be my guest at 12 Clinton St. and see first-hand what this is all about. They've dimmed the Christmas candles at the City Hall windows (another power play) but they will never dim the candles on this great festival.

All I can say for Chief Reilly is that he obeys orders well.

As for Anthony Pelligrim, keep up the work once done by the good Republican Newton Mayor Childs.

And as for Mayor Ted Mann, it must be a good feeling to run unopposed each election; but then so does Joe DeNucci. Watch out!

City seeks study of Needham St.

By Edward Cafasso
Staff Writer

NEWTON — City planners have revived a project designed to improve the appearance of the Needham Street Corridor and increase tax revenues generated by businesses along the thriving, but chaotic Upper Falls commercial strip.

According to Lewis Branzburg, an economic development planner, the city is currently searching for a firm to conduct a thorough land use study of the Needham Street area as part of an effort to develop a comprehensive plan guiding commercial development there.

A controversial zoning proposal for the area put forth late last year by the city's former economic development director, Donald Silverson, was withdrawn after it was learned most of the businesses there would have been rendered "non-conforming" uses by the plan.

The general goals of the current proposal are "to improve the efficiency of land use in the Needham Street Corridor, to maximize property tax revenue and job creation, and to minimize blight, congestion and public safety hazards with due sensitivity to the concerns and needs of the residential community," according to Branzburg.

The three-quarter mile corridor, which serves to connects Route 9 and Route 128 at the city's border with Needham, contains approximately 110 acres of land within city limits. Several of the city's largest business enterprises, including the St. Regis plant, Honeywell and New England Concrete and Pipe, are located along the street once known as "the Miracle Mile."

The study, which Branzburg hopes will be completed by late October, will represent the first major step toward solving the confusion caused in the area by almost unharnessed development during the last several years.

Many commercial establishments have replaced manufacturing concerns, but because adequate restrictions do not exist, development there has resulted in "inadequate setbacks and conflicting land uses," he said.

At the same time, retail development and increased creation of curb cuts has caused overcrowding on the street, a situation exacerbated by inadequate secondary roads, Branzburg said, adding that "space for (business) expansion is at a premium due to topographic boundaries, abutting residential neighborhoods and inefficient use of space within the corridor."

"Several groups have expressed concerns with regard to the corridor. Local residents are upset about pedestrian hazards and poor automobile access. The business community is concerned that traffic circulation and parking problems will limit growth and that the area's poor visual image is limiting the quality of development to below what the market would otherwise support," he said.

"In addition to concerns for public safety and business prosperity, the city administration is concerned that inefficient land development and visual blight may further limit the area's potential to generate jobs and tax revenues, and may affect the overall attractiveness of the city to residents," Branzburg added.

The firm awarded the massive study will examine existing conditions along the street, including public opinion, marketing demands and fiscal impacts, as well as develop and recommend land use alternatives to ease the traffic problems and space shortages.

The budget for the study will be set at about $28,000, with one-quarter to be paid by the Newton Community Development Authority and the rest coming from the state's Department of Community Affairs.

Related to city efforts is a state plan to improve the manufacturing strip by refurbishing the roadway and traffic signals. Branzburg said the state will begin taking traffic counts in the area by September.

Needham Street traffic a problem, 1978 study says

By Edward Cafasso
Staff Writer

NEWTON — A majority of the businesses along Needham Street believe the city's major commercial-industrial area is a good place to do business, but also feel the traffic situation there is having a negative impact on their establishments, according to a 1978 study.

The study, conducted by the local firm, Harbridge House, showed 85 percent of the businesses along the "Miracle Mile" characterized their location as "good," while the same percentage believe traffic is "poor or very bad."

Needham Street firms also believe the chaotic traffic situation is having a detrimental impact on their business, with 57 percent reporting that belief and 30 percent saying they thought access along the roadway was a problem, the study said.

Business growth is limited because of a space shortage, according to the study, which found that 19 percent of Needham Street firms had plans, at that time, to relocate for expansion.

Substantial manufacturing activity took root in the area prior to World War I, but then declined until the construction of Route 128 as a major commercial highway after World War II.

This house pulls its electricity out of thin air.

This is Boston Edison's new IMPACT 2000 House—a living laboratory of energy innovation.

Here, photovoltaic solar panels may generate 40%-50% of the future homeowners' electricity needs, while solar water panels will provide 80% (based on a family of four) of the hot water needs.

A Sun Shower:
Water flows through a series of solar collectors, absorbing heat directly from the sun. It is then stored in hot water tanks, until it's time for a sun shower.

Solar Electricity:
Photovoltaic cells, made of crystal silicon, convert sunlight directly into electricity. This technology has already been used to power NASA satellites.

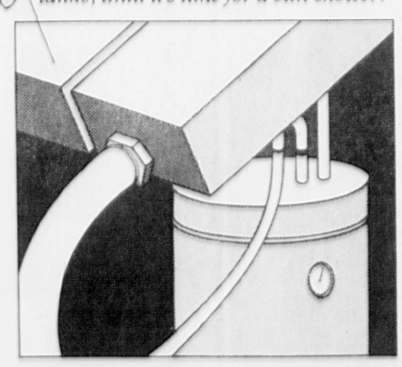

We've also incorporated a host of other energy technologies into the design of the House. Technologies that will help each of us save and produce more energy in the future.

That's why Boston Edison built the IMPACT 2000 House in the first place. We want to generate the information that will help us all lessen our dependence on foreign oil and use energy more wisely.

Information is power. And we want you to have all you need.

Newton North water damage being tallied

NEWTON — City officials are still assessing the severity of internal water damage that occured two weeks ago at Newton North High School.

A spokesman for the building department said City Building Commissioner James Cameron does not know when the final figures will be in. But Cameron said last week he was confident that the affected areas will be repaired by the start of school Sept. 5.

Cameron said the leakage, which occurred between last Friday and Sunday nights and damaged rooms on three levels of Barry House and Beals House, was caused by a hose in the art room that ruptured, developed a leak or was left on. The hose was connected to a shower area set up for asbestos removers now working in the building.

State statutes require that asbestos removal workers, besides wearing special, protective clothing, shower before they leave the area in which the work is being done.

"My own personal opinion is that it's contractor related," Cameron said. If that opinion holds true, the company, G.S. Maloney of Brookline, will be held liable for the damage. The building and law departments are still dealing with Maloney's insurance company to work out details.

The incident marks the second time in two years that North has suffered water damage related to asbestos removal. In the summer of '82, a similar water leakage caused $20,000 worth of damage to the dance studio. Floor tiles had to be replaced in the area in which temporary showers had been set up for the workers.

The water leak, which Cameron said was probably a slow one occurring over an extended period of time, mainly damaged ceilings and rugs in the floors below the art room. It reached as far down as the first-floor carpentry shop, where it dampened machines but apparently did not cause permanent damage, the commissioner reported.

The damage was discovered July 15 between 9:30 and 10 p.m. by an asbestos removal crew coming in to begin the week's work. According to Cameron, the affected section of the building probably had been empty since the work crews left the night of July 13.

Doll helps to make adoption easier to Mrs. Chandra. The next day when Rama, a native of India, and Barbara went to see her, the nun asked, "'Do you like her? Would you like to keep her?' That's just what my friend asked Alia about Diana that day ... I felt like I was living that moment all over again," Mrs. Chandra reflected.

The relatively quiet, yet bright, jean-clad Alia straps Diana and her rattle into the stroller she purchased with her own money, as her mother continues. "She's very open to the idea of adoption now ... When we're with a group, she often asks, 'Did you tell them I'm adopted?'"

There was never a point in Alia's life when she didn't know she was adopted. "I told her story to people while she was too young to understand and I keep telling it now," Mrs. Chandra said proudly.

Alia is a proud mother, too. She took Diana to school every day

> 'She's very open to the idea of adoption now ... When we're with a group she often asks "Did you tell them I'm adopted?"' and has acquired a small wardrobe for the "child," whose adoption papers show that her birthday is Oct. 1. Besides the light blue and yellow running suit that Diana came wearing, Alia has a "generic" dress from another doll and a night gown made by "the friend of a friend." Her sportswear collection is a tad more colorful — a red-and-white-checkered shirt with coordinating blue shorts and a lovely green-and-white-checkered top and pants, her attire for the day.
> Barbara Chandra

As she instinctively straightened Diana's hair, Alia explained that the two have exclusive, nightly tea parties that not even her trusted teddy bear is privy to.

Until the birth of Laura Chandra, who is now five, Alia was the 44-year-old Wisconsin native's only child. Mrs. Chandra, who taught elementary school in Newton and Needham for 17 years, once feared that Alia harbored some sort of resentment toward others, since "everyone else has their own, personal Mom." That, however, is not the case any more. "She is 'my special' because she's my first and she's adopted."

Much of the change in Alia's attitude toward herself and the idea of adoption can be attributed to the phenomena of the orphaned "Cabbage Patch" dolls, Mrs. Chandra explained. The idea of adoption in many Asian countries, for example, is not always accepted as graciously as it can be here, she said. Because many "Cabbage Patch" dolls are being shipped "overseas where the change needs to take place," Mrs. Chandra said she feels that there has begun "a big trend through this doll."

"For children coming up now, it (the acceptance of adoption) is going to be a piece of cake," she prophesied.

She remembered when she once heard someone refer to the "trauma of adoption ... I thought 'How can anything so positive be traumatic?'"

Special computers help visually impaired achieve

"The big problem is that most visually impaired kids (usually defined as those having 20/70 vision or less) are being left behind by their inability to participate in computer classes at school," said Dick Connors, director of community services for the Carroll Center. "There still are not many people who are aware of what's available for the visually impaired."

McNamara's classmates include 16 mainstreamed elementary, junior high and high school students from Massachusetts, Connecticut and New Hampshire, most of whom have had little or no previous computer experience. Over two-thirds of the students had the $100 course fee paid for by the Massachusetts Commission for the Blind, the Connecticut Board of Education and Services for the Blind or various Lions Clubs.

The Carroll Center is also running two credit courses in computers this summer for teachers of the visually impaired. Since January, the center has offered a course for adults that provides training in the use of computers in a variety of career fields.

The students in this summer's class are working on terminals adapted with braille, voice and large type output, depending on both their preference and degree of sight. The adaptative equipment costs anywhere from $150 for what Connors describes as a very practical, reliable voice-output, to $6,600 for a braille processor and $8,000 for a closed-circuit T.V.

It seems an astronomical sum, but "$8,000 can make a difference between a person's ability to deal with college and their non-ability to deal with it," Conners explained. "It gives a person who wouldn't otherwise have it access to ordinary, printed material."

Although she does not own her own closed-circuit system, McNamara is hoping the state Commission for the Blind will lend one to Bridgewater State College for her and other visually-impaired students to use.

One of the goals of the Carroll Center program is to introduce students, parents and teachers to the variety of adaptive equipment available for those with limited sight. The center devoted three recent issues of its quarterly publication "Aids and Appliances Review" to a detailed outline of the computer accessing equipment now available. And course organizers plan to send information on the equipment home to parents at the end of the two-week class.

At a table next to McNamara, 13-year-old Derek Jordan switches between a voice-output and a large type screen. He already knew the typewriter keyboard when he started the class and although he makes two copies of every program he does — one on the braille printer and one on the type printer — he does not need to work with a braille keyboard.

He listens intently to the computer commands through earphones and types in his instructions, waits a moment, then leaps out of his seat and races to the printer. Jordan then proudly presents his teacher, Barbara Fragopoulos, with the finished copy — a brief biography:

"My name is Derek. I am thirteen years old. I like to listen to records and tapes a lot. I live in Merrimac, Ma. I live on a farm. I have 2 cows, 7 sheep, some turkeys, and some chickens. I also have 2 dogs, 5 cats. I also have a minibike. I have a go-cart. I help carry wood for the winter. I also play ball!!"

Lynne Albright, an instructor for the Carroll Center class, is the coordinator for a New Hampshire state program for the visually handicapped. She has been working for about two years on computer accessing equipment and software for the sight impaired.

There is plenty of hardware manufactured, but much is out of the price range of the average family, Albright says. There is also a lot of software that cannot be modified for use with voice outputting equipment, either because it depends too much on graphics (visual displays) or because it is copyrighted, she noted.

Across the room from Jordan, Sonja Allen, a 10th grader at Brockton High School, is also working with a voice output. The choppy and often inaccurate pronounciation takes a little getting used to, she says. But if her school purchases the simple attachment, she will be able to learn on the computer along with the rest of her class.

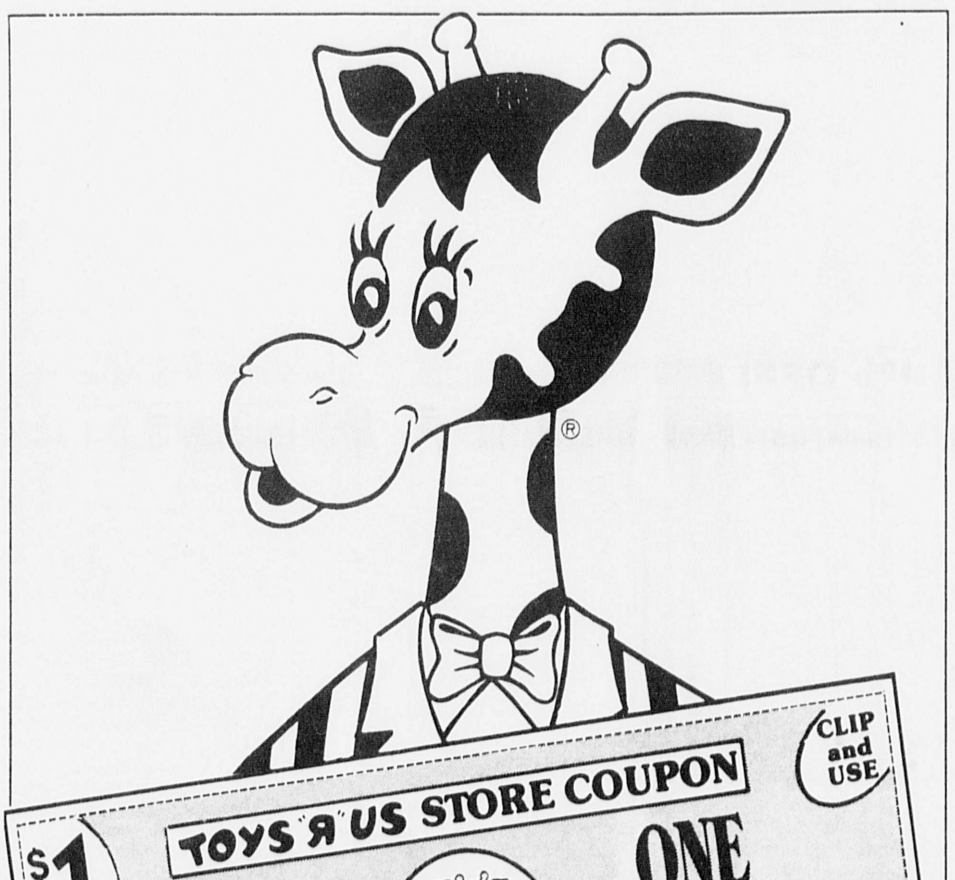

"I really didn't (learn anything about computers in school) because all I did was type letters," Allen explained. "But now, with using this, it's a lot better because I can be a lot more independent and I think I'll enjoy it a lot more."

High-speed chase on town line ends in 6 charges

DEDHAM — A 21-year-old Needham resident was arraigned in Dedham District Court yesterday morning on six charges stemming from a a high-speed chase which involved Newton, Needham and State Police cruisers.

The chase, which for 20 minutes weaved back and forth over the Newton and Needham town lines, ended when the suspect's pickup truck collided with two Needham cruisers. The suspect was pursued after reports of a gun being shown during a disturbance at a Newton restaurant Sunday evening.

According to Needham Police, Thomas J. Yoke of 78 Elder Road in Needham was arraigned on two counts of assault with a deadly weapon, two counts of willfull malicious injury to property, one count of disorderly person, one count of operating a motor vechicle so as to endanger public safety, and one count of refusing to stop for a police officer.

Yoke was taken into custody early Monday morning, according to a spokesman for Newton Police Chief William F. Quinn.

After yesterday morning's arraignment in Dedham District Court, Yoke was taken to Newton District Court for an arraignment on other charges according to Needham police.

After conferring with police in Newton yesterday, Transcript Newspapers reported that there was some "physical altercation" between Yoke and the woman involved in the parking lot of Callahan's Restaurant. Newton police reported today that this incident was based on the testimony of witnesses and not on police observance.

Though Newton Police report that Yoke smashed the driver's side window of the woman's car, she claimed in a call to the Transcript office this morning that her windshield was broken, not a passenger window.

Yoke's case is being continued in Dedham District Court on August 28.

According to Quinn's spokesman, Yoke's chase and capture stemmed from an incident which occurred shortly before 11 p.m., at Callahan's Restaurant, 100 Needham St., Newton.

According to police reports, the suspect and a female patron of the restaurant were involved.

Yoke reportedly approached the establishment some time after 10:30 p.m. by means of a side exit door not normally used as an entrance. Two witnesses allegedly saw the female patron woman exit the restaurant with Yoke.

An argument allegedly followed in Callahan's parking lot, after which Yoke left, driving a 1984 GMC pickup truck.

Witnesses alleged that Yoke returned shortly thereafter and broke a window of the woman's car, and then was involved in some kind of "physical altercation."

According to Newton Police, Yoke again left the Needham Street location only to return — this time, the witnesses said, bearing a firearm. Although the witnesses said the gun resembled a shotgun, the suspect later told Needham Police he wielded a 30.06-bore rifle, Quinn's spokesman said.

According to reports, the two witnesses were unsure whether Yoke actually threatened anyone with the firearm.

At this point, the two witnesses went back into the restaurant to call Newton Police. They also told patrons to get into another part of the building.

"He left on his own accord before any units responded," the spokesman said. "That commotion must have caused him to leave the area."

He was first spotted by a Newton cruiser at 10:50 p.m. heading east on Needham Street. Three Newton cruisers gave pursuit.

According to Needham Police, the suspect fled the scene toward Needham. He proceeded onto Route 128, headed back into Newton, and then doubled back into Needham. The chase finally ended on Kendrick Street in Needham when the truck collided with a pair of Needham Police cruisers.

Art Illman Photos

Deaf people can talk on the phone with a device resembling a typewriter with a screen.

'This is very rewarding work. It's a real interaction with people. I've relayed messages of 'I love you,' 'I hate you' — it's never boring.'

CONTACT-Boston volunteer T.C. Whitehouse

Contacting the deaf by phone

By Susan Schneck
In Focus Editor

T.C. Whitehouse's job requires him to say "I love you" to perfect strangers. Other days, he's asked to insult people he has never met. Whitehouse must also inform strangers about family births, deaths and engagement announcements as well as order flowers, pizza or concrete for them.

Whitehouse is a volunteer for CONTACT-Boston, a non-profit service in Newtonville which operates a telecommunications device (TDD) that transmits telephone messages for 2,000 deaf and hearing-impaired people throughout the Boston area. Calls are relayed free of charge unless they're long-distance.

Similar to language interpreters, Whitehouse and about 40 other volunteer operators send messages back and forth between two people, one or both of whom are deaf or hearing-impaired TDD owners.

"You get a real range of calls," says Whitehouse of Newton, who also publishes a newsletter with the Southern New England Methodist Conference. "As an operator here, you see a real slice of life. I trace lost airline baggage, arrange dates — "

A ringing telephone line interrupts the sentence. Assuming a businesslike posture, he quickly dons a headpiece, adjusts its receiver over his ear and secures the mouthpiece. With both hands free to type on his TDD — a piece of machinery which looks like a small typewriter attached to a screen and costs between $250 and $1,000 — Whitehouse clears his throat and answers the phone.

"Hello, this is CONTACT, may I help you?" he begins, hands poised in mid air over the keyboard. The silence at the other end of the phone indicates the caller is deaf so Whitehouse types the same opening question on his TDD. "We don't immediately know whether it's a hearing person wishing to call a deaf person or the other way around," he explains as his fingers lightly tap the keys.

The message is sent to the screen attached to the caller's home TDD. A flourescent response flashes across CONTACT's TDD screen, indicating who the caller wishes to "speak with." As the caller begins typing the nature of the forthcoming message, a dismayed expression clouds Whitehouse's usually smiling face.

"Oh no," he whispers to Carol Thomas of Needham who started Boston's branch of the international CONTACT organization three years ago. "This is that woman who can type like mad."

After typing 'S K' (which tells the caller to stop keying or typing), Whitehouse dials the call and asks to speak with the person identified by the caller. He is put on hold and relays that information.

"We try to let them (callers) know what's going on," explains Thomas, who has been serving as acting executive director until last week when Stanley Becker, a church pastor from Natick, became director. "When the phone is ringing, we type 'R' so they know what's going on. If someone laughs, we type, 'laugh,' or we'll type, 'He's thinking,' or we'll let them know when the caller is getting ready to end the conversation."

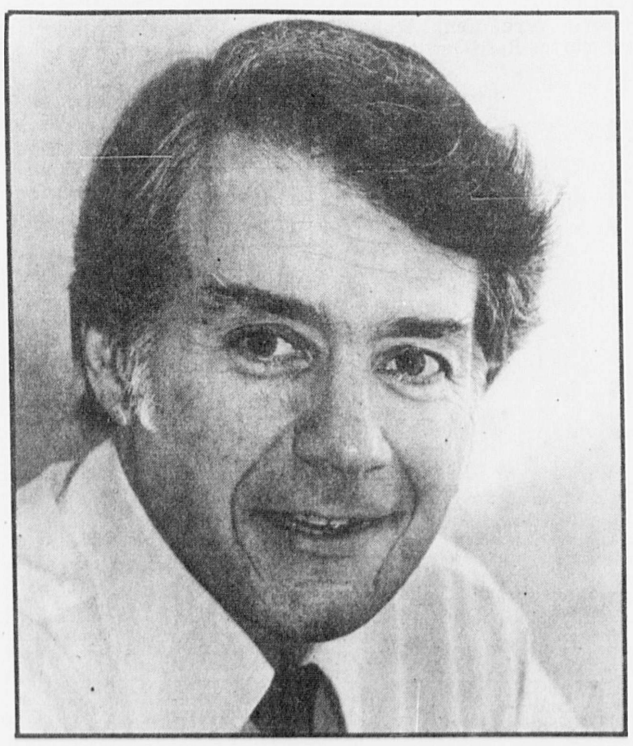

CONTACT organizations, which number 212 worldwide, assist people through the telephone. In addition to the 332-9416 TDD number, the Newtonville office operates a 24-hour hotline (244-4350) for people feeling lonely or depressed.

Last year, the hotline answered 10,000 phone calls and the TDD service handled 9,738. Since TDDs are not well-known outside deaf circles, operators often find themselves educating the hearing persons they call. But that will probably change. A deaf rights bill, passed in December of 1983, will enable hearing-impaired people to receive subsidies for TTDs beginning Jan. 1, 1985.

"At that time, we hope to have our deaf relay service working 14 hours a day," Director Becker says. Now, TTD volunteers man the phones weekdays from 8:30 a.m. to noon, weekends and holidays from 11 a.m. to 3 p.m. and every night from 7 to 10 p.m. Day shifts last four hours, evening shifts are three hours and volunteers are always in demand.

"Some days and nights at the CONTACT office are booming while others are quiet," Thomas notes. "If there is a good, close-captioned TV movie on, we receive fewer calls,"

The next volunteer training sessions will be in Winchester on Oct. 11, 18 and 25 from 9:30 a.m. to 2 p.m. Potential relay operators may register by calling 244-4353. If the office is flooded with calls, summer training sessions will be scheduled. No requirements are necessary but keyboard familiarity is helpful.

CONTACT-Boston Executive Director Stanley Becker

"This is a very satisfying kind of work," Whitehouse says, relaxing back in his chair. "It's a real interaction with people. It's not just boring or the same thing — each call is different. And some are real challenges."

Whitehouse suddenly discovers he is no longer on hold. Sitting straight in his chair, he identifies himself as an operator for CONTACT. A three-way conversation regarding a future barbeque dinner begins.

The anonymous operator's brow furrows as he concentrates on translating the intonation of the speaking party's message into words.

"We're very concerned we not only relay the information accurately, but also convey the feeling," Whitehouse says during a brief lull in the conversation. "If their tone is angry or shows any other emotion, we try to get that across."

While he chats, the deaf person is keying in a long message regarding the advantages of cooking chicken over hamburgers at the future cookout. Whitehouse misses it. Unfazed, he reads a printout which records all typed words to ensure accuracy.

'We are always in need of volunteers...I hope to be able to increase our deaf relay service to 14 hours a day, open a latch key program for children with working parents, start a phone service for shut-ins and elderly people...'

CONTACT-Boston Director Stanley Becker

"We have the printer to make sure of telephone numbers and other information but we rip it up after each conversation," Thomas emphasizes. "The success of this service is largely based on confidentiality. We get calls to lovers, or by teenagers who don't want their mothers making the calls for them, or from people making inquiries into their IRS statements or other private business — they don't want to anyone else to know these things."

Both Whitehouse and Thomas did acknowledge, however, that it sometimes requires great self-control to refrain from interjecting opinions — especially during ridiculous arguments.

"Sometimes, we're tempted to make contact, but that's not what we're here for," Whitehouse says as his conversation nears its close. A final flourescent message from the deaf caller lights up his screen: "Thank you very much...You've been most helpful...Have a nice day."

"It's better that we don't (interject) and preserve anonymity and confidentiality," Thomas stresses, smiling at the closing remarks on the TDD. "Besides, it's nice, sometimes, to have an argument you can honestly stay out of.

"Just like phone lines are invisible for hearing people, we are anonymous for our callers."

Computers keep kids in touch

TERRYTOWN, La. (UPI) — A 17-year-old boy whose girlfriend is deaf hooked up a computer from his house to hers so they can spend time in the evenings talking to each other, like any other teenage couple.

Jorge Velarde Jr., a senior at West Jefferson High School, types his messages onto a computer keyboard and whisks them to the home of Beth Milian, 16, where she reads them on a television screen. She then messages back.

Velarde, who has been programming computers since junior high school, said the computer link is cheaper than special telephones for the deaf.

"It was somewhere around $160 for each setup, which is very inexpensive compared to somewhere around $250 for the commercial system," he said.

At each house, Velarde hooked up a small television set to a personal computer. He connected the computers through the telephone line.

Because Miss Milian's mother is also deaf, Velarde rigged flashing lights to let them know when the "phone" is ringing. He also set up a computer link with Miss Milian's grandfather so the familiy can keep in touch.

Velarde received a computer for Christmas two years ago and routinely keeps track of household accounts and taxes. He can even use the computer for school work, he said.

Antonelli to seek re-election

Rocco J. Antonelli

Rocco J. Antonelli, C.P.A. of Winchester formally announced his candidacy for re-election as Middlesex County treasurer to fill the vacancy caused by his resignation in December of 1983 after serving for five years as county treasurer and chairman of the Middlesex County Retirement System.

Mann appointed to subcommittee

Mayor Hernan Padilla, president of the United States Conference of Mayors, has announced the appointment of Mayor Theodore D. Mann of Newton, as chairman of the subcommittee on health of the conference.

Mann, a long-time participant in Conference of Mayors activities, is currently president of the Massachusetts Mayor's Association and chairman of the Middlesex County Advisory Board.

Mann endorses anti-litter campaign

Mayor Theodore D. Mann has strongly endorsed the statewide anti-litter campaign recently announced by Massachusetts Department of Public Works Commissioner Robert T. Tierney.

Mann said that litter is "not only visually offensive, it clogs drainage systems, can cause health hazards and the clean-up of it takes money which can be better used for repairing roads, providing recreational facilities or other public services."

Mann stated that he would not want to spoil the city's beauty and reputation by having litter become widespread. "Therefore, I strongly endorse the state's anti-litter program and will cooperate with it in every way." To this end, Mann said he has asked Chief Quinn to request his officers be particularly alert for litterers and illegal dumping this summer. The mayor noted state law provides littering fines of $200 to $1,000 and possible loss of drivers'license and registration.

Denucci fights for Medex subscribers

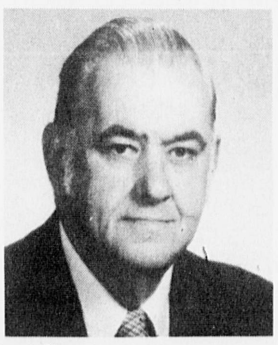

No sooner had one bill protecting elderly from unreasonable Medex rate hikes been signed into law, then another to ban "balanced billing" of elderly Medex subscribers was filed by Rep. A. Joseph DeNucci - D. Newton/Waltham - House Chairman of the Committee on Human Services and Elderly Affairs.

"Taken together," DeNucci stated, "these two bills will protect our elderly citizens from excessive physicians and medical insurance charges. Many elderly citizens, living on fixed incomes, fear that spiralling Medex increases and secondary billing will force them to forego needed medical care. Other seniors who are forced to pay more for health coverage will end up cutting back on essentials such as food and heat in order to make up the difference."

The Medex bill signed into law by the govenor will shield the elderly from future rate increases. It was drafted by the Massachusetts Legislative Council of Older American because seniors were hit with more than 44 percent in increases in 1982 and 1983. This year Blue Cross/Blue Shield filed a 24.4 percent rate increase request with the Insurance Commissioner.

DeNucci stated, "The focus of this new law is to provide the Insurance Commissioner with the power to take the effectiveness of cost containment programs into account when setting the new Medex rate. The Newton lawmaker also pointed out that in addition to requiring cost control assessment in rendering rate decisions, the new law guarantees seniors an annual enrollment period in the Medex plan and provides incentives for seniors to enroll in the plan.

Day care registration for fall

The Newton Community Service Centers, Inc., has announced that registrations are now being taken for its Day Care programs serving children three months old to elementary school age, Monday through Friday during the hours of 9 a.m. to 4:30 p.m. throughout the summer months.

According to the center, infants are cared for in a newly renovated area. A maximum of seven children, starting at three months, are grouped in the spacious area with a separate sleeping room. Each child has a primary teacher who is responsible for appropriate communication with the parents and documentation of individual progress. Special attention is paid to differing developmental needs. Pre-schoolers move freely to work and play centers. Learning and creative activities are incorporated in free time as well as in structured times for small groups of children.

According to Susan Hooper, pre-school program coordinator, a nutritious hot lunch and two daily snacks are served to preschoolers and kindergarten children in the school age program. Children in both programs are enrolled on a full tuition or sliding fee scale basis for income eligible families.

Young woman needs a home

Lori is in need of a home. A 17-year-old senior in high school, Lori needs to relocate well before the beginning of the next school year. She is temporarily living with an extended family member because neither of Lori's parents can provide her with an appropriate home environment.

Lori is friendly and enthusiastic. She has made some friends in the area after having moved from her father's home earlier this year. Lori received good grades at Newton North High School. She has some limitation in the area of reading and comprehension. She is responsible and industrious.

Able to start a bank account from babysitting earnings, Lori has a temporary summer job as a camp counselor. Lori enjoys swimming, going to movies and caring for young children. She is content to spend time by herself.

Lori states that she is looking for an understanding family who is willing to listen and treat her respectfully. Lori goes on to say that she is allergic to most cats and dogs.

The Department of Social Services is seeking a home that will help Lori into independent living. We offer a monthly stipend, training and on-going support — as well as medical coverage.

Legion team closes with victory

NEWTON — Newton Post 440 got a three-run triple from Matt Noone, and four strong innings, as Post 440 ended its season with a 7-3 victory over Arlington. The team ends the season with a 15-12 record.

Arlington had climbed back to a one-run deficit with the score 4-3 in the top of the third, but Newton got three in the bottom of the frame to put the game away.

Mike Solomon led off and was hit by a pitch, Jim Proia reached on an error, and Alex DeNucci walked to load the bases. Noone than followed with a long triple to center which cleared the bases and gave the winners a 7-4 lead. Noone retired the Arlington side in order in the top of the fourth, and the game was called because of darkness following the home side of the inning.

Arlington had taken a 1-0 lead in the first on a walk, a single, and a wild pitch by Noone, but a big four-run second inning by Post 440 gave the winners the lead for good.

Nick Gingola smacked a line drive single to left to start the frame, and Jim Proia followed with another safety to left. Matt Noone then beat out an infield hit to load the bases. Chris Bercury singled up the middle to score one, aand Bob Connerney bounced out to second base to score the second.

Joe Noone drew a walk to load the bases agains, and Joe King unloaded a long single to center to drive in the final two runs. With that, Newton led 4-1.

In the top of the third, Arlington got another pair of runs. Brandon Diffley reached on an error, Jack Carroll drew a walk, and both moved up on a wild pitch. Sean McCarthy then doubled to rescue both runners.

The game was decided however, with Matt Noone's bases-clearing three-bagger in the home half of the frame.

Three Newton players have been selected to the Middlesex Legion All-Star team, for a game that will be played Sunday at 7:30 in Natick.

Bob Connerney, an infielder who also took the mound regularly, ended the season at .436, and did whatever was asked by the team. Joe King, the glue that held the infield together this season also was honored. He too played a duel role, hurling some key innings for Post 440 and ending with a batting mark of .411.

Finally, Joe Noone, one of the best outfielders in the league, was named to the team in recognition of .343 average, which helped him to the team lead in RBIs. All three of these players will take part in the game on Sunday.

The summary:

NEWTON(7)-Bercury 3-2; Casey 1-0; Connerney 2-1; J. Noone 1-0; King 2-1; C. Proia 2-0; Gingola 1-1; Solomon 0-0; J. Proia 2-1; DeNucci 1-0; M. Noone 2-2. Tot. 17-7.

Mosca clinches National flag

NEWTON — For the second straight year and third of the last four, the Mosca Club is the National League regular season champion. Mosca earned that honor with a 15-1 drubbing of Upper Falls on Monday at Albemarle.

The story for the winners was 17-year-old righthander Ray Gladu, who hurled a four-hitter and was in control all the way. He struck out 11 and issued three free passes in the contest.

It wasn't until the fourth that Mosca really it put it out of sight with three runs to make it 9-0. Pillan Thirumalaisamy began it with a walk and Matt Spengler singled him to third. After Steve Stoller walked, Mark Paglia banged a double for two of his five RBIs on the evening. Evan Kushner accounted for run number three with another two-bagger.

Just to make sure, Mosca poured across six more in the fifth, with Paglia and Kushner again doubling. A walk to John Toyias, followed by singles by Dan Pill and John Fletcher loaded the sacks for Thirumalaisamy, who ripped a sharp single for two runs.

Another pair of bases on balls reloaded them for Paglia, and two more markers came home on his second two-bagger. When Kushner also drove in two with a double, the game was over.

Mosca finished up with a 16-4-1 final record and will play the winner of tonight's Knights of Columbus-Auburndale Sports Shop game in a best-of-three series, beginning on Wednesday (Lincoln Park, 6 p.m.).

Mosca has won the playoffs three of the last four years.

The Boys' Club grabbed a 5-1 lead after two innings and held on to topple St. Bernard's, 7-4, at Newton North's Ferguson Field.

Chris Coen, who capped the scoring in the three-run first with a basehit scoring Mike Ryan, led the way for the winners with three hits in three trips.

The Boys' Club jumped out fast with three runs in the first. Bob Connerney started it with a single and Chris Pachus followed with a walk. Joe King forced Pachus, but Mike Walsh rapped a single to plate Connerney.

After Ryan hit into a fielder's choice, Walsh scored on a wild pitch and Coen lined his hit for the third run.

The second saw more of the same as the winners continued to tee off on starter Dave Boule. Mitch Nash led off with a single, Connerney walked, and Pachus slashed a double that chased both runners home and ended Boule's mound work for the evening.

St. Bernard's cut the margin to one with three runs in the fifth. Steve Chapman roped a double and two walks loaded them up for Ed Natale. His two-run single made it 5-3, and Boule lofted a sacrifice fly to close the gap.

That only lasted until the sixth, when the Boys' Club added a pair of insurance runs to put it away. Singles by Nash and Fritz Phillips, following Coen's double, accounted for one run and Pachus drove in the other with a single.

Four runs in the last two innings enabled Our Lady's to tie the Auburndale Warriors, 4-4 at Auburndale. Auburndale now has to face the Knights of Columbus tonight at Lincoln Park at 6, with the winner gaining the fourth and final playoff spot.

The tying run came in the sixth; after a walk, two passed balls and a wild pitch enabled the key run to score.

That run was set up by three in the fifth, aided by a trio of errors.

Auburndale opened the scoring in the second when Andy Madden doubled in Tom Albright, who had singled.

They added three in the third. Tom Dalicandro ripped a two-bagger. A passed ball moved him to third and he trotted home on Paul Howley's sacrifice fly. Two walks, followed by singles by Dan Deverix and Paul Peruzzi, accounted for the other two.

The game was called in the sixth because of darkness.

Tonight, the regular season finishes up as St. Bernard's takes on the Boys' Club at Albemarle at 6:15 and the Knights of Columbus face Auburndale Sports Lincoln Park at 6.

Wednesday, the playoffs open up. In one of the best-of-three series, league champ Mosca will play either K. of C. or Auburndale Sports at Lincoln (6 p.m.), while the Boys' Club plays St. Bernard's at West Newton Common.

Glenn Legault's sacrifice fly in the third inning plated the only run of the game, as St. Bernard's edged Mosca Club, 1-0.

Mark Chalflin of St. Bernard's and hard-luck loser Dan Pill both tossed two-hitters in the pitchers' duel.

The single tally in the third inning was mostly the result of a brief bout with wildness by Pill. The righty gave three consecutive passes, and Legault followed with a fly to left which scored Steven Chapman.

For Chalflin, doubles by Marco Paglia in the first and Mike Pappas in the second were the only threats to end his shutout.

Legault notched a single in the fifth for the winners, and Dave Boule smacked a triple in the top of the sixth. Following the three-bagger, Kevin Houlihan came in with no outs to retire the side.

In a makeup game, the Knights of Columbus tied Auburndale Sports on a Chris Noble single in the bottom of the seventh. Greg Larson pitched extremely well, striking out 15, but couldn't earn the victory.

The Knights got the tying run when Jim Kalanvokis doubled, and Noble rescued him with a rip to left. The team then proceeded to load the bases with one out, but Dino Leone pitched out of the jam to save the tie.

Shortstop Tom Dalicandro doubled in two runs in the fourth inning and pitcher Mark Buckley managed to hold down a late Upper Falls rally as the Auburndale Sports Shop took a 7-6 decision in a National League game at Auburndale on Wednesday.

The winners were clinging to a 5-4 lead going into the fourth before they struck for what proved to be a pair of much-needed insurance runs.

Walks to Tom Albright and Buckley proved to be Upper Falls' undoing, as Dalicandro made losing pitcher Chris Pappas pay for his mistakes when he ripped a two-bagger to score both runners.

Upper Falls was able to make a last run at the lead, but fell one run short. John Sudkin started the fifth by reaching on an error. Pappas doubled him home, and Ed Murray followed with a run-scoring single, but that would be it for Upper Falls.

Auburndale took the lead early in the game with two in the first and three in the second. In the opening frame, Dalicandro singled, Mike Ryan tripled him in and Paul Howley rapped a single to plate Ryan.

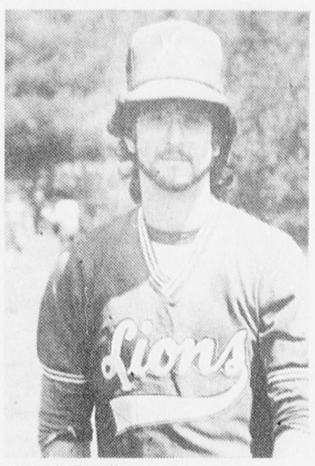

The victors scored a single run in the first, four in the second, and one tally each in the third and fourth innings, while the Boys' Club managed only a single tally in the bottom of the fifth.

Chris Noble's run-scoring single lifted the Knights of Columbus over the Auburndale Warriors, 6-5 at Auburndale. The winners scored five runs in the top of the fourth and last inning to take it.

Joe King threw a two-hitter, and Colin Ryan plated three runners, to lead Boy's Club to an 11-2 victory over the Knights of Columbus.

The winners got all they would need in the first, with three runs. Bob Connerney reached on an error, and Chris Pachus blasted a four-bagger over the left field fence for two runs. Jimmy Proia squeezed a walk between singles by King and Mike Walsh, and Ryan lofted a sacrifice fly to left to score the third run.

In another game, Glen Rosengard and Jeff Sherman combined for a one-hitter, and St. Bernard's notched five in the first inning, to rout Upper Falls, 12-1.

Mark Paglia

The losers notched their only hit, a Tommy Rogers double, in the fourth inning, and he broke the shutout after three consecutive free passes by Rosengard. Sherman relieved the tiring starter in the fifth inning, and continued the no-hit pitching.

In another makeup game, it was the battle of two sluggers, Dan Pill of the Mosca Club, and Paul Howley of Auburndale Sports. Both smacked two round-trippers in a game that ended tied at 11 at Newton North.

Auburndale got one run in the bottom of the sixth to save the tie. It was Howley again, notching his fourth RBI of the night with a run-scoring single. Tommy Dalicandro, who had reached on an error, scored the tying tally.

Howley began the fireworks with a solo homer to right-center over the fence to take a 1-0 lead in the first. Tommy Albright scored another run for Auburndale in the second, reaching on a fielder's choice and eventually scoring on a passed ball.

Kevin Houlihan tossed a three-hitter, and Dan Pill and Evan Kushner knocked in two runs apiece, as the Mosca Club edged Our Lady's, 5-3.

Houlihan went into the seventh with a one-hit shutout, but tired, and allowed all three of the losers' runs in the last frame.

Mosca got off to a fast start with consecutive triples in the first inning for a run. John Toyias smacked a three-bagger over the left fielder's head, and Kushner notched his first RBI of the night with a booming shot to center which was good for three bases.

In other action, Stephen MacKay's solo homer was the winner, as the Warriors downed Upper Falls, 5-3, at Upper Falls. The catcher smacked a line drive shot to left field to give the winners a 4-2 lead in the sixth.

Lastly, a five-run third inning powered St. Bernard's over Auburndale Sports, 8-2, at West Newton Common. Steve Chapman picked up the win, tossing a six-hitter, and scored a run also.

7-birdie surge by Whalley just misses in PGA

By Tom Murphy
Senior Editor

A fine comeback round at the Sunapee C.C. in New Hampshire brought Ed Whalley, Woodland's professional, within a single stroke of catching Bill Ezinicki of International in the New England PGA senior championship last week. Ed wound up in a runnerup tie with Bob Crowley of Pine Brook at 148.

First-day action saw Whalley playing "about as badly as I could" for a 78. Friday was a different story in a remarkable subpar 70 marked by extremes. He recorded no fewer than seven birdies. They were offset by two lost ball situations, a three-putter, and a double bogey which required a chip-in save. Birds came on shots that pinpointed the greens on the highly rated Donald Ross course, all but one putt inside the 15-foot range.

A second place playoff was staged to determine Ezinicki's partner in the senior fourball part of the Colonial Cup matches on Aug. 17. Whalley was the winner in sudden death at the short 4th, holing a deuce from five feet. That was the same hole on which he flew a shot into the cup for an ace worth $2,500 in last year's New England PGA senior event, his first over-50 outing.

Top professionals and amateurs will be competing at the Colonial in Lynnfield. Ezinicki and Whalley represent the old guard against Dr. Ray Lebel, 1983 N.E. Seniors winner, and Fordie Pitts. Ten under-50 "junior" pros heading the Wogan point table will be arrayed against a like number of amateurs over 36 holes.

Although his Mass. Open performance was not up to standard, with 79 and 80 rounds after four straight days of home shop duty on the club's member-member, Ed's game has been consistently good. He ranks among the Wogan top 10, with a 72-73 average. He has been the anchor for more than 40 Woodland foursome partners in NEPGA pro-ams, with the teams winning low nets twice and placing in the money on eight occasions.

Back through the winter months, he was his usual self in those pilgrimages to Bermuda. Woodland teams got a second net in the Goodwill tournament and finished high in the Michelob play. Whalley's par round was low gross in the Lobsterpot Championship and he was second with a 70 in the Goodwill individual title competition. In the latter, he trailed only Tom Nieporte, the former touring pro now at Winged Foot.

There are major pro events coming up. He will be playing with our vetrean club champion, Paul Kelly, in the 36-hole New England PGA pro-am championship Aug. 15. Woodland and Wellesley are the host clubs that day when 120 teams from the six-state region will be playing alternate rounds.

A circulation problem caused by a pinched nerve in his left arm last year is well behind Whalley. He has other things to be pleased about, notably a fine pro shop team in Ted Griffin and Bonnnie Rothwell Miller. All three are busy with scheduled lessons Tuesday through Friday, taking pressure off Ed, who is handling 10 to 12 a day. Bonnie is a registered professional with four years of experience in Florida. Whalley taught her as a youngster when he was at Charles River.

Bonnie combines her pro career with a role as mother of three children, so she isn't into competitive golf. All half dozen rounds played at Woodland this season have been 76 or under, however.

Pro Ed Whalley is highly enthused about the new Woodland clubhouse as it reaches a final stage of renovation. He credits Dr. Len Tocci, club president, and his board with an outstanding job. "I think it is just beautiful, and I believe it is going to make a big, big difference in our play, which has been off as much as 40 percent. We can feel the acceleration of play already, with cart rounds on increase."

Dodgers top South LL

NEWTON — The Waban Dodgers captured the Newton South Little League championship, defeating the Newton Highlands Royals, 9-6, at Richardson Field.

The Dodgers have won their division five of the last six years, but this year marks the first time that the championship has been won by the Dodgers in the last six campaigns. Lenny Mead was the ace of the mound, while other hurlers included Peter Silverman, Justin Fortune and Jeremy Lipshutz.

The other half of the battery was Eric Sheff. The backstop provided solid defense throughout the season. Infielders Eric Cuthbert, Jesse Rudner, Silverman and Lipshutz provided excellent fielding which was the key to the team's success.

The outfielders accounted for most of the run production during the season. Jeff Bator, Sheff and Cuthbert prowled the outfield for Waban.

Reserves Eric Shunterman, Jared Selter, Paul Scublinsky, Brian Feldman, Jonah Gillette and Matthew Cherwin were valuable assets throughout the campaign, spelling the starters and filling in capably when called on.

DiMartino receives MVP citation

NEWTON — Former Newton North athlete Eric DiMartino recently graduated from Ohio Wesleyan University, where he completed one of the finest athletic careers in Bishop history this spring, earning his fourth baseball letter.

A 5-10, 180-pound second baseman, DiMartino was named Honorable Mention All-Midwest, Most Valuable Player by his teammates, and Outstanding Hitter by the coaching staff.

DiMartino led the Bishops in nine offensive categories this past spring, including home runs with six, and RBIs, with 24. His 61 total bases established a new team record and the 24 runs he scored and six homers tied existing marks.

The second-sacker was on a hot streak as the season ended; he hit in his last nine games at a .500 clip, and recorded a .777 slugging percentage in that span. Two big games for the Medford native were the 11-9 win over defending national champion Marietta and a record setting 22-0 romp over Denison. He collected three safeties apiece.

DiMartino ended his career as the all-time school leader in singles and RBIs, and is second in at bats, runs, hits, and total bases. He ranks third in doubles and home runs. No slouch defensively, DiMartino set the school record assists in a season and career, and the career mark for double plays.

The son of Mark DiMartino also starred on the gridiron, as he letterd four times for the Bishops at linebacker, leading the team in tackles three years running. He was named a Kodak All-America linebacker and was a three-time All-Ohio Athletic Conference pick.

Lee paces North

DEDHAM — In recent Dedham Recreation High School basketball action, Newton North, led by Greg Lee (15) and Andy Lockwood (16) came from behind to overtake Dedham. Dedham was led by Rick Colleran's aggressive performance with 22 points and 10 rebounds.

Newton North crushed Foxboro, 66-45.

Liberty AC benefits from race

NEWTON — The Liberty Athletic Club, a running club which includes members from Newton, received a donation from Manufacturers Hanover for its participation in the Manufacturers Hanover Corporate Challenge, which took place last Thursday.

The Corporate Challenge is a 3.5 mile road race, open to full-time employees of corporations, businesses, finacial and government institutions. All entry fees from the race benefitted the New England Athletic Congress and running clubs throughout the New England region.

The Manufacturers Hanover Corporate Challenge originated in New York City in 1977 with just 200 runners from 50 companies. Since that time, the race has experienced nationwide growth and acclaim.

In 1983, some 40,000 runners, representing over 2,000 companies, participated in races in 10 cities across the United States. With the addition of boston as the newest race site, the Manufacturers Hanover Corporate Challenge roster now includes races in 12 major cities.

International League roundup

Boys' Club, On the Road champs

NEWTON — Peter Groussis drove in three runs, and Adam Gabriel doubled in a pair, as the Abruzzi Club downed the Tigers, 10-6, in Newton International League action at Newton North. The win clinched third place for the winners in the Copp Division with a 10-9-1 record. The Tigers finished fourth.

The Boys' Club was a clear winner in that division with a 17-2 mark, well ahead of runner-up Upper Falls.

The Murphy Division saw a much tougher battle, as On the Road fought off challenges from the Warriors and the Oak Hill Cubs. On the Road finished at 16-5, followed by the Warriors at 15-5 and Oak Hill at 14-5-2. Rounding out the playoff berth winners in that division was St. Bernard's, who wound up at 11-9-1.

Righty Ben Burlingame struck out six in Abruzzi's victory, allowing seven safeties, to pick up the win. Groussis, the team's shortstop, had two singles, and Gabriel made a spectacular catch in the last inning to end a Tiger rally.

Jeff Newton contributed a triple and a single to the losers attack.

In other action, 15-year-old Paul Kearney tossed a five hitter, as St. Bernard's downed Oakley Spa, 13-7.

This was totally a real team effort, as each batter in the lineup plated a run. Dave St. Germain was the individual standout, notching four hits in as many trips to the plate to knock in four runs. He had two doubles and two singles.

The winners got seven runs in the third inning, and led 12-3 at the end of the third stanza, and never looked back. Oakley rallied for a pair of runs in their half of the fourth, but with the bases loade, St. B's second baseman Scott Grinley jumped to snare a line drive, and threw to first for an inning-ending double play to end the rally.

Rob Kelly's suicide squeeze scored Tommy White with the winning run in the top of the seventh, capping a come-from-behind win, as the Auburndale Warriors edged Oak Hill, 7-6.

The winners went into the seventh down by two runs, but Al Clark led off with a single, was bunted to second by Dennis Owen, and scored on White's hit-and-run single.

Winning pitcher Chris Cassara, a 13-year-old lefty, only allowed four hits to go the distance, and got support from Mark Adams, who led off the game with a homer, and Dave Castrone who had two RBIS.

Finally, The Boys' Club pounded Carson Post, 9-2 behind the pitching of Joe Proia, George Haggie, and Mark Maiocca. The three combined to toss a three-hitter, with 13 strikeouts.

Maiocca added two hits, and Jay Capello notched a pair also. The big inning for the winners was the first, in which they got four runs. Proia and Haggie each lashed singles which scored a pair of runs.

Lefty Mark Laughlin notched three hits, and scattered six to lead On The Road over the Auburndale Warriors, 11-6.

The winners were down, 5-3, going into the top of the third, but came up with six runs, which proved to be too much for Auburndale to surmount. Tom McGary singled, stole second, and Matt Selig rescued him with another safety. Evan Galanis singled, and after one was out, Chris Scalia plated Selig with another safety.

Laughlin and P.J. O'Toole forced in a run each with walks, and Greg Manthei singled in the final run of the stanza. McGary would later get his second single of the frame, but didn't score.

McGary was the On The Road sparkplug, leading the 17-hit attack with three hits and two RBIs. Jim Cork added two triple, and Selig notched a single and a three-bagger.

In other action, the Boys' Club routed the Tigers, 17-4, behind the five-hit pitching of Mark Cadman. The winners got 14 runs in the second and third innings to put the game away.

This game was all Boys' Club, as five players had two or more hits. Proia had two singles and a double, while MacDougall finished with a single and a two-bagger. Steve Fontano smacked a single and a double to plate four runs on the night.

At Newton North's Ferguson Field, winning pitcher Peter Caralis took care of business himself in the bottom of the sixth inning by lining a shot into right-center to chase home Jim Vitti with the winning run as the Elks edged Oakley Spa, 6-5.

Vitti had singled and taken second when the next batter walked, setting the stage for Caralis.

St. Bernard's stayed alive in the fight for the newly-opened fourth playoff spot in the Murphy Division of the International League with a 17-11 drubbing of the Elks on Tuesday at Cabot Park.

The game wasn't even as close as it sounds, as it was 17-1 with two outs in the final inning before the Elks scored 10 times.

Winning pitcher Scott Grinley did an excellent job in his first start before he finally tired. The 13-year-old righthander wound up allowing six hits, striking out three and walking eight.

He also did his part on offense with three hits and four runs batted in.

Grinley had plenty of help. Brian Vona and Dave St. Germain each drove in four, while John Rutledge knocked home three. Nick Mariano only rescued one run, but was distinguished in that he slammed two triples in one inning.

In other action, 12 runs in the first three innings powered Oakley over Post 440, 17-8. The winners got four in the first, a single tally in the second, and seven in the third, while Post 440 didn't score until the fourth. Frank Battista led the way offensively for the winners, slamming a double and a three-run homer to give him four RBIs on the evening.

The big frame for Oakley was the seven-run third, which gave them a 12-0 lead at the time.

Harry Leacy began the third by drawing a walk, and after one was out, John Caissie drew a free pass, and Chuck Fraile hit into a fielder's choice, putting runners on the corners with two gone and none in.

Hamilton Jones drew a walk to load the bases, and Anthony Filipone drew another pass to force in the first run of the frame. Ken Kazarosian's grounder was bobbled for an error, allowing two to score, and Battista plated his first runner of the night with a double, scoring Filipone. Anthony Calcagni singled home Battista and Kazarosian.

Battista crashed a three-run homer to left field in the sixth to widen the margin.

At Lincoln Park, the Oak Hill Cubs belted American Lettering, 11-2, behind the two-hit pitching of Jono Dietz. A 13-year-old southpaw in his first start of the year, Dietz went five innings, striking out two and walking five.

Oak Hill put this one away with eight runs in the third which made it 11-0.

A two-run rally in the bottom of the seventh, capped by David Annese's game-winning single, lifted C&K Components to an 8-7 victory over the Totem Pole Braves.

C&K went into the frame down by one, but it didn't take long to erase that deficit. Rick McMillen singled and right fielder Jon Greenberg followed by lashing a triple to left-center to tie the score at seven. Up stepped Annese and he rapped a basehit down the third base line to end the contest.

The Auburndale Warriors broke open a close game at Albemarle's Burke Field with seven runs in the fifth inning to take a 15-9 decision over Oakley Spa. Right fielder Dan Cedrone led the way offensively for the Warriors with four runs batted in on two hits.

Winning pitcher Aris Caralis helped himself in the big stanza with a two-run single, while Rob Kelley had two hits in the frame.

One of Kelley's singles started the whole explosion. He stole second and scored on Mark Adams' basehit. Mark Markunas followed with another run-scoring hit, and Cedrone's fielder's choice accounted for another marker.

Oakley got some offensive fireworks of their own from left fielder Anthony Filipone, who drove in five runs with a pair of home runs. Frank Battista also contributed a round-tripper, good for three runs.

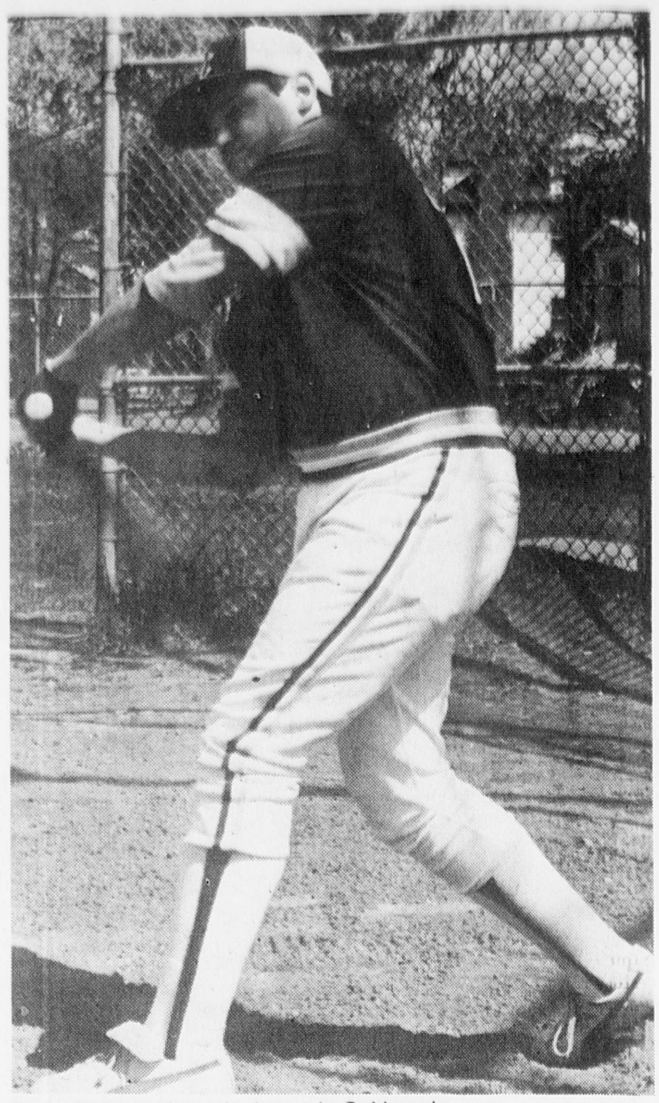

The Tigers scored four runs in the top of the sixth inning to tie Carson Post at seven, then turned a double play in the bottom of the inning to preserve the tie at Albemarle.

Finally, On The Road downed the Oak Hill Cubs, 8-3 at Newton South behind Tom McGary's 12-strikeouts.

Catcher Evan Galanis smacked a double and triple to total five RBIs. He cleaned the bases with the triple in the second inning. He doubled across two in the sixth.

White boosts East in baseball tourney

WESTWOOD — Newton East's Little League team defeated Needham in the Southeast Mass. Baseball Tournament, 6-5, on Sunday on last-inning heroics by Brian White. After doubling in two runs to tie the game, White advanced to third on a wild pitch, and dashed home on another errant delivery.

The win brings Newton's record to 3-4, still in the hunt for a playoff spot.

Khari Brown started the game for the winners, and pitched strongly for the first three innings, allowing only one unearned run. A three-run homer in a four-run Needham fourth inning led to his removal. Danny Tafe came in and threw a perfect inning in the fifth, and Derrick Fergus earned a win with two strikeouts and a weak grounder in the last frame.

Newton had notched two in the bottom of the third to take a 2-1 lead on Fergus' two-run double. Brown bunted for a single, as did Nick Cheney, and Tafe drew a walk to load the bases. Fergus then smacked his two-bagger. White grounded out on the next play, and Tafe was thrown out at home, trying for the plate.

The top of the fourth saw Needham notch four runs, and take a 5-2 lead, but Newton got one in the bottom of the inning on a triple play.

Chris Guzzi, Danny McAuliffe, and Drew Calcoff each hit singles to left, and V.J. Farina bounced back to the mound. Needham made the force at home, but when the catcher threw to first, the ball went to right field, allowing Guzzi to score. The rightfielder threw to the plate, nabbing Calcoff in a rundown, and Farina was thrown out going for third.

The score was 5-3 going into the bottom of the sixth inning, setting the stage for White.

The winners had 10 hits on the night, and are in a dogfight for the last playoff spot in the tourney.

Newton East won its second game in the tourney, 6-1, over Cedar Grove, on the hitting and pitching of Derrick Fergus.

The righty struck out nine, walked one, and allowed only two hits. He also pounded a pair of two-run homers to help his own cause.

In the first inning, the winners got all the runs they would need. After Danny Tafe reached on a single, Fergus ripped a round-tripper to rightfield. In the third, Tafe doubled, and trotted home again on the front of Fergus' second blast of the night, this one to center.

A walk to Fergus and three consecutive wild pitches accounted for another run, while Ron D'Innocenzo's run-scoring single capped the Newton scoring.

Cedar Grove got their only run after two errors. With men on the corners, Newton turned a double play, the runner from third scoring.

Newton is now 2-3 in the tourney, still in the hunt for a playoff spot.

Neary captures Ouimet golf tourney

NEWTON — A driving rain and some lackluster putting weren't enough to stop Brockton's Dan Neary in the 17th annual Francis Ouimet Memorial Invitational Golf Tournament at Woodland Golf Club on Friday.

Neary broke away from runner-up Steve Tasho of Thorny Lea in the final round to finish with a four-over-par 219 in the 54-hole competition. Tasho wound up four strokes behind at 223, tied with Jim Ruschioni of Oak Hill. In fourth was Mike Stone of Allendale.

The top local finisher was Brae Burn Country Club's Bruce Chalas, who shot a 74 Friday to finish at 226. Also at that mark was Andy Congdon, who plays out of Great Barrington.

The key round in Neary's victory was the second, in which the 28-year-old fired a 3-under-par 69 at Charles River Country Club on Thursday. That put him in the lead at 1-over after his 75 at The Country Club in Brookline in the opening round on Wednesday.

Tasho began the final round four strokes back of Neary, and three behind Congdon. The latter fell out of contention early in the final round when he shot 9-over-par on the first 11 holes. He wound up with 81 for the day and 226 for the tourney.

That apparently left Neary in great shape, but a couple of short missed putts opened the door for Tasho. A former Mass. Amateur champion (1981), Tasho took advantage and deadlocked the match with a string of good holes.

He birdied the third and fourth, aided by a long putt on three and a tremendous tee shot on the par-3 fourth. The 25-year-old finally got even on the sixth with a superb iron that put him only a short putt away from a tie match. He sank it, and the pressure was on Neary.

Tasho didn't let up there, taking a one-stroke lead when Neary bogied the eighth and ninth.

That was to be the highlight of the tourney for Tasho, who slid downhill from there as Neary took charge, aided by a great putt on 11. A double-bogey on 10 began Tasho's slide, giving Neary an opening. He knotted the match once again, despite a bogey, and snapped the logjam with a long putt for a birdie on 11.

When Neary followed that up with two pars and a birdie, the Stonehill College graduate had built a lead that was never threatened.

Only one player, Ruschioni, managed to battle the rain enough to finish at par for the final round with a 72. Chalas was 2-over for the day at 74.

King garners All-Star honors

The baseball coaches of the Suburban League showed their high regard for the talent on the 1984 Waltham High team by picking no less than five Hawks for the All-Star team. The next team in line was Cambridge Rindge and Latin, with four, while league champion Brockton only had three selections. Newton North had one player, Joe King, named.

The circuit's Most Valuable Player was Chris Bunker, an outfielder for North Quincy who hit nearly .500 this season. He accomplished that despite being pitched around for much of the season, as North Quincy's lineup didn't rival Waltham's or Brockton's for offensive power.

Wayne Johnson, Dan DiVito, Gino DiStefano, Ed Sweet and Steve Giusti made up the Waltham contingent.

Cambridge was represented by pitcher Jim Hoog, third baseman Gary Barker, shortstop Nelson Linares, and utility player Andy Ayres. Hoog was also a longball-hitting first baseman when he wasn't pitching.

Making the club from Brockton were pitcher Paul Cosgrove, catcher Peter Marciano and hard hitting outfielder Sherrod Rainge.

Rounding out the picks were Quincy pitcher Mike Notarangelo and No. Quincy utilityman Jack Bolster. Bolster combined with Bunker to give North Quincy one of the best back-to-back offensive combos in the league.

JOE KING — King had to be on the team somewhere, but the coaches couldn't quite decide where, so they put him at second base. King was Newton's top pitcher, best hitter, and played almost everywhere in the infield. He started the season at second when he wasn't pitching, then saw some action at first, and finished up as the team's regular shortstop, settling down what had been an inconsistent infield.

Through it all, King hit and pitched with remarkable consistency. He finished with a .386 mark that included five doubles, one triple and a pair of homers. He drove in 20 runs to lead the team.

On the mound, King went 3-4, striking out 22 and walking 19. That included two shutouts, a three-hitter against Walpole and a one-hitter against Quincy. The only safety in the latter effort was an infield nubber that was beaten out.

King will be attending the University of Maine at Orono next fall, where he hopes to continue his baseball career. In the interim, he is playing for the Post 440 American Legion team and the Boys' Club squad in the Newton National League this summer.

Infield and pitching questions remain

Plenty of potential for North

By Roy LeBlanc
Staff Writer

NEWTON — Ordinarily, the future should look pretty bright for a high school baseball team that hit .290 and loses only two starters to graduation. In Newton North's case, the potential for that kind of an outlook is there, but certain problems have to be overcome first.

"Under most circumstances, you'd have to be pretty excited about the fact that the entire nucleus is coming back," said Tiger coach Dick Walker, "but the problems we faced this year are still there on the horizon...The problems were the pitchers not throwing strikes and the defense in the infield."

The infield was perhaps chief among those. All too often, ground balls became an adventure this spring, and lackluster defense was a major reason for the team's 6-9 finish.

Perhaps even more important is the fact that the two players who settled the infield down late in the year are the two starters who will be missing next season.

Halfway through the season Walker installed Chris Pachus at third base and Joe King at shortstop. The result was a much steadier defense, but both of those players were seniors.

Next year's success or failure will largely revolve around the shortstop position. At this early stage, it's a completely wide open battle with the graduation of King, who was a team leader.

King, though not spectacular defensively, was a consistent gloveman. He also led the team in hitting at .373 with five doubles, a triple and two homers.

Jim Proia is one player who will be in the thick of the fight for the starting job. He began 1984 as the starter but had some troubles with the glove early on. He'll be given every chance to win the job back next year.

"He has the potential," said Walker. "A lot of it has to do with confidence."

An ankle injury after the season has slowed down Proia's progress, as he hasn't been able to play any summer ball until this week.

Also figuring in the battle at short are junior-to-be Dave LeConti and senior-to-be Jim Kalamvokis. LeConti has a lot of potential, while Kalamvokis was one of many juniors who played on the junior varsity squad. Kalamvokis also may contend at second base.

As much as anything, Walker is looking for a team leader at short as well as a strong defensive player, and attitude will play a big part in who wins the job.

The shortstop position will have a ripple effect on the rest of the infield. The losers there will contend at second and third. Among the challengers at second are Artie Aaron, the incumbent, and Chuck Proia. Both were juniors this spring.

Aaron took over the job late in the year and proved to be a solid defensive player who also did a decent job with the bat. He finished at .285. Proia, Jim's cousin, saw limited action most of the year due to a hand injury. Being a lefthanded hitter could give him a slight edge if all else is equal.

Third is dependent upon the shortstop spot as well. The second-best shortstop might become the number one third baseman.

"Reaction and a good arm," said Walker, "that's the individual I'm looking for."

Aaron might be a potential third baseman, although offensively he doesn't have the power normally associated with the position.

Rounding out the infield, the coach has a couple of incumbents to choose from at first in Colin Ryan and Greg Larson. Both play other positions, as Larson is expected to be the top pitcher and Ryan catches. Walker may be leaning toward Ryan, simply because he wants to keep his infield as steady as possible and putting Larson at first would mean changing it every time he pitches.

One thing is certain: Larson's bat will be in the lineup somewhere every day. He hit .303 this year and has the potential to do a lot better next year, particularly in the power department. He was hampered much of this season by a hip injury suffered in the third game.

The other first baseman this year was Sean Gardiner, who is gone to graduation. Gardiner hit .333 this spring as a part-time first baseman and designated hitter.

One place that doesn't concern Walker is catcher, where he has two experienced players to choose from. The coach calls it "a healthy two-man battle...One person will win the starting job, and the other person will be very close in ability...I respect the ability and potential of both," speaking of Ryan and Chris Bercury.

Walker is looking for defense first, although he would like a little more offense from the position than he got this season. Ryan has the edge at the plate, hitting .269 this season. Bercury has looked better at bat in summer play, and seems to be recovering nicely from arthroscopic surgery which was done after the high school season.

The outfield starts out as another strong spot, with two starters returning. Although no coach likes to admit that anyone has a job locked up 10 months ahead of time, Bob Martin comes awfully close in center field.

"Many coaches would be very happy to have a center fielder coming back of Bobby Martin's caliber," commented Walker. "I'm one of them."

Martin's presence in center gives the coach a good start on the traditional "up the middle" strength that baseball teams need. With Bercury and Ryan at one end and Martin at the other, the coach feels his club will be "as good defensively as anyone in the league."

Martin was also a standout offensive player, finishing at .345 and tying for the team lead in hits with 19 with King. The team's best baserunner, Martin was rarely, if ever, thrown out by opposing catchers and Walker will make good use of that speed in 1985.

Don Natale joins Martin as a returnee. He boasts excellent speed too, but didn't get as much of a chance to use it due to a somewhat disappointing year at the plate. Natale started the season in right but finished in left and will probably stay there, where he feels more comfortable. His arm suits left better than right as well.

Leading the way in the right field battle are Alex DeNucci and Mike Solomon, both of whom were juniors this year. The two saw limited playing time in the spring and both showed flashes of potential, offensively and defensively. Sean O'Brien and Mitch Nash, two more members of the Class of '85, also figure in the outfield picture.

If shortstop is the key to one portion of the team, Larson's health is most important factor to the pitching staff.

"It's possible for him to pitch 30-40 percent of our games," noted Walker. "He has to come through for us...The potential is there."

This year, Larson was limited by his injury and split four decisions, striking out 16 and walking 12. More than anything else, he could use more aggressiveness on the hill to make full use of his tools.

Larson is the only returning pitcher with a varsity win, as King and Bob Connerney accounted for the other four victories. King went 3-4, fanning 22 and walking 19. Connerney looked unhittable at times, but was all too often plagued by wildness. Control was a problem for the team as a whole, as the Tigers struck out only one more batter than they walked this season.

Dave Boule also saw action on the mound, posting an 0-2 mark. Rounding out the staff was Jeff Robinson, who had some effective relief appearances.

King, Connerney (who had a pretty good year at the plate at .304), Boule and Robinson were all seniors, putting next year's load squarely on Larson's shoulders.

Behind him, Walker has a bunch of question marks. Martin did a little pitching as a sophomore and could be moved back in there next year. He might have the strongest arm on the team, but has had arm troubles in the past. Having a southpaw is very important, particularly against teams such as Waltham which can throw four or five lefthanded hitters in the lineup.

Jim Proia is another possibility, but still an unknown quantity. Coming up from the jayvees are righthanders Ray Gladu, Tom Casey and Bob Blouin. All were juniors for a team which lost only once.

Walker noted that the jayvees "had an outstanding season, but have nothing to be complacent about," mentioning that the Tigers were mostly juniors performing against teams that had more sophomores and freshmen.

"We're not the most talented team," summarized Walker. "You need a group of individuals who are willing to sacrifice...There has to be a lot of unselfishness...So much of it is attitudinal...We more ferocity...We have to fight and scrap."

Citing "cautious optimism," Walker concluded, "other than Brockton and Waltham we have to beat everyone else...Realistically, I'd like to split with Brockton and Waltham and load up on the other teams."

Speaking on next year's tournament possibilities, the coach said, "There's a fine line. The difference will be mental. It isn't going to be handed to them. If they're not willing to sacrifice, then it just isn't going to happen."

South's Kiah, North's Blake given coaches' grid awards

NEWTON — Two Newton football players, Chris Kiah of Newton South, and Kevin Blake from North, were awarded the Massachusetts High School Football Coaches Award recently prior to the Shriners All-Star Football Classic at Boston College.

Ten Massachusetts young men received the honor, which is given in recognition of a player who has risen above a hardship, handicap, or has served as an inspiration to his teammates.

Kiah has only one eye, but overcame the limitation to play both ways in his junior and senior years. Offensively, the co-captain rushed for 750 yards and caught 15 passes. Kiah also co-captained the wrestling team and was on the outdoor track squad at Newton South.

Kevin Blake has been without his father from an early age, and lost his mother when he was 13, but has run his own home since then, and has also taken care of his grandmother. The Newton North captain in both football and lacrosse, Blake was a Suburban League Gridiron All-Star in his senior year.

Scholastically, he is also a leader, chalking up A's and B's. The young man also devotes some of his time to serving as a Big Brother to a youngster.

Dale takes first at Ponkapoag GC

CANTON — Marion Dale won first place in last week's nine-hole, par-bogey competition tournament at Ponkapoag Golf Club, scoring 35 points. Nancy Carlton came in second with 32 points, and Stephanie Rizza and Thelma Berman tied for third with 30 points each.

Infield boosts girls' hopes

By Roy LeBlanc
Staff Writer

NEWTON — Although she played five senior starters this season, Newton North softball coach Carolyn Harrington will be far from starting from scratch when her team reports for practice next spring. The fact of the matter is, the Tigers will have the infield returning almost intact, led by shortstop Jackie Kinsella, who was a second-team all-star this year.

The returning veterans also include the team's top three hitters in Kinsella, Beth Morahan and Robin Silver.

Kinsella is definitely the key to the team. She's a sparkplug both offensively and defensively. Her .531 average far and away led the team, and she's a superb fielder. As long as the junior stays healthy, Harrington will have no worries at the shortstop position.

Kinsella's keystone partner this season was sophomore Silver. With her very strong arm, the Tigers always stood a chance of turning over a double play whenever a runner reached first.

Offensively, Silver combines a number of talents that should get even better. She still has a lot to learn, but finished third on the team in hitting at .397. The lefthander hit number two most of the season and combines speed with power. She is a good bunter as well.

First base is another spot with a veteran entrenched. Morahan started the season in left but moved to first when Nuala Horkan was called up to the varsity, setting off a chain of position switches.

Morahan, a junior, rapped the ball to the tune of .408 this year, good for second on the club. That average included four home runs, so she has some power and makes contact.

Sophomore Carolyn Natale also saw some playing time at first this season. Natale is very fast and a good athlete, but still has some learning to do. She hit .250.

Morahan will have the edge going into the season, but Natale will challenge. The latter may be moved to the outfield.

Horkan, who came up from the junior varsity during the season, settled a lot of things down when she was installed at catcher. When she came along, Sue Gerson was shifted to left and Morahan moved from left to first.

Horkan's strength is defense. The junior is very adept at blocking pitches.

Offensively, Horkan hit "much better than I expected," said Harrington. Although streaky at the plate, Horkan turned in a .344 mark, which could get even better as a senior with a year's experience behind her.

So much for the good news.

While all those veterans form an excellent nucleus, there still are a number of questions to be answered and holes to fill.

The biggest of these is on the mound, where the Tigers lose first-team all-star Nancy Owen. She's been the regular starter for two seasons and will be missed. She had an 8-4 record for the 9-7 team this year.

Fortunately, the Tigers were not a team that got by with only one pitcher, as some softball teams do. As a result, Harrington has several players who could challenge for the job as the number one hurler.

The leader in the derby as this early stage would have to be Sharon Cullins, who went the distance for an 8-5 win against Wakefield in the second-to-last game of the season.

"That game made Sharon," said Harrington. "She looked terrific...She showed a lot of poise and got better under pressure."

Cullins showed some potential with the bat, too, hitting .375 in limited action.

Another junior this spring, Debbie Visco, began with the varsity but went down to the jayvees to see regular pitching time. She did a good job down there and could be in a position to challenge Cullins.

Lynn Resnick also pitched for the junior varsity, although she missed half of the season with a severe case of bronchitis.

All of the pitching candidates are righthanders.

The Tigers have other holes at third base and in the outfield. Julie Wilgoren, named an honorable mention all-star with a .380 average, vacates third. At this point, that job is "wide open" according to the coach.

Harrington will also have to scramble to fill the three outfield spots left by Gerson (left), Mary Reynolds (center) and Sue Spooner. Gerson and Reynolds were second-team all-stars who hit .382 and .355, respectively. Spooner chipped in with a .295 mark.

The one other senior the coach mentioned who will be missed is manager Sue Herzberg.

Natale should be a leading challenger for one outfield job, and sophomore Carol Ventura probably has an inside track for another. Both are good athletes with decent arms. Ventura rapped the ball at a .375 clip this year, so she'll probably be in the lineup somewhere.

Harrington indicated that this year's junior varsity and freshman players will "get a long look." Both teams had good seasons, putting the coach in "a pleasant position."

The bottom line is that the Tigers will go as far as the pitching takes them, as the coach readily admits.

"We need someone who throws strikes," she said. "We should have a good defensive team. We'll always be competitive, we'll be in the game. We'll hope that the pitching comes through and that everybody plays their position defensively."

YOUR OFFICIAL MASS. INSPECTION MAINTENANCE STATIONS

Now that your car is inspected just once a year, the last number on your plate determines when.
If your plate ends in 7, get inspected in July.
Zeros come in October, though, and plates with all letters in November.
We'll do the traditional safety checks as well as the new computerized tailpipe emissions test. Quickly and efficiently.

Draft ordinance to control BC fans passes committee

By Frank Muligan
Staff Writer

NEWTON — A draft ordinance aimed at stemming the overflow of rowdy Boston College football fans into residential side streets was passed in a 5-0 vote by the aldermanic Legislation and Rules Committee.

Aldermen Richard J. Bullwinkle, Paul E. Coletti, James P. Regan, Robert L. Shuman and committee chairman Verne Vance Jr. approved the draft ordinance while Aldermen Ronald A. Marini and Carol J. Robinson left the room during the vote. Alderman Edward L. Richmond did not attend the meeting.

Chief Willam F. Quinn said, "This whole ordinance is a result of Boston College football games, mostly night football games, when they tailgate on the side streets in the Boston College area. That's the whole thing."

Chief Quinn added that in the past he has recieved numerous complaints from area residents of carloads of drinking and eating Boston College football fans clogging up their streets and intruding on their property.

The ordinance would give Chief Quinn the authority to arrest the "tailgaters" without a warrant and would impose a fine of not more than $50 for each violation of the ordinance.

Chief Quinn asked the city solicitor to draft the ordinance giving him the authority to move the tailgaters off of the residential streets, he said, and added he was fighting a deadline, "The first football game this year is Sept. 2, I think."

Alderman Ronald A. Marini wanted the draft ordinance amended to exclude cookouts on the Commonwealth Avenue median strip on the day of the Boston Marathon.

Marini said, "I hate to be part of another ordinance limiting what the people in the city can do for recreation. Its a traditional day out for the family. We all admit its a problem on the side streets in front of houses but not on the Commonwealth Avenue median strip on Marathon Day.

Marini's proposed amendment was defeated in a 5-0 vote identical in composition to the respective votes cast for passage of the ordinance.

Nancy Friedman, president of the Chestnut Hill Association, said, "I think the impetus came from the problems experienced with the Boston College football games but I would like to see the ordinance used on a citywide basis."

Friedman added that passage of the ordinance would encourage Boston College football fans to do their drinking and eating on school grounds rather than in the neighborhood streets.

Committee chairman Verne Vance Jr. said, "Its been my impression in the past that most of the people attending the Boston College games are from far away and in my experience people are more liable to cause trouble out of their own area.

"The public sidewalks are for pedestrians and the public streets are for cars. They're not there to cook meals on or hold parties. Boston College may look on the neighborhood around them as an extension of their campus but its not," Vance continued.

"As for the marathon, most people are able to watch along the 26-mile route without holding a cookout on the Commonwealth Avenue median strip. I support including the Commonwealth Avenue median strip in the ordinance," Vance concluded.

Chief Quinn said cookouts on the median strip on that one day were not a major problem and reiterated that his main concern was with controlling the tailgating that accompanies the football games.

Alderman Paul E. Coletti said he looked at the draft ordinance from the standpoint of the community residents and that he had also experienced similar problems at his own home.

"Its a nuisance. I can feel for people who live on those streets. I support the measure wholeheartedly," Coletti stated.

The draft ordinance reads in part, "No person shall use or maintain an outdoor fire for cooking, whether in a grill, hibachi, or other portable apparatus on any public street or sidewalk, a median strip on any public street, public parking lot or private parking lot, or private way to which the public has access."

The ordinance defines outdoor fires as "any heat or fuel source, including, but not limited to, wood, charcoal, propane gas, sterno or any other bottled or canned fuel source," and extends the ban on cooking to "in, on or outside of an automobile or other motor vehicle."

Drug bust in West Newton, local man faces 4 charges

By Eric Fehrnstrom
Staff Writer

NEWTON — Police last week confiscated 16 pounds of marijuana and more than an ounce of cocaine from the home of a 35-year-old West Newton man sought in connection with the alleged kidnap and attempted rape of a 14-year-old girl.

Holding separate warrants obtained Monday morning, police raided the home of John E. Davis, of 31 Northgate Park, at about 6:30 a.m. and allegedly found the drugs stashed away in the house, authorities said.

Davis, who was sleeping when police arrived, was taken into custody and arraigned later before Judge Monte Basbas at Newton District Court. Bail was set at $600,000 surety, or $60,000 cash, court records show.

He pleaded not guilty to four separate charges — kidnapping, assault with intent to rape a child, possession of marijuana with intent to distribute and possession of cocaine with intent to distribute.

He is due back in court Aug. 2 for a probable cause hearing.

According to police, Davis allegedly used a knife to assault a 14-year-old local girl while she was being held against her will at the suspect's home last Sunday.

Acting on information provided by the victim, police obtained two separate arrest warrants and a search warrant in preparation for the early-morning raid, police said.

County prohibits smoking

By Gary Dorion
County News Service

CAMBRIDGE — The Middlesex County Commission last week adopted the recommendation of the recently appointed Non-Smoking Policy Task Force to restrict tobacco smoking in all county buildings.

The vote was 3-0 taken by Commissioners William Schmidt of Newton, Thomas Larkin of Bedford and Michael McLaughlin of Lowell.

The policy provides that smoking be prohibited in enclosed areas of public assembly including elevators, courtrooms, libraries, restrooms, and specified corridor areas where signs will be posted.

In addition, the policy provides that 25 percent of restaurant space be designated non-smoking for restaurants exceeding 25 seats. Office areas of more than 25 people must provide a non-smoking designated work area and smoking is prohibited in storage rooms and workshop areas where flammable materials are present.

County Administrator Paul Blazar, who is a member of the task force, said smoking generally will be allowed in corridors at county courthouses and that most county offices would remain smoking areas. Blazar, who said he once quit cigarette smoking for 15 months and then started again, said that in formulating the proposed policy "we didn't want to be unreasonable."

Harrison Ricles, of 495 Parker St., was placed on probation until Jan. 20, 1986 in connection with the guilty findings entered by Judge Monte G. Basbas.

Ricles was arrested April 23 on a warrant obtained by Newton police, court records show. He was accused of indecently assaulting three youths from the Allston-Brighton area, all under the age of 14 years.

According to court papers, Ricles approached the youths at Chip's Pub in Cleveland Circle on separate dates and brought them to his Parker Street home, where they were allegedly indecently assaulted.

Ricles is the son of Newton School Committee member Robert Ricles.

Hard work pays off for country performer

By Frank Mulligan
Staff Writer

NEWTON HIGHLANDS — A country and western band in New England has to do a lot of performing before it becomes well-known, a fact not lost on John Hicks and his band Revolution, who perform five to six nights-a-week, 50 weeks-a-year.

Hicks, who has been performing music professionally for 20 years in three different bands, says with a soft-spoken accent that betrays a midwestern upbringing, "Its been a lot of hard work and struggle to make it for 20 years and I'm just now starting to get a little recognition."

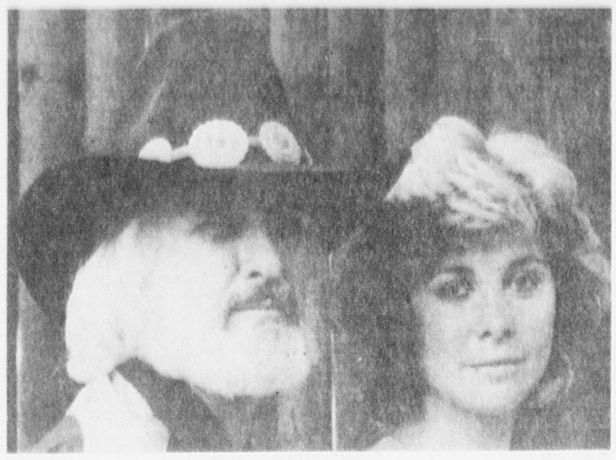

Hicks and Revolution have recently been receiving quite a bit of recognition. Two video tapes he made for a new country music cable system will be completed in August. A rained-out concert in Boston's Hatch Shell, where Hicks and Revolution were to be the main attraction, will be rescheduled in September, and Hicks has a new single out with pretty female vocalist, Chris Anders.

Hicks, who formed his present group, Revolution, five years ago, said of the band, "We've come a long way in a short time."

The band has developed into one of the largest drawing country and western bands in New England and Hicks has a fan club of 130 members. "We have a very devoted following. Some people have been following me for 12 years. Don't ask me why," Hicks joked.

A self-taught musician, Hicks plays the electric bass guitar, sings lead, and writes most of the band's songs.

New Englanders have become more aware of country and western music in recent years and its popularity has consequently grown, according to Hicks. "In Boston proper there are very few clubs that offer country and western on a regular basis, but in the suburbs there are a lot of places," Hicks said, adding that he could hardly play five to six nights-a-week otherwise.

John Hicks and Chris Anders

Hicks commented, "As country music has become more popularized and modernized, the gap between popular music and country and western has closed somewhat. While some hard-core country fans get upset by this, it has helped us to reach more people."

Asked to supply a single major reason for the recent increased popularity of country and western music in New England, Hicks unhesitatingly answers, "No question about it. It was the release of the movie "Urban Cowboy" that popularized the music more than anything else.

"The movie gave a lot of people who don't ordinarily have a chance to listen to country music the chance to hear what it's really like. I think that many people still thought country music was like it was 20 years ago, very twangy and geared strictly for mountain-type folks," Hicks added.

John Hicks and Revolution often perform for charity organizations. The band played a telethon for the March of Dimes, televised on Channel 56 three weeks ago, as well as a boat cruise last month the proceeds of which went to the Leukemia Foundation.

Hicks said the band participates every Memorial Day in a "jamboree" at Indian Ranch, in Webster, to benefit the Heart Fund. "Twenty bands appear there every year, all donating their time. We've raised $40,000 to $50,000 for the Heart Fund over the last five years."

Hicks grew up in Indianapolis, Ind. and served 20 years as a submariner in the U.S. Navy. He began singing professionally while stationed on the West Coast. Thirteen years ago, Hicks retired from the navy and married a third-generation resident of Newton Highlands, the former Nena Arduino.

"I plan to stay in New England. I call it my home now. My wife was born and raised in Newton Highlands. I have no intention of leaving the area," Hicks stated.

Blue ribbon committee is probed

By Edward Cafasso
Staff Writer

NEWTON — Representatives of Middlesex District Attorney Scott Harshbarger's office are investigating whether meetings held by the mayor's Main Library Facility Committee violate the state's Open Meeting Law.

Rachel Park, a legal assistant to Harshbarger specializing in the Open Meeting Law, said early this week she intends to determine if the "blue ribbon" committee's currently closed meetings constitute a violation of state law.

"It is definitely a question of interest to this office and we will look into it. It's something worth pursuing. Ultimately, we will have to determine whether this committee is a governmental body," said Park.

The investigation will take close to two weeks to complete, at which time a letter containing the findings will be sent to Mayor Theodore D. Mann, who will have from a week to 10 days to reply, she added.

Megabucks winner

A modest millionaire

By Kevin C. Kennedy
News Editor

OAK HILL — When Newton resident David Bamel, a 24-year-old self-employed bachelor picked up his check for $80,000 Monday, the first of 20 annual checks he will receive for cashing in a winning Megabucks ticket worth more than $2 million, he already had spent three-quarters of it.

"By far, I'm not a millionaire," Bamel explained Tuesday. "I've got a lot of bills to pay." He said $40,000 of his first winnings went to pay off a loan he received from his father to start his own brokerage firm in Framingham. "I have to hold another $20,000 for taxes. That leaves only $20,000 for the year."

His father is Herbert R. Bamel of 22 Olde Field Rd., former head of the city's Parks and Recreation Commission.

Young Bamel said his father was a great help in making a quick, smooth transition from struggling young entrepreneur to millionaire. He hurried down from New Hampshire, where he was vacationing, to help out, taking his son to an accountant's office before he picked up his winnings on Monday.

Charges fly in asbestos flap

By Charlotte Meryman
Staff Writer

NEWTON — Workmen removing ceiling asbestos in Newton North High School last month carelessly contaminated clean areas, allowed the fibrous material to fall into places from which it cannot be extracted and failed to remove all of the material from many ceiling sections, city officials contend.

The city two weeks ago found the Brookline-based G.S. Maloney company to be in default of its $527,000 contract in both the timing of its work and in health and hygiene considerations. The contract was re-awarded to the second lowest bidder, National Surface Cleaning of Methuen. Maloney executives have indicated they may challenge the move in court.

According to City Solicitor Daniel Funk, who is dealing with the legal issues involved in the default decision, a hygienist hired by the city to monitor the removal process documented numerous violations of the removal procedures required by both state and federal law and by Maloney's contract with the city. Some of those violations would have cost them extra time in additional work and cleanup and prevented them from finishing the work before the start of school, he said.

Funk said the investigator, employed by Hygeia Inc. of Waltham, also alleges that workmen at the site were instructed by Maloney personnel to interfere with her scientific measurements and readings by tampering with her equipment.

Maloney company president, Gerald Maloney, said he is disputing the city's charges "100 percent." He said city officials never provided him with the results of any air sample tests (which indicate fiber level) and contends the work was proceeding according to the time schedule agreed on with the city.

By law it is the contractor's responsibility to conduct air quality tests and x-rays and lung exams on its employees and report the findings to the city, said City Building Commissioner James Cameron. He said the WEST NEWTON — When Bonnie Ulin wants something, she doesn't stop until she gets it.

Take her career, for instance.

Seventeen years ago, the brown-eyed, black-haired dynamo was a 29-year-old mother with two young kids and a dusty college degree. She was also the new owner of a sprawling, white Southern Colonial that was trapped behind a row of towering trees.

Having no tree-trimming skills of her own, she consulted a string of landscapers who all said, "We'll get back to you."

They never did. So, Ulin explains, "I went to graduate school to find out what to do with the front of my house."

Fourteen years later she is a strikingly successful, residential landscape designer with a handful of assistants, a steady set of contractors and three state design awards tucked under her belt.

"I just flipped," she says of her five years at the Radcliffe Institute Landscaping and Environmental Design program. "I lucked into something I adore."

Her enthusiasm keeps her on the job from 7 a.m. to 9 p.m. most weekdays and she often slips in a few hours on Saturdays, although she tries to keep Sundays free. Her kids are now grown and her husband, Peter, a Newton native working in corporate finance, is supportive of her efforts and tolerant of her hours.

Last week, dressed in a bright yellow sportshirt, bright green slacks and yellow loafers, Ulin was a bubbling, non-stop, one-woman, directing team.

"Have you done the plans for the Shepards? Don't forget to call Mrs. Johnson. Now, you're going to the Greenbergs' at 1:00, right? Oh, pink 'rhodies' would be perfect there. What do you think for this corner?"

Fiscal year finale

City surplus over $5 million

By Edward Cafasso, Staff Writer

NEWTON — For the second consecutive year, the city has closed its financial books in the black.

The city ended Fiscal Year 1984, which ran from July 1, 1983 to June 30, 1984, with a whopping surplus of $5.6 million, aaccording to Comptroller of Accounts Lawrence H. Marino.

The city's "free cash" position, which is tabulated by subtracting uncollected taxes from the total surplus, represents the amount of leftover, unencumbered money the city can spend and adds up to about $2.8 million, said Marino, who has spent the last month closing the city's books for the period.

"We're in good financial shape," he added.

Mayor Theodore D. Mann called the city's year-end fiscal position "very healthy" and the result of "tight financial management and good investments."

Some of the free cash will be used to fund "health and safety projects, street repairs, the purchase of new fire equipment and to strengthen our public safety resources," according to Mann.

The mayor added that he would soon approach the Board of Aldermen to ask for supplemental appropriations to fund the capital outlay items.

"It seems as though we in Newton, financially, are in such good shape, even given the problems under Proposition 2½, that our year-end figures will no doubt reinforce our AAA credit rating, a position which only about 20 cities in the country can claim," according to Mann.

The AAA bond-rating - the highest possible - allows the city to sell municipal bonds in order to fund expensive long-range projects, such as asbestos removal, sewer relining and street reconstruction, that cannot be paid for by increasing tax rates.

The city ended Fiscal Year 1983 in a similar position, according to Marino, boasting a $5.1 million surplus and a $2.7 million free cash position.

The current surplus is largely the product of unanticpated monies collected by the city, comprised of unexpected interest on city investments, increased water bill receipts, building permits and enhanced collection of parking meter income and traffic violation fines, he said.

Thorough tax collection also helped the city make a profit, said Mann, adding that close to 97 percent of the city's uncollected taxes were brought in by Treasurer Theodore L. Scafidi.

By law, Marino must now send his bookkeeping records to the state's Department of Revenue Bureau of Accounts, so officials there can certify the city's free cash position. Their official certification then allows the mayor to request supplemental appropriations.

Over $2 million being spent on city streets

By Edward Cafasso
Staff Writer

NEWTON — If driving through some of the city's streets has made you feel like a player in a never-ending pinball machine - frantically skirting around raised manhole covers while simultaneously avoiding bumps and potholes in the road - take heart.

The summer of 1984, according to Public Works Commissioner James L. Hickey, marks the city's largest road reconstruction and resurfacing effort in at least the last decade.

Over $2 million will be spent on projects ranging from the reconstruction of Parker Street's entire length, already partially completed, to resurfacing the whole war-torn Commonwealth Avenue strip by October.

The effort will be capped next spring when most of another major thoroughfare, Beacon Street from Waban Square to Walnut Street, undergoes reconstruction, Hickey said.

Homer Street near City Hall, Walnut Street from Route 9 to Homer and Sumner Street have already been resurfaced, projects which required drivers to weave through a maze of a raised manhole covers.

That inconvenience will be repeated along a small portion of Chestnut Street, Lake Avenue from Newton Highlands to Newton Centre, Hancock Street in Auburndale, Monadnook Street and Suffolk Road in Chestnut Hills, Willow Street near the Newton Centre fire station, Melbourne Avenue, Woodrow Avenue and Adams Street from California Street to wood Avenue when those roads are resurfaced by summer's end.

Of the over $650,000 Hickey estimates will be spent on resurfacing plans this summer, the Commonwealth Avenue project takes the lion's share. Close to $400,000 in state bond funds and federal grant money will go

Dietz loses battle with cancer

By Kevin C. Kennedy
News Editor

NEWTON — Memorial services were held Sunday at Temple Emmanuel for Ernest F. Dietz, a former alderman and civic leader for more than 20 years who died Friday morning after a long bout with chronic lymphocytic leukemia. He was 72.

Dietz reportedly waged a silent, private battle against the disease for the past 21 years without informing his many friends.

Reaction among his former colleagues on the Board of Aldermen included shock at news of his death and regrets that the city has lost a valuable, concerned servant whose distinguishing characteristic was his "warm, winning way."

President of the Board of Aldermen Carol Ann Shea, like her colleagues and other city officials who worked with Dietz, focused on his warm, friendly personality. "He was a really nice man...always very friendly and helpful...just a fine man," she commented.

Ernest Dietz

Alderman Richard McGrath, who, in his first term on the board, served on the Public Buildings Committee which Dietz chaired, called the former alderman "a gentleman.... He had a lot of patience with new people. He made me feel very comfortable as a freshman alderman."

McGrath added, "He was a very kindhearted guy who saw good in everything...a real, honest-to-God 'good guy.'"

Alderman Matthew Jefferson, former president of the board, said Sunday that Dietz was "a grand guy" who won him over before he really got to know him.

According to Jefferson, there was some objection to his changing from Ward Alderman to run for Alderman-at-Large in 1970. When resistance to Jefferson's campaign began to surface, Dietz lent him his support and helped to raise "quite a bit of money" to back his campaign.

Jefferson was at a loss to identify any political motivation. That Dietz "didn't like the idea" behind the reaction to Jefferson's campaign was all he could say. "He didn't know me," he added.

Later, Jefferson came to know him as "a very warm fellow.... I enjoyed him personally as a friend and a colleague," he said. When Jefferson became president of the board, he made Dietz chairman of the Public Buildings Committee because, "He really did have the quality of getting along with people."

Former Alderman Andrew Magni, who served with Dietz, concentrated on his dedication to duty. "Ernie was a guy who was dedicated to his constituents. He put in a lot of time," he said, and attending to his aldermanic duties required "some long hours."

McGrath also commented that Dietz "put a lot of effort" into his elected office. "I don't remember him ever missing a meeting," he said.

First elected to the board in November, 1961, Dietz served on a number of committees during his 20-year stint. He was chairman of the Public Buildings Committee and the Administration and Planning Committee.

Besides serving the community in an elected capacity, the life-long Republican also reached out to help in a number of other ways. He was a past president of the Newton Civic Association and of the Mason-Rice Parent-Teacher Association. His constant concern for the vitality of Newton Centre led him to become a director of the Newton Centre Improvement Association.

He was also a former director of the Newton Red Cross, and he had served as a director of the Greater Boston Red Feather, the Jewish Family and Children's Service, the Hebrew Free Loan Society and Congregation Adath Jeshurun.

A member of Temple Emanuel in Newton Centre, Dietz also served as a delegate-trustee of the Associated Jewish Philanthropies.

Born in Boston in 1911, the son of George and Rosa Dietz was a graduate of Newton High School and the University of Michigan. He received a master's degree from Boston University and studied at the Harvard School of Public Health.

Dietz joined the Back Bay painting firm, Dietz Paint Co., which was started by his father, after he completed his schooling. He became president of the company when his father died and retired seven years ago.

During World War II, he served as a lieutenant in the Navy.

Dietz is survived by his wife, Jean (Pinanski); two daughters, Mrs. Judith Lurie of Palo Alto, Calif., and Mrs. Susan Bulba of Rockport; two sons, Dr. Abraham P. of Hyannis and Jonathan A. of Brookline; three sisters, Mrs. Laua Rudginsky of Brookline, Mrs. Marjorie Jacobs of Swampscott and Mrs. Norma Tarlow of Brockton; and six grandchildren: Rachel, Deborah, Daniel, Sarah, Lisa and Jennifer.

A memorial fund has been established in his name to purchase a bench in his memory to be placed in Newton Centre Square. Donations may be sent to the Ernest F. Dietz Memorial Fund, Newton City Hall, Newton, Mass., 02159.

Hospital expansion awaits state approval

By Edward Cafasso
Staff Writer

NEWTON — Officials of Newton-Wellesley Hospital are awaiting state approval of plans for a $37 million modernization project that would create three new stories on top of the facility's central and east wings.

Hospital Vice President Richard Montalbano said Monday he is unsure when officials from the state Department of Public Health will respond to a determination of need request filed by the hospital last September, but added he hoped a reply would be forthcoming soon.

State guidelines require that a hospital seeking to spend over $600,000 on improvements be granted a certificate of need before going ahead with such plans, according to Montalbano.

The modernization and rehabilitation project, which would add three additional stories to each of the two three-story wings located in the rear of the facility, would serve to replace the 150 beds currently contained in the hospital's north and south wings, he said.

Newton-Wellesley, which welcomed its first patient in 1886, currently features 351 total beds and has three six-story wings - north, south and west - and two three-story wings known as central and east. The north and south wings are the Washington Street hospital's oldest and were built in 1948 and 1927 respectively.

The ultimate goals of the modernization project are to "provide facilities commensurate with the quality of medical care" offered by Newton-Wellesley and to create a "greatly improved" physical environment for patients, Montalbano said.

Four-bed rooms at the facility would be eliminated by the new construction, making all patient accommodations semi-private, he said. The new patient rooms would also be larger and would be able to support the increased electrical demand created by today's medical monitoring equipment, he added.

Currently, some patient rooms in the hospital's south wing have no bathrooms and both the north and south wings lack central air conditioning, two on-going problems which would also be rectified by the project, according to Montalbano.

Although the construction would not mean an increase in the hospital's current building heights, a change in "the footprint (configuration) of the hospital," or create an increased load on the facility's traffic or parking, Montalbano said neighborhood residents would definitely have input on the project.

"I think the neighborhood always raises legitimate concerns. I think we're going to have to have an open dialogue with the community," he said.

Auburndale Alderman Carol Ann Shea, who attended meetings focusing on the hospital's plans last year, said Monday she was unsure how residents in the immediate area of Newton-Wellesley would receive the project.

Once the state grants Newton-Wellesley the necessary certificate of need, an additional year of planning would take place before construction began, he said. The hospital would also require building permits and approval from the Board of Aldermen after hearings are held before the aldermanic Land Use Committee.

Montalbano estimated construction of the additions onto the central and east wings would take two years. Patients housed in the north and south wings would then be moved into the new facilities and it would then take an additional year-and-a-half to complete renovations on the north and south wings, work which would create a central pharmarcy along with a home for other testing and support services for the hospital, he added.

A variety of funding sources would finance the effort, including equity borrowing and possibly a capital donation fundraising drive, Montalbano said.

A gift for gracious gardening

She excitedly fired such reminders, questions and instructions at her staff, interspersing the comments with exclamations and frequent apologies to her visitor.

On the job, Ulin's style is personal; her goal, to meld function and form. She spends a lot of time talking with her clients and touring their houses and properties.

The first step with any prospective project, she says, is finding out the clients needs and tastes and discussing how they can best be met within the given budget.

"We talk about what they want to have happen, how it (the space) doesn't work for them, how much they're around and what colors they like," explained the 46-year-old Kentucky native.

She tours the inside of the house, getting a feel for the clients' tastes and looking at the view from every window, especially the one over the kitchen sink — a favorite spot for gazing. She also pays careful attention to how prospective changes will blend with the architecture and how they will look from the neighbors' point of view.

Once the interview and tour are completed, she comes up with a design concept. If it's accepted, she sends her crew out to measure the existing conditions, including the exact location of every tree, shrub, flower and rock, as well as all masonry. When the "base plan" is drawn to scale, she and her assistants — Molly Gerard, Deane VanDusen and Judy Crandall — come up with a final scheme.

The four then coordinate all of the work, calling on a carefully selected army of independent arborists, gardeners, masons, driveway specialists and swimming pool and sprinkler system installers. Ulin buys her plant material from tried and true nurseries and guarantees it all for one year.

> 'To hear a client say, "It's stupendous. It's beyond almost anything I ever expected" ... That's worth a million dollars'
> Bonnie Ulin

"I've chosen people who not only know exactly what they're doing, but can be depended upon — whose standards are as good as mine and who have pride in their work," she explains. "Because my name goes on everything."

Ulin's most frequent projects are walkways, entrances, swimming pools lawns, gardens and patios, although she also designs and improves decks, driveways, tennis courts, terraces and roof gardens. She may change the slope of a lawn around a pool, turn a barren hillside into a lush ground-cover garden, change the shape of a patio, entryway or deck, design "privacy planting" around a yard or select the shrubbery that will best show off a house.

In the case of her own home, the determined designer took out the line of sky-high hemlock trees that originally blocked her house. She replaced them with Japanese holly, a beautifully different evergreen that grows only a few feet tall.

The first woman member of the Associated Landscaping Contractors of Massachusetts (ALCM), Ulin's business has been incorporated for three years. She prefers to take projects starting at $1,000-1,500 because of the hours involved, but will occasionally do consulting for less.

Ulin always likes her work to appear natural.

"I never want to make my things look: 'Ah, this is designed,' she commented. "The two greatest compliments I can receive are 'It looks as if it were always here' and 'It's so nice I hate to leave.'

"To hear a client say, 'It's stupendous. It's beyond almost anything I ever expected' . . . That's worth a million dollars," Ulin sighed.

Gardening guidelines

Most importantly, says landscaper Bonnie Ulin, you have to know the ultimate size of any plant you choose. Find out it's cultural requirements. Look at what's growing successfully in your neighborhood. Watch where the snow melts first and last to learn which areas of your yard are warmest and coolest.

Be practical, she stresses. Don't put a tree or a bush with a berry near a walkway. Avoid plants with insect problems. Be sure to provide for the necessary food and water. And if you're having trouble growing grass, try a ground cover.

Think about what the space will look like in the winter, as well. Normally, you want to keep a balance of 60 percent deciduous to 40 percent evergreen or vice versa.

You can be creative, too. Trees and shrubs with berries will bring in birds. And if you've got a small yard, there are two Japanese landscaping tricks that may help. You can make the space appear bigger by placing an airy tree in the foreground. You can also visually expand an area by placing darker-toned plantings close to the viewpoint, medium shades in the mid-area and lighter-leafed plants in the distance, approximating the tones of a normal perspective.

Computermania at Lasell

Mothers take their turns

By Charlotte Meryman
Staff Writer

NEWTON — Constance Kantar, Ronnie Werner and Barbara Anthony had two things in common when they started their summer course at Lasell Junior College in Auburndale a few weeks ago — all are mothers and all were frightened of computers.

Now they have a third thing in common: all are thrilled with their new discoveries.

"I was really scared of computers," Werner, a Lower Falls resident and mother of one, recalled. "I had one in my summer cottage last year and I just ignored it. Every time my friend would start doing her work on it, I'd go to the beach."

It took only one class to change Werner's attitude.

"The first time I came here, I was very nervous about sitting at the computer by myself," she said, gazing fondly at the cream-colored IBM PC stationed in front of her. "But yesterday, when the three of us walked out, each of us had printed out material that pertained to our work and we were so excited ... I was like a little kid. When my husband came home, I said, 'Look what I did today.'"

Werner, Kantar and Anthony are enrolled in a class "for mothers only," offered for the first time this year as part of Lasell's new "computer experience" camp. The other offerings at the century-old women's college are half-day, one- or two-weeklong, beginning and intermediate courses in computer for girls ages 8 to 17.

The original idea of the "moms only" class was to show the students what their children were being taught in school, explained Ruth Ann Brooks, dean of Continuing Education at Lasell.

"I found a number of women were calling me asking if we had beginning level computer courses," Brooks recalled of her first few months at the college. "We decided to add in a session for mothers only, to show them exactly what their daughters are learning ... Many feel their children are moving way ahead of them."

The class has since been opened up to all women and Lasell administrators also plan to offer basic computer classes in their new continuing education program this fall.

Anthony, a Wellesley resident who teaches part-time in Lasell's early childhood education department, has two older daughters, one in high school and one in college, both of whom are taking computer classes. Kantar has four kids, ages 14 to 21, who she says are "all very involved with computers all the time."

Although neither took the class specifically because of their children, being able to keep up with the kids was an added benefit.

"I feel a real sense of accomplishment," said Kantar, a Newton Corner resident who also hopes the new skills will simplify her job as president and general manager of the Newton Symphony Orchestra. "I have a whole new language I can use to talk to the kids about how to tackle management problems in the household — like the payment of bills, holiday cards or birthdays."

Werner cited her eight-year-old daughter as one of the main reasons she took the class.

"I felt like she was going to be involved with computers for the rest of her life and I knew nothing about them," Werner said. "I had no way to share what she's doing."

Although Kantar, Anthony and Werner, who were enrolled in a recent afternoon class, said the idea of learning with other mothers — or even other women — did not make a difference in their decisions to take the course, all were attracted by the one-week, beginners only format, which gave them a chance to guage quickly just how interested in computers they might be.

The three got a quick overview of Logo, the computer language taught in most elementary schools, and learned basic word processing theories and functions. All three were amazed at the latter, which they were able to apply immediately in their various jobs.

Kantar was thrilled with the idea of using a computer to update subscription lists and send out mailings for the Newton Symphony — without having to pay an arm and a leg for the service. Werner, a social worker operating through the Newton Community Service Center, used her class project time to sort out her case records and make easily accessible the names of the various agencies involved with each client. Anthony, a professional storyteller, began setting up a system to replace the huge binder that houses her records on what stories she's told to whom.

The women all credited instructor David Paisner, a teacher at Buckingham, Browne and Nichols in Cambridge, with the class' success.

"He makes it all so unscary," said Werner.

And addicting, it seems.

With just 10 hours of practice under their belts, Paisners students are turning an admiring eye to the new technology. All three hint their homes may soon play host to the magical machines.

The furor over fireworks

It's a slow summer in the Garden City when the most explosive issues you can find include the prohibition of fireworks at an annual religious festival, the misuse of official Board of Aldermen stationery and a letter from members of a Republican Ward Committee criticizing the management of a Boston housing project in which they would not be found dead.

Amidst the normal, healthy give-and-take of Newton's dynamic political scene, these "issues" might go virtually unnoticed; but, when the dog days of summer hit, it does not seem to matter if it's the wrong tree we're barking up.

Far be it from the Graphic to demand that these matters be put in their proper perspective. If these issues are all we have to work with, then so be it. We can take a stand as well as anyone.

About the prohibition of fireworks at this year's St. Carmine Festival.... Poor communication can make a mountain out of a molehill, and it was the culprit in this fiasco. Fire Chief Edward Reilly denied the necessary fireworks permit, but he snubbed an aldermanic committee's invitation to explain his actions and he failed to state his reasons publicly for almost two weeks.

As it turned out, Reilly had excellent reasons for issuing his ban. Pyrotechnic displays at the last two festivals had gone far beyond the limits to which he and representatives of the St. Carmine Society had agreed. Aerial rockets were set off in direct violation of the chief's orders and state law, which requires a specific amount of open space for aerial displays.

Given the open, chronic violation of these safety laws, it was only a matter of time before something went wrong. If and when something did go wrong, it would be Reilly, not those elected officials who criticized him so rudely, who would end up with the whole mess in his lap.

If anyone was going to stand up for public safety and avoid almost inevitable disaster, it had to be the chief.

Nonantum residents reacted predictably enough. They saw the chief's actions as one more example of their being discriminated against. Their well-conditioned reaction is not wholly without reason: they are still stung by the fact that their village has been strapped, contrary to residents' wishes, with a disproportionate amount of low-income housing, while other parts of the city have none.

The shame is that the energy which eventually converted the controversy into a juggernaut could have been defused in the beginning by a simple explanation of why the chief had decided not to renew the permit.

The lesson to be learned from the whole brouhaha pertains to the crucial nature of clear, complete communication. With it, you might still have some problems, but they will eventually be worked out.

Without it, you have a mess of doubt, fear, confusion and aggression that feeds on itself until any satisfactory solution is beyond our grasp.

Newton Graphic Opinions

Marketing and The Games

By Kevin C. Kennedy

The valiant, driven American men and women who are giving their all in Los Angeles deserve every kudo they can garner during Olympiad XXIII, especially since they were denied their chance to prove themselves four years ago.

Their efforts are noble. Their accomplishments are awesome testimony to how far the limits of our species can be pushed. But the framework in which they are being presented is unfair to the athletes and to the American public.

If the Mona Lisa were presented in a cheap frame from Building 19½, the contradiction between form and content could not be greater than the one created by the framework of commercialism, cheap drama and propaganda into which the heroic efforts of our athletes have been crammed.

We hear a lot about the clean, wholesome, "amateur" character of our athletes and the spirit of open competition and fair play that permeate the famous games. But what Americans who could not get to L.A. are ending up with is more than 90 percent propaganda. The bulk of it comes in the form of commercials designed to determine our opinions of various goods and services. The rest is to be found in the narrow, prejudiced viewpoint of the commentators who digest the events and then feed them to the viewing public.

The executives who decide how much broadcasting time will be dedicated to commercials are really making us pay for what we are getting.

Some of these commercials are strong stuff. Beatrice Foods has waged an extensive, expensive ad campaign - the result of 1,000 complicated corporate decisions, no doubt - to convince us that, without the multitude of goods and services offered by a company most viewers have never heard of before, Americans would still be living in the Dark Ages.

Besides the Beatrice barrage, we are pelted with beer commercials that pretend the chemical-ridden U.S. version of the malty brew is an integral part of "the Olympic spirit." A blue jeans manufacturer has apparently held enough sway with our Olympic Committee to change our traditional colors - red, white and blue - to several different shades of blue. The white and the red - originally symbols of the purity of our birth and the blood that has been shed to protect us - have been relegated to tiny stripes or patches in a field of pure blue jean blue.

If that does not get to seekers of "the Olympic spirit," the battle Snickers and M and M's are waging for the status of "Official Olympic Snack Food" might just suggest that we have come a long, long way from ancient Greece.

Some of that is to be expected. There are tremendous costs involved in the broadcasts. It's doubtful that the kind of overkill we are being subjected to is necessary to cover costs.

A much more insidious assault on our sensibilities has been mounted by the television commentators whom we rely on as our eyes and ears at The Games.

If "they" (our opponents) score a goal, we hear an unemotional, quasi-scientific analysis of the process that produced it.

If "we" score a goal, the world had better get ready to capitulate to "the American way of life" - including Coca Cola, Levi's, crucial candies and the panoply of products and services offered by Beatrice Foods.

Our boxers have been superb. No doubt about it. Their record says it all.

But why do we sit through match after match without "our" opponents' names even being mentioned after the introductory ceremonies. In several matches, we have known our country's foe only as "the Ugandan" or "the Columbian." They are not individuals. Apparently, they are not even people. They are ciphers to be tallied on our scoreboards. In defeat, they are examples of how we might end up if we were not lucky enough to be Americans.

The television network executives know there already exists a certain divergence of opinion regarding sports commentator Howard Cosell's unique approach to his task. Why would they strap us with his pompous posing and pandering at such a time as this, when the whole world is watching?

In the end, it is the viewers and the athletes who are getting cheated.

Assembled at the Olympic Games is the cream of the athletic crop the U.S. has worked eight years - given the 1980 boycott - to produce. These individuals have crossed a thousand emotional and physical thresholds to get where they are. They have a lot to tell us about "the thrill of victory and the agony of defeat." They have real knowlege of how men and women can maximize their potential - drive themselves to reach for what we would ordinarily fail to grasp.

But we don't get any insight into those secrets that make the Olympics an event filled with such high drama. Instead, we get a dumpy "patter man" in a toupee who never once in his life demanded athletic excellence of himself - whose entire athletic agenda consists of jumping to conclusions - trying to funnel the myriad events he is witnessing through his own narrow mind.

The battle Snickers and M and M's are waging for the status of 'Official Olympic Snack Food' suggest that we have come a long way from ancient Greece.

It does not seem fair. What would they be saying, given the "party line," if there were no boycott?

What would the running commentary be like if they covered a baseball game that included the Cubans? How about track and field events that included the state-owned steroid-saturated male and female monsters from "the Eastern Bloc?" How would Howard Cosell keep up his protopatriotic patter when Cuban Heavyweight Champion Teofilio Stevenson or any of his well-trained progeny took complete charge of the ring?

According to the pattern laid down in the existing coverage, those champions would, at best, be condemned with vain praise.

Actually, for us Americans, the coverage of the Olympics is not all that bad. Many of us grew up on commercials, and we have developed an uncanny knack for not seeing or hearing certain things on television. Regarding the commentators seeing everything through red, white and blue glasses, we all can see a day, in the not-too-distant future, when Ronald Reagan will be firing up the "I'm proud to be an American" parades again.

It is a fact the other countries are laying their own hype down in voiceovers that accompany footage shot in L.A. One story circulating has it that the broadcasters from China hired a bunch of Chinese-Americans to scream and shout at the right moments for the edification of viewers in China.

But imagine what people in other countries might think of Howard Cosell...or of us, when they learn how successful we have made him. In Russia, they will point to "The Mouth" mugging his way through a boxing match that appears to have only one contestant and they will say to anyone who will listen, "You see. I told you so."

Dear Sir:

Our recent letter to HUD about Columbia Point redevelopment dealt with the need to begin (before investing more taxpayers' money in the place) by cleaning up crime, violence, and vandalism.

As longtime Columbia resident Mrs. Betty White said on Channel 7 News, "the fault isn't with the place, it's with some of the people who live here," who should, in her view, long since have been prosecuted or evicted by the Boston Housing Authority.

And why not, one wonders? There is no secret about what Columbia Point has become. 350 useable housing units left out of an original 1504; the rest smashed, burned out and abandoned, $50,000 worth of planting around the buildings utterly destroyed; roofs over the elevators leaking because the copper flashing was ripped off year ago and sold, - and no dispute (in any of the intemperate press reactions to our letter) over the fact that these things were done by the project residents themselves.

Not by all of them, cetainly. Old people, for instance, who were eventually concentrated and segregated in 176-184 Monticello for their own protection (because it was impossible to use the halls in other buildings without being robbed) have obviously long been victims, not perpetrators. So, too, have other people, forced to live here by the Welfare System.

One would have thought, therefore, that Newton clergyman Howard Haywood or politicians like Matthew Jefferson would have been quick to deplore the conditions we called attention to, and eager to join us in asking for police protection, better social discipline and the eviction of trouble-makers so that law-abiding residents (present and future) at Columbia Point could live in peace and security.

But no. Quite the contrary. Instead of applauding, these indignant letter-writers have joined the anonymous editorialist of the Boston Globe in turning the whole thing on its ear. With a sort of 1-2-3 punch, we have been denounced for showing "prejudice" (about what, Rev. Haywood did not seem entirely clear but certainly furious) and for exhibiting "racism" and "economic bias" - which is about as silly as calling us six-legged mice.

Far from "opposing racially and economically mixed communities," members of the Ward 5 Republican Committee are quite proud, frankly, that we actually live in one. Newton-Waban has rich, poor, black, "White", and hispanic residents, and we have got on well together for years. How poor some of our neighbors are might well surprise Mr. Jefferson but how little "racist" should NOT surprise him, since he himself has been the black president of the Board of Aldermen - with as little fuss (or even notice) as the onetime black chairwoman of the School Commmittee.

To assert that we think crime a product of "race" is not only to tell a damaging and foolish lie about us, but also to overlook the fact that one can see proof to the contrary all around us here in not-all-that-affluent Newton. There is crime here, and vandalism sometimes, but it is surely worth noting that no local-resident black youth has ever, to my knowledge, been even remotely involved in such a thing.

What has gone on at Columbia Point would be condemned and worried about by all of us every race and economic class if it happened in Newton. To claim that it should be swept under the carpet if it happens, instead, in a nearby Dorchester housing project, and that even to mention it is somehow an act of "racism" or "prejudice" - is really quite absurd.

Almost as absurd as wondering why maintainance services at Columbia Point eventually stopped being efficient after years of earnest dilignece. One reason was that the maintainance man was shot in the back at 10 Brandon, and that he was only one of 4 people killed in that single building. Mr. Jefferson would be surprised, I think, at what things like that do to morale!

Chairman, Newton Ward 5
Republican Committee

Regan criticizes mockery of 'Stationerygate'

I am writing this letter to express my disappointment with Columnist Mark White's editorial of July 26 entitled "Stationerygate."

Shame on you for trying to downplay and make a mockery out of a subject of such importance. The facts are that the letter in question was a direct and flagrant use of official aldermanic stationery, unauthorized by its signers and inteneded to influence and affect the voters of Newton. Mark, as a practicing attorney and a ex-member of the Board of Aldermen, you should understand the sensitivity of this incident.

I do not take it lightly that my name and, in fact, the names of other members of the board were misused. There must be an investigation. Our citizens have the right to know the clear and honest facts regarding the democratic process and the letter in question.

I have no regrets about requesting an investigation. As an elected official, it is my responsibility to bring the incident to the forefront and safeguard our laws. The message must go out to any political group in the City that any violation of a free election will not go unchallenged.

Mark, with your previous and current public life experience you must recognize the importance of this issue by showing it the respect it deserves. If not, I believe the joke is on you.

Alderman-at-Large
Ward 6.

Newton Library program

Artworks can be yours for the asking

By Charlotte Meryman
Staff Writer

NEWTON — Imagine a place where colorful Cezannes, majestic Rembrandts and delicate Degas are free for the taking.

Where such rarities as a Mexican terra cotta head from the 11th Century, a wood carving from the Ivory Coast of Africa and Hannula's famous, abstract sculpture "Mother and Child" cost nothing.

Sound too good to be true? It's not.

On the second floor of the Newton Free Library's main building is a room filled with framed prints of works from all periods; precise, mounted replicas of ancient and contemporary sculptures; and original paintings, drawings, etchings and photographs by area artists.

The over 250 pieces available can be borrowed for up to two months through the library's "Art to Go" program. In addition, most of the works are up for sale.

Although you can't fill your house with the pieces (only one can be taken out at a time) you can keep a steady stream running through.

"It gives people an opportunity to develop a feeling for and an interest in art," said John Daley, assistant director of the Newton Free Library. "A lot of people get exposure for free to something they would (otherwise) never touch."

The service also gives exposure to local artists, who can lend works to the library with prices attached. The library receives 10 percent of any sales.

The only problem for borrowers is getting attached to prints and replicas that aren't for sale, says library staffer Virginia Webber, who administrates the circulating art program.

"When you've had a thing for two months you almost feel like you own it," Webber said. "It's hard to part with.

"One couple had a print of a little girl — Renoir's 'Portrait of Lucie Berard' — in their living room," she recalled. "It fit perfectly and they had a little girl . . ."

For many borrowers, the service provides a good way to try out unfamiliar art without investing a lot of money.

"I think your interest in art widens and changes the more you look at things," said Ernest Kruhmin, a Newton reference librarian who has taken frequent advantage of the circulating art program. "For me, the best part is, in the case of a great artist, sometimes finding a painting I've never seen before which strikes me."

Kruhmin first started borrowing from "Art to Go" several years ago, after he moved into a new apartment.

"It had all white walls and nothing of mine fit on them," he explained. "There were two very colorful, bright paintings by an artist who had lived in Newton and I took both of them. After having them on my wall for a couple of months and having people spontaneously say nice things about them, I decided to buy them."

As for prints and sculptures, Kruhmin says he has "always hated to return them."

Although the art service, started by City Librarian Virginia Tashjian, has been in action for over 15 years, the library is still building up its collection. Once a year, Webber and Daley order 10-15 new prints from the Redpath Company and pick up additional sculptures from Alva Museum Replicas, both based in New York state.

The pieces cover all periods and styles, from ancient Chinese carvings to soft, Impressionist landscapes and contemporary, abstract collages. There are both well-known and unfamiliar works by such artists as Picasso, Matisse, Constable, Wyeth, Cassatt, Rockwell, Homer, O'Keefe, Kandinsky, Miro and Chagall.

Busts of Ernest Hemingway, Mark Twain, Hans Christian Anderson and Walt Whitman grace two shelves. And new original works occasionally circulate through. The latest is a bold, large-scale reproduction of two "day of issue," 1983 Olympics postage stamps by Joseph Friel.

Webber's and Daley's main hope now is that someday they may have enough space to display all of the pieces. Many are stacked up behind desks and wedged between file cabinets in the small office the two share. But a record of each is kept on file and visitors frequently can look over the unhung works if they catch someone in the office.

"Art to Go" pieces can be viewed on the second floor of the main library building at 414 Centre St., Newton Corner. Hours are 9 a.m. to 9 p.m. Monday through Thursday and 9 a.m. to 6 p.m. on Friday.

Letter

Reilly explains his decision

During the past few weeks there has been much concern expressed over my decision not to grant a fireworks display permit for the St. Mary of Carmen Society during its annual festival. While I fully understand and support public debate on issues such as this, I am deeply disturbed and disheartened by the tone and direction these discussions have taken recently.

This decision, however, seems to have generated a response that does not revolve around public safety, but instead it has become a discussion that is frequently not based on fact or knowledge of the laws governing fireworks display. Therefore I am submitting this letter to clearly state the facts surrounding my decision. It is my hope that once you, the Members of the Board, and the interested parties understand the facts and reasoning behind my decision, that you will assist me in explaining to the public why I could not sign the permit.

I issued the society a permit in 1982 and 1983. These have been the only permits issued to this Society in over 30 years by the Fire Department for a supervised display. Taking into consideration the small area at Our Lady's, the closeness of the surrounding homes and the total disregard for my stipulation on the permit that only a ground display be used, I did not issue a permit in 1984. In establishing the restrictions of these permits, the society was present and readily agreed to comply with these and other rules. However, both years aerial displays were discharged.

Massachusetts law on supervised fireworks display clearly points out the responsibility of the person displaying the fireworks, and places him as the person responsible to see that these laws and rules are abided by.

I have prided myself on running one of the most professional fire departments in the commonwealth. For more than 32 years I have served as a firefighter in this city ad I have always tried to uphold the responsibilities of my job with a fair hand and a tone of professionalism; you and the people of this city would tolerate no less. It is for this reason that I am deeply disturbed by the comments made by Members of the Board that suggest that the Fire Department budget process will be politicized in order to punish me for upholding the laws of this state, and for the unpopular decision that I had to make. I did not expect my decision to be popular; the people of this city do not pay me to be popular, just to do my job as a fire safety expert in as professional a manner as possible. They, and the personnel of the Fire Department should not have public safety tampered with in order to make a political point.

I would like to lay to rest the accusation that my decision was result of my insensitivity to the people of Nonatum and the traditions of the Italian community. Those who argue this point demonstrate their ignorance of the facts and of my personal life. My wife of over 33 years was born in San Donato, Italy, and raised on Chapel Street in Nonatum. My children are every bit Italian as they are Irish. For years my family and I have rejoiced in the rich and diverse ethnic histories of our ancestors. In fact two of our most memorable vacations were in the streets in Dublin, Ireland to celebrate St. Patrick's Day, and in the village of San Donato, Italy to celebrate the festival of St. Mary of Carmel.

To those who would stoop so low as to suggest that my decision was motivated by lack of respect for Italian traditions, you couldn't be more incorrect! Your attitude has done little to promote a harmony of diverse cultures in our city, but instead you've opted to prey on the fears of people and promote diversions to further your own interest.

Finally, I made it clear to a member of this board that I would not be able to attend a meeting during the week of July 9, for the reason that my family and I were preparing to leave for New Hampshire to attend our son's wedding. I was assured that no meeting would be held. You can be sure my vacation plans coincided only with our son's wedding date in mind.

I look to all of you for support, but especially to the Committee on Public Safety, since that is the one and only issue at hand.

Closed door policy is probed

The Massachusetts Open Meeting Law, which applies to governmental entities at the state, local and county level, generally requires that meetings of such bodies be open to the public, that notice of such meetings be publicly posted and that accurate records of meetings be kept and made available to the public.

The purpose of the law, which was significantly revamped in 1975, is to eliminate much of the secrecy surrounding the deliberations and decisions on which public policy is based. It also recognizes that public officials might be "unduly hampered" if all gatherings of public officials were required to be open.

Harshbarger's office is responsible for enforcing its provisions in the cities and towns within Middlesex County.

According to guidelines formulated by his office in March, local governmental entities which the law applies to are "every board, commission, committee or subcommittee of any district, city, region, or town, however elected, appointed or otherwise constituted...

"Subcommittees appointed by any governmental board, commission or committee that is a governmental body are also covered by the law. It is the position of the district attorney that this includes not only subcommittees comprised of the parent governmental body's members, but also subcommittees or special purpose committees that may contain individuals who are not on the parent body, so long as the subcommittee or special purpose committee is carrying out delegated functions or responsibilities of the parent body," according to the guidelines.

They add, "The fact that the jurisdiction of the subcommittee or special purpose committee extends only to making recommendations to the parent governmental body does not render the law inapplicable."

Monday's action by Harshbarger's office was spurred by a hand-delivered letter from Auburndale resident Joseph Weinfeld, who recently submitted a proposal for the Main Library Facility Committee's consideration.

Weinfeld, a 70-year-old Stanton Avenue resident, is offering the city land behind his home free-of-charge for the creation of a new main library, elderly housing and a geriatric care facility. He sent his proposal to the mayor's committee two weeks ago and is now concerned that the pros and cons of his offer might not receive due consideration.

Mayor Theodore D. Mann announced the creation of the 12-member Main Library Facility Committee in May and asked its members to come up with a plan by late November that would build the city a new main library without municipal funding.

Beside the 12 full members, all of whom are residents, eight aldermen are ex-officio members, 10 residents form a Resource Task Force and three city employees act as staff support for the committee. All were appointed by Mann.

Newton Arts Center awarded $36,550 grant

By Frank DeBenedetto, Correspondent

NEWTONVILLE - People involved with the Newton Arts Center are looking to the future with excitement and optimism these days thanks to a grant from the Massachusetts Council on Arts and Humanities in the sum of $36,550 for the 1985 financial year.

The grant, which consists of merit aid funding in the amount of $21,000 for the center's general programming, a cultural resource grant of $8750 to be used in the production of a play by Newton North and Newton South high schools and a grant in the sum of $6800 for the center to work in cooperation with Continental Cablevision of Newton, was announced by the council earlier this summer.

According to Josephine Simon, executive director of the Arts Center, the grant is a new step forward in the seven-year history of the center.

"I feel very excited about the grant because it is an affirmation of our work here for the community," said Simon following a press conference at the center Tuesdsay. "It's going to head us in the direction where we can reach a new level of professional capability," she said.

"I'm also looking forward to working with Newton North and Newton South, even though I'm a little scared because it's such a tremendous undertaking," she said.

The two schools, along with the Newton Arts Center, will work in a joint effort on the writing, producing and staging of an original play, according to Simon.

Continental Cablevision of Newton will be involved in producing programs with the center.

"We will have a person from Continental Cablevision on our staff part time to produce programs for and about the Arts Center for the local cable channel," she said. "I'm also tremendously excited about this," said Simon.

Mary Ellen Zapata will be the person working on the cable programs.

Present at the conference were Sen. Jack Backman and Rep. Susan Schur, who offered their praise of the work at the center and their congratulations on the reception of the grant.

"This grant is an incentive for the City of Newton to continue on the wonderful goals that have been commenced upon," said Backman. "We have alot to do to educate for the appreciation of the higher things in life. We've gone a long way and we still have a long way to go."

According to Backman, over $13 million was allocated toward arts programs in Massachusetts last year, $3 million of which has come from the arts lottery and the rest of which has come from various charitable donations.

According to Susan Schur, a grant this large for a community organization gives recognition of the work going on at the Arts Center.

School surplus to be auctioned

NEWTON — With two elementary schools closing this summer, the School Department has acquired two buildings full of extra supplies and materials.

Many of these materials have been distributed to other schools in the system; some have been deemed unusable and junked; and the rest will be turned over to the city as surplus, to be auctioned off to the public or donated to needy schools and charities.

Both City Purchasing Agent Blair Kanbar and Kenneth Temkin, administrative assistant for support services for the Newton schools, said only severely damaged or outdated books are thrown out.

Kanbar said the city will be holding a public auction this September at Warren Junior High School to clear out surplus supplies. City officials will then try to donate unsold materials to other schools or charities, he said.

addition of his winnings would help put his firm "on a good, solid foundation."

He added that not all the recent windfall will be spent with such sound business sense. "I'll probably take a little bit and enjoy it," he commented.

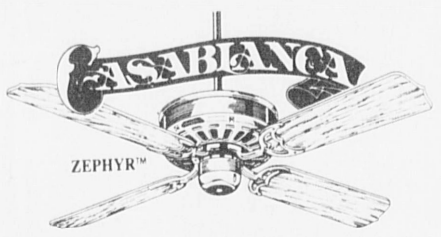

He is splitting a $4 million Megabucks jackpot, with the other half of it going to a group of four co-workers who reportedly played the same numbers every week for a year. He will receive $101,000 a year before taxes for the next 20 years.

The Newton South graduate said he has been deluged with phone calls from "old friends" since the news got out about his stroke of luck. There also have been some phone calls from stockbrokers suggesting investment opportunities, he added. His response was to tell them, "Listen very carefully to the next sound you hear" just before he hung up the phone.

Young Barnel also said he has gotten calls from some young ladies, old friends he has not seen in a long, long time. "Yeah, right...," he has responded to their unusually solicitous advances. "Where were you last weekend?"

Asbestos removal lingers on company has 30 days to provide the information, that Maloney was taken off the job before 30 days and that the company has not given the city any test results.

Cameron would not release any data from Hygeia's tests and said he will not do so until the entire removal project is completed. He said, however, that there "was a great deal of fiber in the air" and that the levels (for asbestos and for other fibers) exceeded the contract, state and federal standards.

According to Hygeia, Maloney's workers violated many of the proper removal procedures, Funk said. The procedure for removing the ceiling material, for example, dictates that it be sprayed before it is taken down to saturate the friable asbestos fibers and keep them from dispersing into other areas, he explained.

"They were letting it fall to the floor, then spraying it, soaking it on the floor after the fact," Funk alleged. "They weren't paying attention to what they were wearing (protective clothing is required and must be removed when leaving the work area) and they were walking into stairwells and elevators and onto other floors — contaminating them," he continued.

During the removal process, which involves the entire fourth floor of the high school, work areas must be hermetically contained and walls must be protected with polyurethane. Funk said Hygeia reported that the tape used to hold up the plastic was inexpensive and ineffective.

Funk said a meeting was held with Maloney representatives a week before the company was thrown off the job and that all of the concerns and expectations were laid out in full. He said the company displayed no efforts to comply with the hygienist after the meeting and failed to come up with the new time schedule requested by the city.

Under the contract, the asbestos removal company would have faced $25,000 per day in liquidation damages if the job had not been finished on time, Funk said.

Although Maloney contends his company had completed half of the necessary work, Cameron said there was "no way" the workers were halfway through. Cameron asserted that by mid-July the workers, who had started the project June 19 or 20, were already eight days behind.

"The biggest difficulty is the fact that we have a responsibility to have the school open and ready to function by the fifth of September and to maintain the air quality within the spaces," Cameron said.

Two years ago, the city had considerable difficulty at Newton North with another asbestos removal contractor, Delta Paint Company (DPC) General Contractors of Miami. In that case, although the company was never taken off the job, the required work was not finished by the start of classes and had to be completed last summer vacation.

Cameron said the procedure used at North in 1982 allowed for closure of certain areas and postponement of the work. But this time, by removing all of the ceiling material in question, Maloney has committed the city to completing the project before the building can be opened again, he explained.

The Building Commissioner said "it's going to be extremely tight" trying to prepare the school for its scheduled Sept. 5 opening, but noted that National Surface Cleaning has two to three times as many workers on the job one day more per week and for longer shifts than Maloney had. The new contractor will also face $25,000 per day in liquidation damages for each day the work runs over its scheduled completion date.

Cameron said ceiling material dispersed by Maloney into inaccessible areas has been vacuumed and extracted as much as possible and that any remaining material has been encapsulated to prevent fiber spread.

Although the city is seeking compensation from Maloney for the added cost of the new contractor, who originally submitted a $662,000 bid, Funk reported that so far, Maloney's bonding company does not officially consider their client to be at fault.

For $17, pets receive wash, cut, dry and nails.

Jim White is firm but gentle with his canine customers.

A dog's life

understandably. But suprisingly, none of the patrons are yipping or whining. Each, instead, sports a sheepish, guilty look in its eyes. Perhaps knowing "the routine," as Malamphy calls it, is enough to keep them quiet.

'Some come running in here. Others just as soon wish we'd vanish from the face of the earth.'
Jim White

After waiting his turn in one of the barren wire cages, "Buffet" is one of the first to lose his overgrown coat. White instinctively clips and turns the shaking schnauzer, as he speaks casually about the hazards of the job.

He turns his forearm around to reveal a small, practically healed wound — a bite from a disgruntled "customer". "But," he interjects, "it only happens one or twice a year." Malamphy quickly responds, "Where's the wood?" and knocks on the wall, as if failure to do so would bring instant and inevitable doom.

After a basic clip with an instrument that much resembles a barber's tool, Buffet's nails are cut and his ears cleaned. White carries him from the rubber-top table to the large bath-tub-like sink and douses the now-smaller dog with a hose. Following a quick shampoo and towel dry, he is replaced in a cage and a three-foot high hair dryer is positioned outside to dry him.

"He'll be dry in 10 minutes," says White, also of Roslindale.

Rates for such a service around Newton are comparable. Grooming at Debbie's Pet Land, which has 10 locations including one in Newtonville, starts at about $18, according to Manager John Rodriguez.

Cuts at Debbie's can be more elaborate, with some of the 25 "showcuts" Rodriguez could think of, taking up to five or six hours.

White seemed to think that there is less of a need for such extravagance. "People are more practical now," he says, explaining that most owners request short, easy-to-care-for styles.

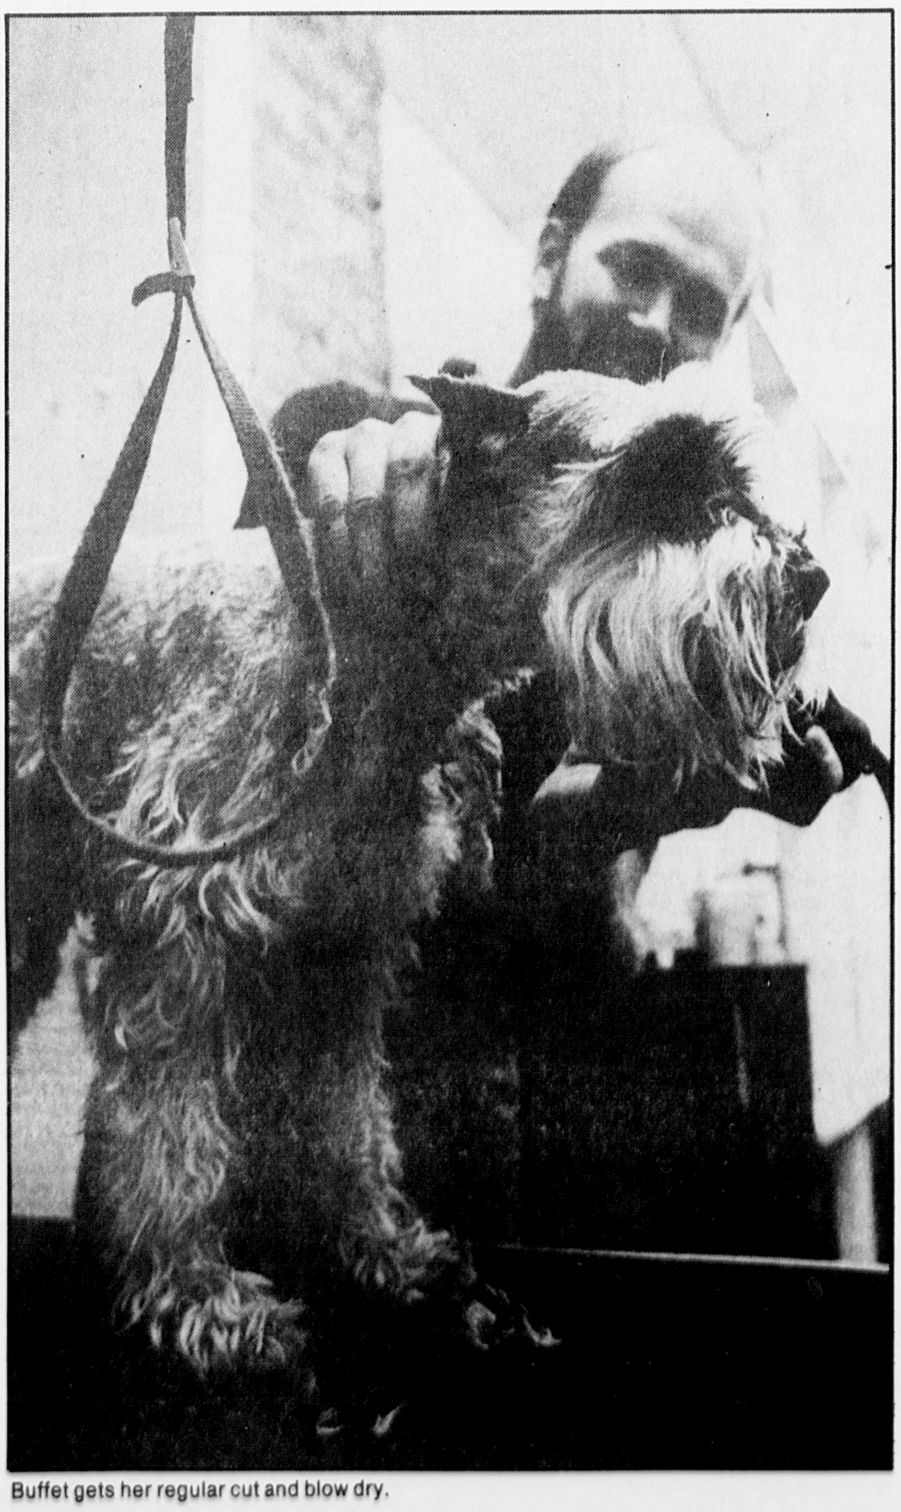

At Newton Kennel Shop, Manager Joe Souza says time is money. "The amount of time we have to spend is the bottom line" on price. A well-behaved mini-poodle could be as low as $20.

At all three establishments cats are only a small percentage of business. "Cats are very tricky," Souza explains. "They're not as cooperative, in many cases. They're independent animals and not used to taking orders."

What kind of person takes their pet to be groomed? "A pet lover," Souza says, "one who considers the animal, is concerned about the pet and someone who realizes the responsibilities of owning a pet."

Looking around at the piles of curly blond and gray fur on the floor, Auburndale Grooming Shop's White says, "You won't get out of here without hair on you. Nobody does."

Nobody, but the "customers".

Bites from disgruntled customers are infrequent.

Red Cross volunteers wanted

K of C aids Newton youth

Wesley Metro, 16, a sophomore at Newton North High School has a history of cerebral palsy with severe physical involvement. He is incapable of using his arms or legs, and he cannot speak.

Now, however, thanks to the Knights of Columbus, he can produce sounds using his new Express III micro computer communicator. This unit, with printout as well as voice output, will enable Wesley to communicate his thoughts, ideas and needs. It is operated to a lightbeam mounted on a headgear.

The communicator was presented by James Devoe, the grand knight of Newton Council at a recent ceremony in the Council Home. It was an emotionally charged moment when Wesley used his new "voice" to thank the Knights of Columbus.

Mayor Theodore Mann lauded Wesley for his accomplishments and praised the Knights for their dedication to helping the handicapped children. He promised to continue his practice of proclaiming Columbus Day weekend as Knights of Columbus Tootsie Roll Weekend.

Lois Metro expressed her sincere graditude to the Knights for their continuing interest in and assistance for her son.

Newton Council could not possibly afford to pay the high cost of this unit, but the Massachusetts State Council K. of C. provided the funds from their Charity Fund. This fund is financed by a statewide drive known as the Tootsie Roll Drive conducted each year over the Columbus Day Weekend. Knights and their families and friends station themselves at the shopping centers, churches, etc. distributing specially wrapped Tootsie Rolls while holding cannisters where people can contribute to the cause.

The fund is intended to provide assistance to the physically handicapped up to the age of 19 and to the mentally retarded of all ages regardless of race, color or creed.

Beverly Harmon, RN, home health aide supervisor Newton, Wellesley, Weston Visiting Nurse Association, Mary O'Neil Ed.D, assistant director/community services, Mass. Bay Community College, and Connie Richards, R.N., M.A., M.S., instructor, discuss the new home health aide program which is being offered this fall.

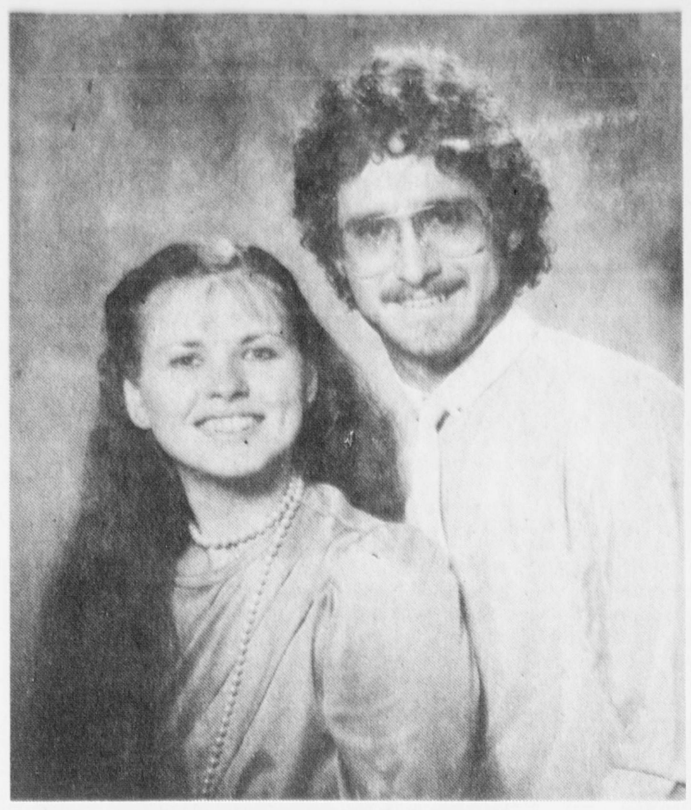

Homemaker-home aide course being offered

A new homemaker-home health aide training program will be offered this fall at Massachusetts Bay Community College in conjunction with the Newton, Wellesley, Weston Visiting Nurse Association. The course will prepare individuals for certification in order to obtain employment as homemaker-home health aides.

Through classroom, laboratory, and clinical experiences, students will have the opportunity to gain the knowledge and skills essential to provide personal care in the home to individuals of all ages under the supervision of a registered nurse.

The course meets and exceeds the requirements for such programs as established by the Massachusetts Department of Health. There are no prerequisites; contact hours: 60 (includes instruction in settings arranged by the Newton, Wellesley, Weston Visiting Nurse Association).

Register now by mail or at walk-in registration on Saturday, Aug. 25, 10 a.m.-1 p.m., or Tuesday-Wednesday, Aug. 28-29, 10 a.m.-8 p.m. For further information 237-1100.

Police log

Man shoots himself by accident

NEWTON CORNER — A 21-year-old Newton Corner man accidentally shot himself last week while handling a .22 caliber target pistol, police said.

Police said he displayed an entrance and exit wound to his right calf following the 4 p.m. mishap. He was transported to Newton-Wellesley Hospital, where he was later treated and released, records show.

No plea entered in speed-chase case

NEWTON — A 21-year-old Needham man entered no pleas last week to a series of charges arising from a high-speed chase that involved police cruisers from two separate communities.

Thomas J. Yoke, of 78 Elder Rd., Needham was arrested early on the morning of July 30 following a 20-minute police chase along the Newton-Needham line. Court records show he is an assembly line worker for the Raytheon plant in Waltham.

The suspect was pursued after police received reports of a disturbance at Callahan's Restaurant at 100 Needham St. in Newton.

Yoke allegedly brandished a pump shotgun in the restaurant's parking lot, police said.

He faces several charges, including five counts of assault with a dangerous weapon (motor vehicle), malicious destruction of property (rental car), carrying a dangerous weapon (pump shotgun) and possession of a firearm without a firearms identification permit.

He is due back in court Aug. 27. Judge Monte G. Basbas set bail for the defendant at $5,000 surety, or $500 cash.

Yoke was also arraigned in Dedham District Court on similar charges arising from the same incident and is due back there Aug. 28, records show.

Thief steals coat, false teeth

NEWTON — A thief made off with a man's set of false teeth last week when he stole a grey sportscoat left unattended in a parked car, records show.

The dentures were left inside a coat pocket, police said. The theft was reported at 8:15 a.m. after an unidentifed white male reached into a 1983 Chevrolet Blazer parked on Commonwealth Avenue and stole the clothing, records show.

Another indecent exposure incident

WABAN — A man riding a bicycle last week near the intersection of Chestnut Street and Commonwealth Avenue allegedly exposed himself in an indecent manner to a passing female pedestrian, police said.

The incident allegedly occured at about 9:15 p.m., but was not reported until 1:45 p.m. the next day, police said.

The woman told police a white male stopped while riding his bicycle to ask her for the correct time and then allegedly exposed himself, records show.

Lost $3,000 in diamond scam

NEWTON CENTRE — A Langley Deli employee was the victim of a $3,000 scam last week when he forked over cash for three fake diamonds he believed were genuine, police said.

The swindle was reported to police Wednesday at about 9:15 a.m. after a Framingham resident who works at the Langley Deli at 30 Langley Road realized he was the victim of a scam.

Police said he was taken by an unidentified con man who approached him Tuesday with three diamonds, purportedly valued between $12,000 and $16,000, and offered them for sale at a 60 percent discount.

The con man claimed they were the property of his wife, who he said died recently, and suggested they have them appraised before they made a deal, police said.

The victim declined to have them appraised and told the man to return Wednesday to allow him the time to collect the cash for a sale, police said.

The man returned at 7:30 a.m. Wednesday and exchanged the diamonds for $3,000 cash, leaving the deli at the conclusion of the sale, police said. The victim then had the diamonds appraised and was told they were fakes.

The con man was described as white, in his late forties, about 5-feet, 9-inches tall, weighing 180 pounds and wearing a commodore's cap and visor.

Ordered to make public service

NEWTON — A 19-year-old Newton man was ordered Thursday to contribute 500 hours of community service after sufficient facts were found in Newton District Court on a charge of unlawfully obtaining a controlled substance.

Scott Cohen, of 40 Adella Ave., Newton, admitted that sufficient facts existed to warrant a finding of guilty to a charge of unlawfully obtaining valium. Judge Monte G. Basbas continued the case without a finding until Aug. 5, 1985.

He ordered the defendant to serve 500 hours of public service.

Shamie headquarters burglarized

Police said senatorial candidate Raymond Shamie's Newton campaign office was entered sometime between 9:30 p.m. Thursday and 10:30 a.m. Friday. Entry to the Webster Street office was gained by slipping a lock on the front door.

Stolen were four pushbutton deskphones, an American flag, a window fan and various office supplies, police said.

Torn political literature was strewn about the room and a hand-scrawled note with obscene writing was left at the scene, police said.

Lynda Glenn nominated for Policewoman of Year Award

Lynda Glenn, president of the Newton police union, the city's branch of the Massachusetts Police Association, has been nominated for Policewoman of the Year by Chief William F. Quinn.

The 37-year-old assigned to the patrol bureau is "a good police officer and has done some outstanding work, above and beyond her work here," Quinn said.

This is the first time Newton has participated in the Seventh Annual Policewoman of the Year Award sponsored by the International Association of Women Police.

Glenn's position as a full-time law enforcement officer who has the power to arrest, along with her consistently high performance record, qualified her for the nomination, according to community service officer Cynthia Webster.

Just last month, Glenn was one of the first officers to volunteer to ascend a tower on Needham Street to help rescue a 17-year-old who had climbed the structure and threatened to jump, Webster said. She also assisted in apprehending the youth and containing him when he became violent on the ground.

Glenn, who grew up in the western Massachusetts, has been on the Newton Police Department since March of 1975 and earned her masters of education in public service/judicial system degree from Boston University.

The International Association for Women Police was established in 1915 to promote the highest standards in law enforcement and will announce the winner of the award within the next few weeks.

Firing decision stands for Frost

A hearing for dismissed officer Thomas Frost failed to convince city officials to reinstate the 14-year police veteran.

Frost was ordered last week to return all police-issued equipment — including his gun and badge — after he was notifed by hand-delivered letter of the city's decision following a July 26 hearing before Mayor Theodore D. Mann and Chief William Quinn.

Frost was fired July 5 for allegedly separating himself from his duties with the police department. He claims he is suffering from a recurrence of a 1982 back injury and refuses to report to work.

He has not been granted injured-on-duty status and, over the past two months, has exhausted his special leave privileges.

"The city physician (Dr. John LaRossa) has found the officer capable of performing all the duties of a police officer," says Asst. City Solicitor Gary Blau. "He moves normally and without pain for the most part. The chief has gone along with the city physician, which is his right and duty, and the man refuses to come to work."

Kenneth Pollenz, an attorney with a Boston law firm, said Monday he is preparing a federal complaint to be filed in U.S. District Court alleging civil rights violations in connection with Frost's dismissal.

"I'm preparing the federal complaint and it will be filed soon," Pollenz said.

Joseph P. McParland, a Quincy lawyer who acts as attorney for the Newton Police Association, is already representing Frost in a Middlesex Superior Court suit seeking the restoration of pay and benefits Frost exhausted while he remained at home during the period he was allegedly suffering from back pain.

Semi-retirement has its benefits

Elderly intern helps his peers

By Frank Mulligan
Staff Writer

NEWTON — At 66-years-old, after undergoing major surgery twice in the last seven years, Ira Smith decided to become an intern because it "sounded interesting."

Smith, a West Newton resident, is a volunteer intern with the Wayland Police Department working closely with Crime Prevention and Safety Officer George Norton.

The internship is the result of 120 class hours training with volunteers age 55 or older as counselors or mediators for elderly crime victims and elderly witnesses in the federally funded Law Enforcement and the Elderly program at Middlesex Community College.

During his first week at the Wayland Police Department, Smith said, he and Norton had to "quiet down" the residents of an apartment house for the elderly in the wake of an assault and robbery of one old woman living alone in one of the apartments.

Smith said that two young men allegedly entered the apartment on a ruse, beat the woman severely enough to warrant three days in the hospital, and threatened to rape her before they eventually robbed her.

Smith added that the message they gave the elderly residents was basically the same given in meetings with the elderly, "You can't open your door to strangers under any circumstances."

When asked about undergoing a triple coronary bypass last year and surgery for bladder cancer six years ago, Smith responds, "At first it seems like a big thing," and adds the bypass was, "really only like having a tooth pulled."

Smith added that he often rode five to 10 miles on a stationary bicycle, though not as often as he felt he should, and that he tried to get down to the West Newton Square Health Spa three times-a-week.

Smith retired from a career as a Property Disposal Officer for the Department of Defense 11 years ago but adds, "I really haven't retired."

Every year he works as a substitute teacher in social studies, English, and business and also donates his spare time to participate in a hospital visitor program offered by the Ostomy Association and the Masons. Smith has a masters degree in education and is a past master of three Masonic lodges.

Smith read of the Law Enforcement and the Elderly program in a newspaper item last December, he said, and filled out an application because it sounded interesting. "Actually, it turned out that they received more applications than they could handle. They had to pick 25 candidates from 50 applications," Smith commented.

He said the class quickly convinced the program's director, Barbara Rubin, that to be effective they would have to "work with the families of the elderly, too. We'd have to know about younger people as well."

Smith added, "I don't think any of us ended up as elder advisors as such. One person is working in the probation department in Newton District Court. Some are doing family counseling."

Smith credits Norton with much of the success he has experienced in the program. "We hit it right off. George speaks about five languages. You never know what language he'll be speaking when he answers the phone."

Smith added that he was taking Spanish classes four mornings-a-week at Norton's suggestion because a knowledge of the language would help Smith in his community work.

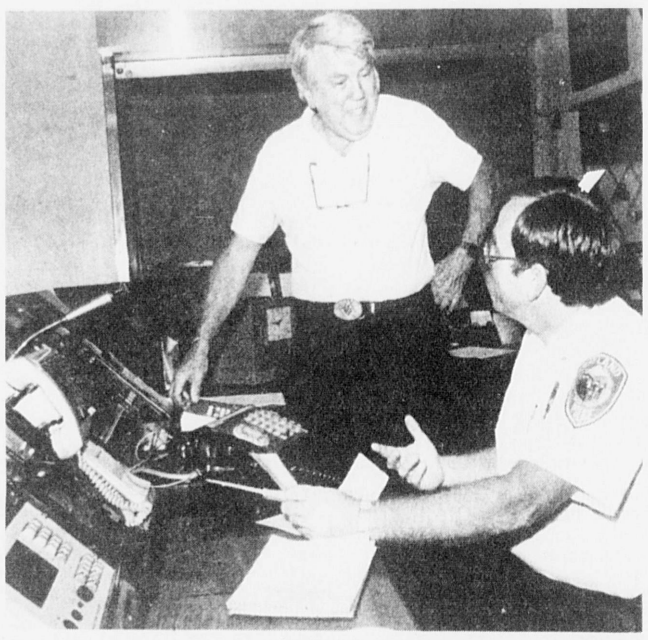

Smith recalled Norton's first words to him as he stepped into the station were: "You're the guy they're sending me. I thought you were going to be some gray-haired old coot."

Because of Officer Norton's support and encouragement, Smith added, his duties brought him into contact with all segments of the community.

"We go to senior meetings. We do security checks where we'll suggest locks and alarm systems. We've fingreprinted almost every three-year-old and four-year-old in town as part of the Child Find program." Smith said and added with a laugh, "All they want to do is look at the jail."

Though he is free to come and go as he pleases, Smith said he had completed the 120 hours of community service required by the program over a month ago.

Smith added that he and Norton were usually in transit, heading from one area of the community to another and that, when he proposes an idea, Norton invariably replies, "Great. Do it."

Street repairs in works toward black-topping the city's most famous street.

"The condition of Commonwealth Avenue at the present time, if it further deteriorates, would jeopardize public safety," according to Hickey, who admitted the "absolutely necessary" resurfacing is akin to "using a band-aid when major surgery is needed."

The effort will only "buy time" for Commonwealth Avenue, he added, hopefully close to four years' worth, when $5 million in federal Urban System Project funding is expected to become available, allowing the city to undertake a massive, three-phase reconstruction effort which will take eight years to complete.

Three other Urban Systems Projects - a long-awaited one in West Newtron Square and others in Newton Corner and Route 9 in Thompsonville - will start this fall, Hickey said.

The $750,000 Parker Street project and three other small residential street reconstructions - Alderwood Road near Boston College Law School, Lenglen Road near Our Lady's Help of Christians Church, and Hay Road in Oak Hill Park - are currently underway, Hickey said.

Work on the section of Parker north of Route 9 is "virtually completed" and Hickey said he expects the portion from Route 9 to Dedham Street to be finished by the time school opens the first of September.

Bids for the reconstruction of Woodward and California streets should be opened this week and work on those roadways, which should cost around $700,000, is also scheduled for completion by early September, he added.

Other streets, including Valentine Street, are due to be reconstructed next year as part of $2.1 million bonded package spread out over the next two-and-a-half years, according to Hickey.

Policemen cited for bravery

By Frank DeBenedetto
Correspondent

BOSTON - Three Newton police officers received citations for bravery from Gov. Michael S. Dukakis Friday for rescuing 10 people from a burning building on the morning of Dec. 17, 1983.

Newton police officers Ronald J. Perrault, Matthew Cummings and Sgt. Francis A. MacKenzie received the citations in a ceremony at the State House in which the governor presented the first George L. Hanna Medal of Honor to two Cambridge police officers who were involved in a shootout on June 9, 1983.

Perrault, MacKenzie and Cummings, each of whom were nominated for the Hanna Award, were cited for their bravery in a fire that swept through Bunny's Food Market and the tenement apartment buliding above it on River Street. The three officers were on the scene within one minute, at which point Sgt. MacKenzie turned on the lights and sirens of the three cruisers the officers pulled up in.

The three then ran into the building and banged flashlights on the apartment doors to awake residents. Despite heavy smoke in the building and the absence of any breathing apparatus, the officers managed to lead 10 people from the building without injury.

"I wish I could give the George L. Hanna Medal of Honor to each and every police officer here. They have all shown bravery above and beyond the call of duty," Dukakis said prior to the presentation of the award and citations.

"These men offer an example of what police officers all over the commonwealth must do every day," he said.

George L. Hanna was a Massachusetts State Trooper who was killed while making an apparently routine traffic stop in Auburn. The award is the first statewide award that recognizes the bravery and heroism of Massachusetts police officers.

Also present at the ceremonies were Hanna's widow, Marilyn, who presented the award with Dukakis. Newton Mayor Theodore Mann and Police Chief William Quinn were also present and took part in presenting citations to the Newton officers.

Police officers from Woburn, Boston, Lawrence, Chelsea and Somerville were also honored.

Glick puts Mosca into finals

NEWTON — Righthander Jon Glick celebrated his 17th birthday by allowing only one hit over the last four innings as the Mosca Club nipped Auburndale Sports Shop, 2-1, to advance to the National League playoff finals for the third straight year.

Despite Glick's effort, it took Dan Pill's clutch single in the bottom of the seventh to give Mosca the win at Lincoln Park, as Auburndale's Dan Deverix turned in an outstanding effort of his own, despite pitching his second complete game in as many nights.

One reason Deverix was so tough was that he allowed only one walk the entire evening. Unfortunately, that solitary lapse directly led to his downfall.

John Toyias led off the bottom of the seventh with that free pass. Pillan Thirumalaisamy then had orders to bunt Toyias over. The bunt bounced off of home plate but stayed fair, and as three players converged on it, the alert Toyias hustled all the way into third.

That hit put the cap on an effort that saw Mosca come from behind, both in the series and in the game. The winners lost the first game of the series, 6-4, and then had to take two straight to advance. In the rubber match on Friday, they were down, 1-0, before fighting back.

The lone Auburndale run of the game came in the third, when the losers put together two of their four hits around a walk.

Tom Albright got the first single. After he was forced at second by Tom Dalicandro, Paul Howley drew one of the seven free passes that Glick issued in the contest.

Paul Peruzzi gave Auburndale what proved to be a very temporary lead with another basehit. (There were no extra base hits in the game.)

Auburndale's lead lasted only until the bottom of the third when Mosca matched it with a tally of its own on three consecutive singles. Adam Rosman, John Fletcher and second baseman Matt Spengler each ripped safeties to create the 1-1 tie.

That was to end the scoring until the seventh, although Auburndale had a good chance to take the lead in the sixth. Only a superb defensive play by Mosca kept the deadlock intact.

A wild streak by Glick got him into trouble. He hit Dino Leone, and walked Deverix, before both advanced on a passed ball. Al Madden stroked a fly to right as Leone tagged, but Rosman hit first baseman Evan Kushner with a perfect throw, and Kushner in turn threw a strike to catcher Marco Paglia to nail Leone, ending the inning.

As a result, for the third straight year, Mosca and the Boys' Club will square off for the National League title in a best-of-five series.

Clubbies advance

A bases-clearing triple by winning pitcher Joe King keyed a five-run rally in the top of the seventh, as the Boys' Club came back to defeat St. Bernard's, 11-8, and advance into the finals of the National League playoffs.

The Boys' Club took the series, 2-1.

The five-run seventh for the Boys' Club began when Chris Coen reached on an error. Bob Connerney and Chris Pachus smacked singles to load the bags, and King, who had come on in relief in the sixth, belted a triple to deep center for three runs. He scored on a sacrifice fly by Mike Walsh. The winners weren't done yet, as Mitch Nash singled, stole second and third, and scored on a fielder's choice by Colin Ryan.

The Boys' Club had plated three in the top of the sixth to bring the team within two runs. Down, 8-3, Fritz Phillips rapped a single between walks to Ryan and Connerney to load the bases. King and Walsh drew free passes to score two runs, and the third came home on an error at first.

After the winners jumped out to a 2-0 lead in the second inning, St. Bernard's scored four in the bottom of the frame to take the lead. Don Natale and Steve Caissie scored singles, and Steve Chapman knocked in Natale with a third safety. Andy White walked to load the bases, and Ben Adner tied the game by forcing in a run with a walk.

Glenn Legault singled in the last two runs to take a 4-2 lead. The bottom of the third saw St. Bernard's plate three more to open up a five-run lead. Dave Boule reached on an error, and scored the first run of the stanza on a triple by Caissie.

Clemente sparks 7-run inning as Clubbies win

NEWTON — Guy Clemente singled twice to spark a seven-run Boys' Club fourth inning, giving his club a 1-0 lead in the International League's Copp Division finals.

Clemente, who had three hits in the game, singled as the second batter of the inning and then capped the rally with a two-run basehit at the other end in the game, played at Cabot Park.

The teams were locked in a 3-3 battle until the Boys' Club finally broke it open in that frame. The winners were aided by a couple of errors and four walks issued by Upper Falls hurler Ron Carson.

An error opened the floodgates. That was followed by Clemente's first hit and a walk to Kurt Kaloustian. Shortstop Mark Maiocca took advantage of the situation to rip a two-run single, giving the Boys' Club a lead it would never relinquish.

After Mark Cadman walked to reload the bases, Bill MacDougall reached on an error that resulted in another run. Two straight walks accounted for two more markers, before Clemente came up again and banged his second hit of the inning, making it 11-3.

Things looked bad for the Boys' Club early on, as Upper Falls held leads of 2-0 and 3-1. In the top of the first, Singles by Ron Vachon, Carson and Ted Donovan drove in one run, and Eric Larson later plated another with a basehit.

The Boys' Club answered with one in the bottom half, but Upper Falls tallied another in the third. In the bottom of that frame, the winners tied it up with a pair.

The Boys' Club, which finished first in the regular season, will send southpaw George Haggie to the mound against second-place Upper Falls tonight as the best-of-three series continues at Upper Falls Field at 5:30.

At Lincoln Park, Matt Selig scampered home on a wild pitch in the bottom of the sixth to give On the Road a 10-9 decision in the opening game of the Murphy Division finals. That completed a comeback from a 9-6 deficit for the regular season champs in the game which was called after six due to darkness.

A three-run rally for On the Road in the fifth set up the final frame, in which the winners pushed the run across on only one hit.

Selig got on on an error to get things going. Evan Galanis singled him to third and then stole second. Oak Hill walked Craig McGary intentionally to set up a force all around, but the move proved useless when a pitch got away and Selig came home.

That rally was made possible by the three in the fifth, which came home on a Greg Manthei double. Walks to Galanis, Tom McGary and Chris Scalia loaded the sacks for Manthei, and the shortstop drilled one down the left field line for three runs.

Early on, it didn't look as though On the Road would need such heroics, scoring five times in the opening stanza.

Jim Core singled, Manthei walked and Core stole third before Tom McGary lofted a sacrifice fly for run number one. Two more free passes to Galanis and Craig McGary loaded them again for rightfielder Mark Laughlin and, like Manthei, he cleaned them in a hurry with a two-bagger.

Laughlin was chased home by P.J. O'Toole, who singled.

The series continues tonight at Newton South at 5:30.

7 wasn't enough for her

By Frank DeBenedetto
Correspondent

WEST NEWTON — Imagine being a mother of seven, a grandmother and still having enough energy to pursue a career in law. Sound incredible?

Anne Marie Carleo of West Newton recently took the bar exam and is now awaiting the results which will determine her future. Although her past achievements are nothing to sneer at, what is ahead of her will be the culmination of four years of diligent study and hard work.

"I just decided I wanted to pursue the study of the law. Once I decided what I wanted to do, I did it," she said, sitting in the living room of her home surrounded by college graduation pictures of her children.

School was nothing new for her, since she earned a degree in nursing before she was married.

"I gradually worked my way into law school, finishing college at Emmanuel in 1979 and then applying, but I never read or studied as much as I did when I got there," she recalled, mentioning that she enjoyed reading in her spare time.

While attending day classes, Carleo has spent at least five hours each night for the past three years studying for her degree from the New England School of Law in Boston.

"It wouldn't be worth going to law school if you didn't put in as much work as possible," she said.

While the soft-spoken Carleo speaks humbly of her achievements she is quick to note the need to be competitive in law school.

"Anyone can do it, it's all a matter of making up your mind. I'm no different than anyone else. A law student in the New England area is in a very competitive situation as far as this field goes. It's basically a survival experience there. A lot of students who graduate don't even think they'll pass the bar," she said.

"Passing the bar" requires a two-day exam that tests a prospective lawyer in practically every phase of the law. One day consists of a 200-question multiple choice exam and the other is divided into 10 essays, five in the morning and five in the afternoon.

Carleo said, "The first day of multi-state law was harder," than the second day. All in all the 12 hours of test-taking was "quite difficult," she said with an embarassed laugh.

Carleo became interested in law while working in the congressional offices of Fr. Robert Drinan and Barney Frank, the former and current area congressmen. Although her initial idea was to follow her interest in governmental law, now she isn't quite sure what she would like to do after the bar exam.

Anne Marie Carleo

"There are so many aspects of this field that I really can't decide which one I like the best, but I do like things that deal with government," she explained.

When Carleo isn't studying she spends time with her family and its newest member, her two-year-old grandson, Matthew.

"Of course I'm proud of my family, I think every mother should be. I'm proud of my grandson. It's wonderful to have a baby around for a change, since all my children are out on their own now except for my youngest," she said.

Her youngest child, 19-year-old Thomas, has just finished his first year at UMass-Amherst. Joseph, 22, works for the state Department of Mental Health. Another son, Christopher, is a civil engineer. John, is an architect. Donna, the youngest of her two daughters, is married and works at a computer parts company. Robert, Jr., her oldest son is a lawyer; and her oldest child, Beth, is married with a child of her own and works in the state Senate with Newton/Brookline Sen. Jack Backman.

Carleo added that her family and husband Robert have been very supportive about this career move, and that this support meant a great deal to her.

"They're all glad that I did it and they were behind me the whole way. That was really nice to know. I think a person needs that sometimes, but anyone who wants to do it can do it," said Carleo.

The frustrations of finding a home

By Charlotte Meryman, Staff Writer

NEWTON CENTRE — Ellen Leger has been looking for an apartment for herself, her husband and her two children for over a year.

By her own estimate, she has followed up on every available rental in the city and has pursued many in surrounding areas. She has contacted local churches and temples, the mayor's office and her state representative's office.

Since last summer, she has been shown only one apartment. The rest of the time, she is turned away on the phone when the real estate agent or owner involved learns that she has children.

"It sounds totally unlikely and totally incredible, but it's the truth," Leger declared. "I've never experienced anything like this in my life."

Although agents and owners cite several reasons for rejecting her, there appear to be three main stumbling blocks to Leger's search: the lead paint law, designed to protect children under six (she has a four-year-old and a one-year-old); cost (two-bedroom apartments in Newton usually start at $600); and the perceived undesireability of young children.

Kids can be a liability in the search for rental housing.

'There's nothing wrong with wealth, but you shouldn't have to be a millionaire to have a decent place to live.' Ellen Leger

"My parents have lived here for the past 16 years and I've been in the community a long time," she said. "It's a good place for raising children. It has a good school system and it's a town-oriented community.

"My friends are here," Leger said. "My family is here. This is our community and I feel like we're being pushed out. ... Unless you have a lot of money to buy a house, you cannot have a child in this community."

City will pay fees for Mann

By Edward Cafasso
Staff Writer

NEWTON — The state's Supreme Judicial Court (SJC), ending two-and-a-half years of protracted debate, has ruled the city must pay legal fees incurred by Mayor Theodore D. Mann during a court battle with his former secretary.

The August 7 ruling, announced last Wednesday by City Solicitor Daniel Funk, upholds the validity of the city's "indemnification ordinance," which protects from financial loss elected officials and others involved in civil rights cases arising from their duties.

The unanimous decision by a five-member panel of the SJC deals a final death blow to a 10-taxpayer-suit filed in late 1981 by businessman and former aldermanic candidate Vincent Fillipone. A series of previous decisions by lower courts had ruled both for and against Fillipone and the 13 other resident plaintiffs.

"It is unfortunate that the city of Newton has been put to tremendous expense by this taxpayers' lawsuit during the past two-and-a-half years. It is quite probable that the taxpayers' lawsuit, seeking to deny the mayor the legal fees to which he is entitled, will have caused the city greater expense than will the legal fees themselves," according to a press release issued by Funk.

Funk could not provide an exact accounting of the charge for the services of Mann's Boston-based attorney, Edward J. Bar-

Lt. Marilyn Connell

1st female lieutenant

Pioneer policewoman

By Suzanne M. Dulude
Asst. News Editor

It is no wonder that Marilyn Connell has dedicated her life to public service. With a brother who is a Boston City firefighter and a nephew that serves on the Rockland police force, gaining enjoyment out of helping others seems to run in the family.

"Since I was five years old, I wanted to be a police officer," Newton Police Lt. Connell remembers with a smile. "I was always the last kid in school, because I was chewing the fat with the cop on the beat."

Now that her dream has come true, she couldn't be happier.

Recently promoted from five-and-a-half years as a sergeant to Massachusetts' first female lieutenant, the South Shore resident says, "The part I like most about the job is when I can help somebody."

'It's no big deal being the first.' Lt. Marilyn Connell

Her way of helping people has changed a bit since her recent career move. Once "on the street," now Connell spends much of her time behind a desk. "The responsibilities of being a lieutenant are very high," she says proudly. "I delegate a lot of authority."

Amidst changing times

ACT leader sticks to her guns

By Charlotte Meryman, Staff Writer

NEWTONVILLE — It was in 1968 that Peggy Charren invited three other Newton mothers into her living room to tackle a national wasteland: T.V. programming for kids.

Now, 16 years later, with a full-time staff of seven, a $300,000-a-year budget and over 20,000 members and 150 affiliated organizations nationwide, Action for Children's Television (ACT) has grown into one of the most respected consumer advocacy groups in the country.

Close to a dozen citations and awards from political figures, legislators and professional coalitions across the country decorate one wall of its casual, Newtonville offices.

ACT has defied the normal destiny of grassroots advocacy groups, surviving, and in fact thriving, in a changing political and economic climate.

"We grew because it was important, what we were saying," declares the 56-year-old dynamo. "(We grew) because of the care we had for the truth. We did our homework and tried not to exaggerate. We underplayed things. We did not feel television was going to make children's hair fall out."

The three mothers who joined Charren at ACT's start moved on years ago. But the petite, determined Newton Centre resident is still far from giving up the battle. Continuing as president since that first meeting, she had doggedly stuck to her two original goals: increased diversity and elimination of advertising abuses in kids' programming.

"I never thought, really, of starting a movement like this," the mother of two recalls. "It was going

Cancer claim against city nears settlement

By Edward Cafasso, Staff Writer

NEWTON — Fearing a state commission would find the city liable for close to $88,000 in damages, a city attorney has negotiated a $15,000 settlement for the widow of a school department employee who contracted cancer after being exposed to a variety of noxious dusts working at his job.

The Board of Aldermen seemed ready to approve the payment last night, but delayed voting on the item in deference to concerns expressed by Ward 3 Alderman Richard J. Bullwinkle, who questioned whether the widow would still be able to receive her husband's pension money.

Thomas Hunter, a West Newton resident who worked as a school boilerman from 1950 to 1973, died at 82 in May after a 25-year bout with emphysema and, later, cancer of the stomach, ailments which doctors have traced to his work for the city, according to Assistant City Solicitor Michael D. Baseman.

'Stationerygate' probe pressed despite vote

By Frank Mulligan
Staff Writer

NEWTON — James P. Regan's attempt to form a subcommittee to investigate the unauthorized use of aldermanic stationery to sway voters in the June Hyde School referendum has been thwarted by the Board of Aldermen, but the freshman alderman from Ward 6 is determined to press on.

Regan cast a strategic vote Monday night against forming the subcommittee when it was apparent the item was going to be defeated. By voting on the "prevailing" side of the question, Regan has the option to "reconsider" the proposal and resubmit it for discussion at the next meeting of the aldermen, he said.

He filed for the reconsideration immediately after the meeting.

He said there was some "political maneuvering" involved in the vote. The item was first put on second call for discussion and then switched to first call where it was quickly voted on without discussion, catching Regan by surprise, he said.

"I think the aldermen have to see the letter and have some discussion on how the whole thing could have happened. The issue shouldn't be swept under the rug," Regan said.

He added that there was still public concern over the issue. "People have been calling me up and asking me about it," saying they were upset by the aldermanic stationery's misuse, he said.

Alderman Michael A. Malec, said, "I think the whole issue has been completely aired. Whatever fault there happened to be was openly acknowledged and apologies were issued."

She's used to being first

'We have a job to do, men or women," according to Lt. Connell

Among her day-to-day tasks are the deployment of men and women so that each village in the city receives adequate coverage, notifying officers of scheduled court appearances, keeping up-to-date on laws and ordinances, being keyed in to what happens in the city and processing those who are arrested during her shift — just to name a few.

In whichever area of the police department she has worked during her 11 years, Connell says, "It's always been a challenge."

Being a woman, the first woman to graduate from the Massachusetts State Police Training Academy, has had its more challenging moments. Her acceptance by some of the men at the academy was less than gracious, but she has chosen to forget that part of her past.

Now Connell says she is "not a novelty" anymore. On the Newton Police Department alone there are 11 women. "We (police officers) have a job to do, men or women," the lieutenant says.

Police officers helping people — that is how she always thought it should be. As a child, her parents taught her "to respect the police." But now the Roxbury native said she fears people have a different view of their public servants. She explains that some citizens are less than respectful of police officers, but she commented, "We have the same problems, get up the same way and have the same bills as everyone else."

Because of the present attitude, she says one of the most important aspects of the job is that "fellow officers have to help each other."

And help they have. "I'm proud of the officers that worked under me as sergeant. They were very cooperative and real supportive," she says.

About the equity of treatment of officers on the department, Connell says, "I treat others the way I want to be treated."

When asked what she thinks about women's liberation, Connell says, half-disgustedly, "That's all out the window — being a woman ... They (women's libbers) are crazy." She confessed she enjoys the benefits of chivalrous men and admitted she knows how to change a flat tire, but enjoys having a man do it.

Claiming that it is a woman's perogative not to disclose her age, Connell says, "I feel 25. My job keeps me young!"

Besides her lengthy and full career working for the City of Newton, the former secretary to the the Registrar of Motor Vehicles speaks fondly of the 19 years she produced and director her own radio shows. "The Marilyn Connell Show" appeared on both WBOS and WUNR in Boston and the "Old Ireland in New England" Irish show was broadcast on WVET in Brockton. Connell said she particularly liked being "on the air" nightly because it gave her a chance "to reach, to touch a lot of people ... It's nice to have the medium and use it." Although that part of her life is "on hold" now, she vowed to return to it as soon as she adjusts to her new position.

She once took a Dale Carnagie public speaking course to overcome her inherent shyness and was, again, the only woman in the class. She remembers when she stood before the 38 men in the class to present her final speech. "It felt great."

Although she now feels more at ease speaking publically, she still feels awkward talking about herself. As she unwinds a paper clip, she says humbly, "It's no big deal being the first."

seeking rentals, but disagree on its cause and on how to handle it.

Carol Ann Shea, president of the Board of Aldermen, who works in the real estate field, believes the main culprit is the statute prohibiting the presence of lead paint in any apartment housing children under age six. Her view was shared by several real estate brokers.

"It is very difficult because many of the units in Newton are older and presumably have lead paint," Shea said. The cost of removing the paint is very high and most landlords are not eager to foot the bill, she added.

Under state law, the landlords of two-family, owner-occupied homes have the right to pick and choose their tenants. If there is lead paint in the apartments, chances are those owners will opt to rent the unit to someone without young children, rather than go to the added expense of paint removal, according to those in the field.

"A lot of people (with kids under six) have said they would be willing to take an apartment even if they knew it had lead paint and sign a waiver," Shea commented. "I don't know if it would be legal ..."

And, although absentee owners are not allowed to be selective in their leasing, it appears that many are doing just that in their avoidance of families with young kids.

"People being denied housing because they have children is a widespread problem," acknowledged Robert Sanders, supervisor of housing units for MCAD. ... (And) the mere fact that MCAD exists doesn't mean it's going to go away."

Anita Jauregui, an owner and broker at Century 21 Abramowitz and Jauregui Realty in Newton, says her agency has very few listings for families with kids — mainly because many of Newton's units are in two-family, owner-occupied homes; but also because the prices are too high for young families. She added that the agency will not take listings from absentee owners who ask the realtor to discriminate among applicants.

> 'If they want young people in the community, they're not going to get them.'

Other brokers cited elderly, live-in landlords who don't want noisy kids around and high prices as the main obstacles for beginning families.

State Rep. Joseph DeNucci falls on the side of economics. He believes that although there are "isolated" complaints, there is not a widespread problem for parents and children seeking housing.

"There is just an unbelievable shortage of housing," DeNucci said. "We get calls from all over. ... We need more affordable housing, with both public and private rent subsidies."

The lead paint law should not be a problem because financial assistance for removal is available to landlords, DeNucci maintains.

"If someone is making a business out of renting property other than their own home, they have to be aware of the lead paint law and should comply," DeNucci said. "I'm sympathetic to the landlords and I sponsored legislation for tax credits, tax writeoffs and low interest loans. ... (But) to discriminate is wrong."

Both DeNucci and Shea point to Newton's high property values as a probable culprit in the city's high rent status.

"But I don't know what you can do about that," Shea sighed. "The marketplace demands a certain rent. ... I don't know any other solution (than low-income units)."

In the meantime, many families may be left with the feeling they are being sloughed off.

Leger said agents and owners frequently told her that an available apartment was "too small" for a family, or that it had something that would pose a danger to children, such as an open staircase, without ever letting her judge the situation for herself. Or they simply said the unit was already rented or had been taken off the market.

According to a spokesman for the federal Fair Housing office, it is illegal to "pre-screen" renters if the information is being used to discriminate against applicants.

"There has to be a valid business reason" for asking any questions, explained Joseph Vera, who works in the compliance division of the Department of Housing and Urban Development (HUD).

Both Fair Housing and MCAD suggest to parents who suspect discrimination that they lie on phone, telling agents and owners they do not have children. If they are turned down when they show up with their kids to look at the unit, they can then file a complaint listing the exact address of the property. Both agencies caution against deception in signing any papers, however.

Anyone who suspects they are being discriminated against through pre-screening can also file a complaint against the real estate broker or landlord involved, although such grievances may not be as easily followed up as those listing specific properties.

Sen. Edward M. Kennedy is co-sponsor of a bill now in the U.S. Senate, S1220, aimed at amending the Fair Housing Act to include families with children and the handicapped. The legislation, which would also provide a system for addressing problems through an administrative law judge, has been stuck in the Senate Judiary Committee since May 1983.

Meanwhile, Ellen Leger predicts that her own situation is an indication of the drastically changing demographic profile of the Garden City. "They're creating a situation where they'll only have wealthy people in the community," she said. "There's nothing wrong with wealth, but you shouldn't have to be a millionaire to have a decent place to live.

"If they want young people in the community, they're not going to get them."

Parent group, city in struggle

Lice spawn controversy

By Charlotte Meryman
Staff Writer

NEWTON — Parents of elementary school children can expect a mailing from the city Health Department soon on searching out and treating head lice.

The flyer is part of the department's annual, back-to-school campaign against the tiny insect.

National Pediculosis Association logo

Yet it is also a thorn in the side of the parent-founded, Newton-based National Pediculosis Association (NPA) (formerly Parents Against Lice). The NPA has been trying unsuccessfully to enlist the Health Department in its new campaign to make September "National Pediculosis Month" and to get health officials there to use the NPA's informational materials.

Although they say the content is an improvement over past efforts, NPA leaders point to the brochure as another example of what they describe as the Newton Health Department's uncooperative and belittling attitude.

"It's good, but it doesn't reflect the spirit of cooperation we would like to see," said NPA Director and co-founder Deborah Altschuler. "But this is a million miles from where they were."

She acknowledged that almost all of the information contained in the flyer was correct, but took exception to the introductory statement, which refers to lice as an "annoyance."

"That paragraph says they (Health Department officials) have not changed their thinking," Altschuler fumed. "We're where we began in 1981. When health officials stop fighting the fact that (lice) is a disease and start treating it as a disease — a highly communicable disease — then perhaps we can treat it and get on with education in the schools."

Altschuler and NPA President and co-founder Leslie Kenney have devoted three years to building up their organization. In the process, they have gained the support of state and local health departments across the country — a success that makes Newton's resistance seem even more biting.

But Health Commissioner Bernice Joyal maintains her dealings with the NPA are no different from those with any other resident group.

"Naturally they (Altschuler and Kenney) contact Mrs. (Joan) York (coordinator of child health for Newton) periodically," Joyal said. "Our working relationship is the same as with other organizations. There are two or three parent groups around.

"This year we're using their posters," she added.

Joyal said she remembered hearing something about the campaign to make September a nationally recognized time for lice control, but was not planning to endorse the idea or to launch any special activities.

"I recognize any month as National Pediculosis Month if that's when there's a problem," Joyal said.

September is generally considered the most important month for lice checks because kids returning to school from summer camp often bring the pest with them. The city has instituted checks in each elementary school, carried out by volunteer parent groups. A second check is done in January.

The NPA has called for more frequent checks and for a "no-nits" policy, which would prevent children from coming to school if they are infected. The School and Health Departments have opposed both recommendations.

Ward 8 Alderman Cynthia Creem, former chairperson of the now-defunct Aldermanic Subcommittee on Lice, said she still supports the no-nits policy and considers lice a health problem that "is not being treated as seriously as it could be."

Creem declined to comment on any problems between the NPA and the Health Department, however, saying she does not want to "get into the middle of it."

Altschuler and Kenney do have a friend in Mayor Theodore D. Mann, who has pledged support for their work.

As chairman of the national Conference of Mayors' subcommittee on health, Mann introduced a resolution at the annual conference this June calling for pharmaceutical companies to "adopt clear and responsible labeling instructions" on lice treatments.

Parents' group evolves, yet maintains original purpose

By Suzanne M. Dulude, Asst. News Editor

Those crazy kids. Just when you think you have them all figured out they find some other way to confuse you.

In some ways parenthood will never be the same and, in others, it has never changed. For the 19-year-old Child Study Association of Massachusetts, Inc., a non-profit organization interested in broadening the knowledge and understanding of children, the format is changing to meet the needs of parents, but the concerns of participants remain essentially the same.

Mary Gordon of Chestnut Hill said she founded the association in 1965, because "Children are a major investment. They're our nation's capital. And we're not taking care of our investment."

> 'Children are a major investment. They're our nation's capital. And we're not taking care of our investment.'
> Mary Gordon, founder, Child Study Association

From observations made while doing work in child psychology, Gordon said, "The ignorance of mothers was appalling ... Mothers were unaware of what they were doing by not nurturing their children."

Initially a volunteer effort operating out of neighborhood living rooms and backyards, now Child Study, which has approximately 125 subscribing members, employs trained professionals to lead its discussion groups held at Temple Reyim. But, it is more than the structure that sets it apart from other support groups of its kind; its orientation toward "preventive mental health" is the overriding difference, Gordon said.

"What makes Child Study distinctive is that we are the only organization concerned with the normal child," Gordon, who has a doctorate in education specializing in school psychology said.

Acting Executive Director Melanie Grossmar reiterated Gordon's contention. "You don't have t have a problem to be involved," she said. "People don't come to us in crisis. It's a positive kind o growth ... before there is any problem."

Grossman, who began her involvement with Child Study over 16 years ago, said trained leaders who run individual groups "don't teach a specific philosophy." The "model" used for the sessions — where the parents learn by discussing their own personal experiences — is flexible enough to incorporate the "concerns that the parents have for that specific day," the Newton Highlands resident said.

The mother of three said her first contact with the support group came when she and her husband moved to Newton. "I was a new parent with a new baby in a new town. I felt isolated. I wanted to be with people and be learning." Her husband William was an intern at the time.

"We were a healthy family," she continued. It was the support element of being involved with a peer group that she found most helpful. "A lot of people need that kind of support," she said.

In addition to being a participant, Grossman, who holds her masters in social work, has led groups, run training programs for leaders and is a former president of the association. During her career there she has seen Child Study grow from presenting area library groups — free sessions for parents during children's story hours at local libraries — to this fall's six-session series on such topics as "Working Parents: Balancing Work and Family" and "Parents of Newborns".

Group participant Lori Rosenblum said of the "Parents of Newborns" sessions she attended, "It helps when you have your first child to get together with others who have children that age, to listen to what others have to say."

Rosenblum, the former Lori Silver of Oak Hill, said the relaxed atmosphere maintained by leader Karen Silken allowed participants to air a variety of concerns. "The discussion wasn't just about babies. We talked about ourselves, our emotions, and how to deal with having a major change in our lives."

In addition to giving support to the new parents, it gave them a chance "to note the differences and similarities between their children," the Needham resident said. She hesitated at saying that they "compared" their children, because "They're all different and they're all normal. They just develop at different rates."

Often group leaders get just as much out of the discussions as participants. A masters degree holder in social work and a mother of two children, herself, Newton Centre resident Silken said, "I like to see the parents grow in the process." It gives her "a new perspective," she said.

As a matter of fact, the whole process of Child Study is taking on a new perspective this fall. Where before groups were formed out after interest had been voiced, now sessions have been set up and registration is being taken. Some of the groups are of a new genre too. Not only are "Parents of Newborns" sessions on the fall calendar but also other new discussion groups, one entitled, "Moving Back In: Children Who Return Home as Young Adults".

Speaker Grace Olin, a licensed independent clinical social worker from Waban, said she is "very much looking forward to" leading the "Moving Back In" series. Having been a leader with Child Study Association for 16 years, along with her work as a psychotherapist, clinical social worker and consultant, Olin explained that it is not only her professional training that qualifies her to head the group. As a mother of three, "adolescent through adult," she said she has "experienced the phenomenon" that headlines this fall's group.

The group is different from others previously offered by the association in that it deals with older parents, those old enough to have had children move out and return home. Olin said she hopes her "being of their generation will make them comfortable."

A vice president of the association, Olin explained that dealing with children moving back into the parents' home is "not a problem, it's a process, something to work out together." She said the newness of this as a concern "is as much an economic phenomenon as it is one of the times."

The framework for the sessions will be "to talk and then have a discussion, not a lecture" — a framework that hasn't changed in the Child Study Association's 19-year history.

Keep the harmony

Recent developments inside MCI Walpole - reports of which include incidents of hogtying and gassing prisoners to quell what Correction Department officials describe as an attempt to "take over" the maximum security section of the prison - appear to have disrupted the usually harmonious relations between our state senator and one of our state reps.

Published reports of a hearing on the volatile situation at Walpole blew up remarks between Sen. Jack Backman (D - Newton, Brookline) and Rep. Joseph DeNucci (D - Newton, Waltham), chairmen of the Senate and House Committees on Human Services, respectively, to the point where it seemed their working relationship might be in jeopardy.

Newton, and the rest of the Commonwealth, have been blessed by the implausible combination of Backman and DeNucci working together to administer the largest single chunk of the state budget.

The contrast in their styles and philosophies leads the legislature to pay real heed to their reports, knowing that they have been hammered out in detail. Their constituents want to see that kind of effectiveness continue to emanate from the Garden City.

The two politicians have commented that differences of opinion such as the one that came out of the Walpole hearing will not affect their future productivity. We hope they are right.

State tax cap due

Massachusetts is still one of the most taxed of all the states in the nation, although much improved since 1970. That was about the time "Taxachusetts" became a rallying cry for those fed up with the free spending and corruption.

All kinds of helpful things have happened in the interval. A few legislators and appointed officials have gone to jail. Post-Watergate spawned tighter control over personal conduct and financial disclosure. Even though patronage and croneyism continue to be the mother's milk of successful politicians, it is increasingly difficult to accumulate the green stuff illegally.

On the tax side, the gains made are principally due to the Massachusetts business boom. This state is among the top three. Only Texas has a lower jobless rate. A veritable flow of gold into state coffers from business property and corporate taxes is what is holding the tax line.

Nevertheless, the Commonwealth is moving into a budget level exceeding $8 billion for fiscal 1985. That's a 10-percent boost at a time when the inflation rate is between 3 and 4 percent. The state has put a tight clamp on cities and towns with Proposition 2½, but hasn't really done anything to correct its own spending habits.

Chunks of growth revenue are being passed out piecemeal to the municipalities to ease the crunch, but tax savings otherwise aren't to be found.

When they lobbied Proposition 2½ onto the books, tax-cap proponents said the curb on local taxes was only half the battle and that the state would be the next target.

Now is the time for them to zero in on the state.

The Senate race

Kerry, Shannon help GOPs

By Ken Cafarell

The recent carve-up session among the Democratic candidates for the U.S. Senate has left many voters scratching their heads and at least two Republicans smiling behind their hands.

The four Democrats running for the seat of retiring Sen. Paul E. Tsongas, D-Mass., have had trouble since the beginning of the campaign distinguishing themselves from each other and that has left the race rather lackluster.

Lt. Gov. John Kerry, Rep. James Shannon and Secretary of the Commonwealth Michael Connolly are all from the liberal end of the party and hold similar views on a wide range of issues. Former Massachusetts House Speaker David Bartley is only slightly more conservative.

The two Republican candidates, Raymond Shamie and former U.S. Attorney General Elliot Richardson, on the other hand, have run largely issue-oriented campaigns that have provided voters with some clear distinctions.

Kerry last week succeeded in injecting some heat into the Democratic race, but may have given himself a black eye in raising questions about Shannon's involvement in a tax break for the Massachusetts Mutual Life Insurance Co.

He questioned Shannon's acceptance of contributions from Mass Mutual, one of the state's largest employers, and a firm whose chief officer, Barry Gottehrer, is a close friend of Shannon's.

Kerry said Mass Mutual officials contributed $6,000 to Shannon's campaign and demanded the congressman "make a full, public explanation of a hidden $14 million tax break" for the firm.

John Kerry

Reaction to Kerry's press release was so strong that, by the end of the week, his campaign people were desperately trying to back off the issue.

In fact, Shannon had already responded publicly to the story, denying any specific knowledge of the provision included in the Deficit Reduction Act of 1984 signed by President Reagan in July. Congressional aides involved in the drafting of the provision contacted by UPI backed up Shannon's statements.

An angry Shannon accused Kerry of running a "sleazy" campaign and made a reference to Kerry's family name that he later said he regretted.

Bartley quickly jumped into the fray, accusing Kerry and Shannon of dragging the campaign "into the gutter" and ignoring more important issues.

Reaction to Kerry's press release was so strong that by the end of the week his campaign people were desperately trying to back off the issue.

Kerry press aide Alix de Seife insisted, "We were just raising the question. We weren't making any accusations." She said the real question was whether the Deficit Reduction Act was "good public policy."

However, she admitted the wording of the press release, which focused exclusively on Shannon's relationship with Mass Mutual and clearly implied Shannon had been less than candid about the issue "may have been a mistake."

One problem with the controversy is that it involves complicated tax laws that are unclear even to close observers, let alone to voters who may have neither the interest nor the time to dig into the issue.

Another problem is that there are so many conflicting statements floating around that it is unlikely a clear picture of what actually happened will ever emerge. As the Kerry campaign suggested, it is a question. But it appears to be a question for which there will never be an adequte answer.

James Shannon

The only clear thing about all this is that the Democrats have succeeded in tarnishing their image over an elusive issue on the eve of a general election in which they will face a formidable Republican opponent.

A resolution to remember

By Don Graff

An anniversary of considerable current significance slipped by almost unmarked the other day.

It is difficult to say precisely when the Vietnam War — that is, the American war in Vietnam — began. Some would say with John F. Kennedy's dispatch of advisers to the South Vietnamese forces in 1961. Others say much earlier, with the Eisenhower administration's backing of the eventually beaten French.

But there is no question that the drift toward active involvement of U.S. forces became irreversible in August, 1964.

To refresh your memory, on Aug. 2, 1964, it was reported that a U.S. destroyer had been attacked by North Vietnamese PT boats. On Aug. 4, Americans were told there had been another run-in.

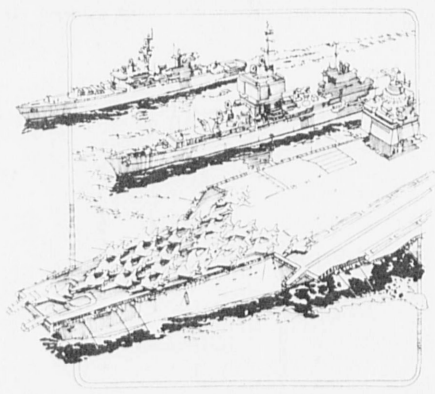

On Aug. 7, Lyndon Johnson asked and got from Congress a joint resolution authorizing him "to take all necessary measures" to prevent attacks on U.S. forces.

That was the Tonkin Gulf Resolution, the sole constitutional basis for the waging of a war that lasted longer than any other the nation has fought and the disastrous consequences of which are still with us.

The resolution did not come out of nowhere. For that matter, we now know that it did not even come out of the Tonkin Gulf.

As early as March 1964, the Johnson White House was preparing to ask Congress for precisely the war powers it got five months later, Stanley Karnow reports in his meticulously documented "Vietnam: A History." The precedent, it was thought then, might be the 1955 resolution authorizing President Eisenhower to respond to Communist Chinese aggression in the Formosa Strait.

By June, a rough draft was ready.

The war that began 20 years ago in the Gulf Of Tonkin lasted longer than any other the nation has fought and the disastrous consequences are still with us.

Under the circumstances, the clashes in the gulf were at the least fortuitous, if not considerably more. That is to say, manufactured.

There is a serious question as to who fired first in the first encounter. Even more questionable is whether the second occurred at all. Subsequent evidence strongly suggests a radar malfunction, signaling oncoming craft that didn't exist.

There were few questions then, however. Johnson got his resolution on overwhelming votes in both houses. And why not? We could not duck a direct challenge, and we had the word of the president that there had been one.

Many — eventually the majority — in Congress came to rue that vote. In 1971 Congress repealed the resolution and two years later, the experience shaped the War Powers Act, which prohibits the president from committing U.S. forces abroad for longer than 60 days without congressional approval.

There wasn't much to the Tonkin Gulf Resolution, a few hundred words that, following an introduction invoking the noble American purpose of promoting peace and security in Southeast Asia, declared that "the Congress approves and supports the determination of the president, as commander in chief, to take all necessary measures to repel any armed attack against the forces of the United States and to prevent further aggression."

There you have it — the legal justification for a misconceived and ultimately failed war that, far from being in pursuit of the nation's true interests, ran precisely counter to them.

In a recent commentary in the New York Times on the the resolution and its aftermath, two Georgetown University academics, Allen E. Goodman and Seth P. Tillman, saw a number of lessons to be drawn.

One is that while "Congress can be ignored, manipulated or deceived for a time, the longer term result, especially in conditions of protracted military involvement, is almost certain to be disaster for the president and his policies."

That is something the current president should be thinking about in the ongoing effort to manipulate and deceive Congress on Central America. For despite all the differences between the two challenges, the parallels remain inescapable.

After all we now know about the Gulf of Tonkin, would we really want to let ourselves in for a replay in the Gulf of Fonseca?

The family is making a comeback

By George R. Plagenz

It is too early to say this will be the Year of the Goose. But it may be the Year of the Family.

Both political parties will stress family in the presidential campaign as a sub-theme, but a very prominent theme nonetheless.

President Reagan has always been for the family as part of the panoply of old moral values which hold a nation together.

The Democrats will talk more of the "extended family," to mean not only blood relatives but the human family — or at least the "family of America," in the words of New York Gov. Mario Cuomo.

At the Democratic National Convention, Cuomo said government should be: "The idea of family. Mutuality. The sharing of benefits and burdens for the good of all."

The family has risen from the ashes. In the 1960s and 70s, the phoenix appeared all but dead, its wings clipped by divorce, singles living together, the sexual revolution and the cult of self. It would never fly again even if it lived. Others said it was dead as a dodo.

But if it was, there is life after death.

More marriages took place last year than in any year in the past decade. Divorces declined in 1982 for the first time in 20 years and dropped again in 1983.

Now there is even the Society for the Preservation of First Wives and First Husbands. At a society dinner, the couple married longest received for 56 years of wedlock a Steuben goose. The goose is the society's symbol. Geese mate for life.

Many more young marrieds appear determined to "go for the goose" than in the recent past when "till death us do part" was said with fingers crossed. Even couples who a decade ago and less might have been reaching for the phone to call a divorce lawyer are now reaching out to touch their spouse again and give it another try.

"For all its pitfalls, marriage offers a security that people think twice about giving up in insecure times like these," says a marriage counselor. They also see the vacuum divorce left in the lives of divorced friends — not to mention what they have read about the effects of divorce on children.

A determination to stay married may be the most important single ingredient in marital longevity, say some society members. Yet, a modern tendency to analyze marriage may be the first step in dissolving it, they say.

Given the partners they chose, these couples made it work. Could they be sure it would have worked with any partner? They can't.

Many of these couples have money. That helps. One marriage counselor says: "There are three things to be had out of marriage by a woman — money, children and love. Any two out of three (or all three) will make for a reasonably happy marriage."

If he's right, that means any "happy" combination except one (love and children) would include money.

A Town & Country magazine survey of 600 newlywed social couples revealed, in three cases out of four, their well-off parents had remained married. These privileged young socialites also expect to stay married, "come what may." It seems obvious that what may come will not include money problems.

The combined annual income of these newlyweds is $67,000 — not including trust funds and inheritances. She earns $23,000 (compared to $17,000 for the average college-educated woman in the 20-to-34-year-old bracket). His income ($44,000) is nearly twice the average for his age group.

With no money worries, they plan to have children fairly soon and not stop until they have three.

These well-bred, well-heeled couples are the exception. Most of us will make do on much less. Some of us will make do on love and children. But rich or poor, U.S. couples are taking another gander at the goose as the symbol of what marriages should be.

Teachers setting examples

Dear Editor:

The spectre of teachers union officials suing teachers because they refuse to join the union, must haunt your community's parents and citizens. ("Union Blues", June 5, 1984, NEWTON TAB.)

When the nationwide educational malaise is so much in the forefront of today's news, the NEA-union officials' obsession with forcing every teacher into their camp is loathesome. The demand for "agency shop" dues - $245 from every teacher who has already decided not to join the union - should never have been granted by school board members. But since it was negotiated in 1982, every Newton tax-paying citizen must assume some responsibility in this abusive situation.

The courageous teachers who have refused to allow their constitutional, civil, and moral rights to be trampled on, are now victims of legal prosecution. By declaring their commitment to individual freedom, they must defend it in court!

Newton parents and citizens should rejoice that they have such teachers in their schools - teachers who not only dedicate their lives to education and freedom, but who also have the courage of their convictions. Newton students will learn a valuable lesson.

I urge every Newton citizen to express public support for the victims of this union official abuse, and to insist that this unfair "agency shop" contract clause be removed in future negotiations. If you can demand excellence from your teachers, surely you can guarantee their individual freedom in return!

'Disgusted' with Mann case

I read in the News Tribune that Mayor Mann's friends accumulated for his 1983 re-election campaign $63,448.

Now it does seem to me with all this "loot" he can pay $10,000 to his lawyer for the dreadful job he did on the Ossinger case.

I'm sick and tired of hearing how great Mr. Mann is when he can't keep track of his salary. I should have so much money.

Elderly women search for an answer to 'overcharged' bill

We are two women, both over 70, who read the Editorial "A Bigger Splash" with amazement. Our current water bill was $271 - $121 for sewer usage and $150 for water. After several new meter readings - and a call to city hall - we were told that nothing could be done after the reading was recorded.

At that point we took a survey of neighbors and found their total bills were all under $100, one total being as low as $25.

We are most frugal in our use of facilities, do not even have a shower. We have been checked, and told there are no water leaks.

Our bill is a flagrant overchange. We find no redress possible.

What, I ask you, can by done by two older women when no one has an answer?

No time like the present

Several drawbacks of Boston's Columbia Point Housing Project have been ably cited and dramatized by Brandeis Professor, John Matthews, Ph.D. He and his Newton Republican City and Ward 5 Committees have performed a great service to everyone by reminding us of past, present and potential problems.

It follows that:

1. Now is the time to stop shrugging off the painful facts and to stop disparaging those who remind us of the pitfalls.

2. Now is the time to reinforce the will and the means to cure the deficiencies and to assure their staying cure.

3. Now is the time to find a better way to fill housing needs without forcing taxpayers to finance construction and/or pay rents for other people.

Parents of Spec. Ed. children air concerns about facilities

As Chairperson of the Newton Community Advisory Committee to the Special Education Department, I have been contacted by four parents of children who are to be enrolled in two new classes for special needs students at Brown Junior High School, a learning disabilities classroom and a language disabilities classroom.

These parents are extemely concerned about the proposed location of these classrooms in the front of the school between the gym and cafeteria and the school offices. They feel almost any other classroom in that school would be more suitable. Their reasons are:

- These classrooms are isolated and set apart from other academic classrooms in the school — stigmatization of the special needs students may result.
- These rooms are located in the busiest and noisiest areas of the school. The children who attend these classrooms are very distractable. The noise in the corridor and from the adjacent cafeteria will disrupt the ability of these students to attend to their school work.
- The larger windows, floor to ceiling in one room, provide a panoramic view of the neighborhood and of the front door and driveway of the school. This view would provide a major source of distraction, and if the curtains or blinds are closed, all natural light will be obscured. The windows are also adjacent to the outside gathering spot of lunch-eating students.
- The classrooms are the smallest in the whole school. Although only eight students will be housed in each, each student's needs are to be met by an individualized program. Space is needed between students to minimize the distractability of eight lessons being given at the same time. Unlike the regular education students at Brown May, these students will have all their academics in these two classrooms.
- The four parents involved feel that their children are being treated as second class citizens by the Newton Public Schools. Their children's special needs involving distractability are being ignored. They believe that in a school as large as Brown Junior High a more suitable space is available. They cannot understand why the Newton Public Schools has refused to make any changes.
- These parents have asked that other concerned citizens and especially parents of children scheduled to attend these classes immediatley contact Lucie Chansky, co-chairperson CAC, Newton, to organize a meeting to discuss these problems and to formulate a further course of action. My telephone numbers are 244-7310 and 965-7310.

St. Carmine extends thanks

The Saint Mary of Carmine Society would like to thank all of the people who helped make this year's 49th annual festival such a tremendous success. We look forward to our 50th anniversary celebration next year and plan to make it the best ever.

We would like to thank the City of Newton for the support that they have shown us over the years and for their continued support in the future. We want it understood by all that the unfortunate events concerning this year's fireworks situation in no way reflects upon the relationship between the society and the City of Newton. The City's continued support of our activities has well been proven over the years.

The misunderstanding with the fire chief that developed was regrettable, but certainly ethnicity had no part in it.

We hope to be able to work closely with the city in the coming months to ensure that next year's 50th anniversary celebration will be realized as harmoniously as have those of years past.

Again, we thank all of the parties involved for their past and continued support and we hope to see you all next year.

The Saint Mary of Carmine Society

Budget and responsibility

This is an open letter to the Mayor, the Board of Aldermen, and the School Committee:

A budget is a budget. In an efficiently run organization, this financial plan is generated to have real meaning. We don't have to repeat here the history of municipalities, which tend to be lackadaisical about budgets and continually overspend.

Budgets should be up-front. No city department should be able to go back for more money except in cases of dire emergency. Therefore, I am sure you can imagine the dismay of the Newton Taxpayers Association when the Board of Aldermen approved an additional appropriation of $366,881 to cover 1984 expenses for the School Department.

This type of casual attitude toward budgeting can spread easily and rapidly into other city departments unless all city administrators, including the mayor, aldermen, and School Committee, carefully watch over each department and insist on responsibility in financial planning and management throughout the fiscal year.

Very truly yours,
Alvan F. Rosenberg

Decision ends battle; City to pay legal fees

shak, but called the accrued fees "substantial" and said they would amount to "over $30,000." He said he would approach the Board of Aldermen in September with the exact bill.

Local attorney Arthur Goldsmith, who argued the taxpayers' case, expressed disappointment with the SJC decision, saying it "doesn't answer all the questions that need to be answered" and "leaves open many questions for future litigation."

"It's a decision that taxpayers will foot the bill, at least initially (during civil rights cases), but what happens when a city official grossly violates another person's rights in the performance of his duty and is found to act illegally? How will taxpayers recoup the cost?," Goldsmith said.

Mann not only incurred legal expenses battling the taxpayers' suit, but also defending himself against the charge that he fired his former secretary, Diane Ossinger, without due process of law in March 1980.

The same day Ossinger was fired, criminal complaints filed by the city charged her with 44 counts of larceny, alleging she cashed the mayor's paychecks for years and kept the money. Later in the year, Ossinger was acquitted of all charges.

Residents "should feel that they're going to able to get good people to run for office. There won't be a chilling effect that stops people from running for fear of of something like this," Funk said.

The 17-page opinion, written by Judge Joseph R. Nolan, "completely obliterates in a nice way" an Appeals Court ruling finding in favor of the taxpayers, he added.

In upholding the city's indemnification ordinance, the SJC said, "As a matter of policy, public indemnification of public officials serves in part to encourage public service. Judgements against such public officials in actions for civil rights ... could cause financial ruin. This policy would be defeated if the legal expenses of civil rights litigation were to be borne personally throughout years of prertial activity, trial and appeal and only later, if at all, reimbursed."

The court also upheld Funk's declaration of conflict of interest in choosing not to defend the mayor because he did not believe he could represent both the mayor and the city during the Ossinger case.

An "executive session" called by the aldermanic Finance Committee in November 1981 to debate Funk's conflict of interest claim and decide an appropriation to pay an outside counsel for Mann was also ruled legally valid in the SJC's ruling under the state's Open Meeting Law.

Claim nearly settled

Hunter's duties included operating high pressure boilers and cleaning them by climbing into a crawl space within the boiler and scrubbing the inside with a wire brush, an action which made the accumulated up sediment and dust breathable, Baseman said.

He was diagnosed as having emphysema in 1959, but apparently continued in his duties until March 1983 when a malignant tumor was discovered in his stomach. Doctors ruled out surgery because of the lung disease's advancement and gave Hunter only a short time to ive, he added.

After Hunter filed for workmen's compensation in May 1983, the city hired an expert to contest testimony offered at a hearing before the Industrial Accident Board by Dr. Lawrence Baker, another expert in the field, who claimed that exposure to the noxious dusts had contributed to Hunter's sickness, according to Baseman.

When city lawyers got the impression that the board's commissioner was going to rule in favor of Hunter, a judgement which probably would have cost the city close to $88,000 in damages, Baseman undertook "extensive negotiations" with Hunter's laywers and eventually settled on the proposed $15,000 award to his widow, creating "a savings to the city of $72,983," according to Assistant Personnel Director Mary C. Hurley.

Bullwinkle rose on the floor of the board last night to question whether Hunter's widow would still be eligible for her husband's accrued pension.

"He was entitled to $88,000 and we settled for $15,000. Don't get me wrong, I'm all for saving the city money, but doesn't this tweak your conscience," he asked his colleagues.

Aldermen approved Bullwinkle's motion to delay the workmen's compensation settlement until his pension questions could be answered.

According to Baseman, while Hunter's widow has not yet filed for the benefits, the city's Retirement Board is legally bound to do so.

Tenant found for West Newton library

By Edward Cafasso
Staff Writer

NEWTON — The former West Newton Memorial Branch Library will be converted into a training center for the developmentally disabled by this fall.

The Board of Aldermen Monday night ended the Barry L. Price Rehabilitation Center's search for a permanent home by unanimously approving a rezoning of the former library site on Chestnut Street.

After having to move from West Newton to Newton Centre in the last two years, the non-profit center's bid for an anchored role in the community received strong support from West Newton community leaders and 10th Middlesex District Rep. A. Joseph DeNucci, who had praised its work and likened its relocation problems to those of "a homeless child.

Like the Arthur J. Clark Workshop in Waltham, the Price Center offers developmentally disabled adults the opportunity to participate in a community-based work experience that will maximize their physical, intellectual and emotional functioning, as well as preparing them to enter today's job market.

Local industries sub-contract work out to the center, usually fastidious tasks that involve sorting, assembly or packaging, and instructors train the handicapped workers, giving them first-hand knowledge of the demands and expectations of the working environment.

Training in personal care, hygiene, social and community access skills, money management and consumer skills and experience in social and community activities is also provided at the Center, with the ultimate goal of fostering self confidence and preparing the clients for employment at the competitive level.

The board's action Monday night rezones the former library site to the Business A zone and tacitly approves 20-year leases with center officials and representatives of the nearby Bay Bank Middlesex.

Under the arrangement, the center will refurbish the building and care for parking spaces which will be created next door. Bay Bank will bear the cost of create the parking and also have use of 22 spaces for employees and customers. Community space will be available for local civic groups after hours.

Should the Price Center go out of business, the property, originally dedicated to the city as a memorial to World War I veterans, will revert back to city ownership with the stipulation that a use similar to the center be installed.

Representatives of the center have also agreed to erect a plaque at the site to commemorate its history as veterans' memorial.

'Stationerygate' probe

The attempt at affixing guilt in the matter, Malec said, was "petty" and a "witchunt" and that continuing in it "did absolutely no good for the city."

Malec added that clarifying the board's rules regarding the use of aldermanic stationery was "reasonable" but that if Regan felt that a law was broken he should "report it to the district attorney."

Aldermen approve grants

NEWTON — Aldermen have cleared the way for two state grants targeted at improving services offered by the city's Arts in the Parks Program and the Jackson Homestead.

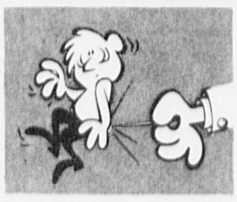

The Massachusetts Council on Arts and Humanities Merit Grants, which total just over $12,000, will help fund the free nighttime concerts and children's theater program of the Recreation Department and efforts by officials of the Jackson Homestead aimed at attracting more visitors to the city's historical museum.

Aldermen moved swiftly to unanimously approve the aid last night.

The Arts in the Parks Program will receive $7,850, while the Homestead will get $4,200 to support expansion of the program, exhibits and marketing research.

ACT survives changing times

to be a two-year effort (that would last) until my three-year-old turned five and started school; then I would go back to work."

She admits her time-consuming involvement with ACT "wasn't always terrific" for her kids — one of whom once threatened to picket her office because of her long hours and strict T.V. watching rules. But Charren says she has stuck with the group so long because "the problem still exists."

Despite the increasing attention ACT has focused on the shortcomings of kids' T.V. - through education of the public, legal action, the media, annual conferences, books, handbooks and its regular publication "re:act" - and despite the group's numerous achievements, "what's happening now with children's programming is worse than anything that has ever happened before," Charren declares.

In the past four years, notes the black-haired, dark-eyed activist, advertising aimed at children has become increasingly subliminal. The three major commerical networks, NBC, ABC, and CBS, do not carry a single daily or even weekly, weekday program for kids. And, in direct violation of FCC mandates, the networks have launched a wave of 30- to 60-minute shows featuring toy personalities already on the market.

"Hotwheels", "Strawberry Shortcake", CBS's "Donkey Kong", and "Frogger", ABC's "Monchhichis" - all are a phenomenon Charren describes as "program-length commercials." And to top it all, she says, Telepictures Corporation is now promoting a new animated series for 1985 - "Thunder Cats" - and has offered to give T.V. stations a share of the profits from Thunder Cats toys in exchange for airing the show.

ACT has now filed and had accepted by the FCC a petition for rulemaking that would outlaw the "Thunder Cats" arrangement.

"(Such programs) fuzz the difference between editorial speech and commercial speech," she fumes. "Children are more responsive and open (than adults). They take everything at face value."

Charren claims the "program-length commercials" are already illegal under FCC mandates but that broadcasters have been able to get away with them because the FCC's rules are no longer being enforced.

According to Charren, ACT was working well in the 1970s. Broadcasters were getting the message and the FCC was getting its policy statement together. There was more programming targeted at minorities. Women were taken seriously and there was more nonfiction.

"We didn't get the rules we were looking for, but all of the noise was making broadcasters responsive," recalls the former Newton Creative Arts Committee and children's book fair operator. "They didn't want the rules, so they were doing what they were supposed to."

Charren claims the backslide started when President Ronald Reagan took office, appointed a new FCC chairman and set into motion his wave of deregulation.

Some reform is now stirring in the legislature, however.

U.S. Rep. Timothy Wirth (D-Colo.) and U.S. Sen. Frank R. Lautenberg (D-N.J.) have introduced similar bills into the House and Senate which would require commercial television stations to broadcast one hour of daily, educational, children's programming.

Charren considers such legislation the only way to prevent T.V. from becoming "another education system that discriminates against the poor" — in which only families that can afford pay cable and video cassettes get diverse, quality programming.

She has always championed diversity over program censorship as a vehicle for change. Censorship, she contends, is worse than any kind of programming.

Despite her recent setbacks, Charren credits her advocacy group with some lasting accomplishments.

"There is half as much advertising to children as there would be without ACT," she asserts. "There is more money for public broadcasting than there would be without us. There are no pills sold (one of ACT's first achievements) and no host selling, at least for the most part, on children's television."

There are also many thank-you's from producers, writers and viewers across the country — which make the long hours of work worthwhile.

"But you have to be careful not to think of me as the Florence Nightingale of children's television," Charren cautions. "I enjoy it. I get a big bang out of what I'm doing. I'm doing it because I like it, because I think it's important and because occasionally, I think we've succeeded."

More active outreach urged in affirmative action revamp

By Frank Mulligan
Staff Writer

NEWTON — A 12-page review and list of recommendations aimed at improving the city's present affirmative action plan and 1.8 percent minority staffing level urges the city "to re-write and update the 1983 plan with a finely honed focus on structural changes and program implementation."

The report, released by Mayor Theodore Mann last week, further recommended that the affirmative action officer's duties be confined to affirmative action goals and urged no repetition of a period in 1983-1984 where the affirmative action officer doubled as a "senior clerk typist" for six months.

The recommendations were prepared by a consulting agency hired by Mayor Mann for approximately $1,000 and headed by the former chairman of the Massachusetts Commission Against Discrimination (MCAD), Jane Edmonds.

Mann said in his weekly press conference that Edmonds' recommendations would be used to "revamp the city's affirmative action plan and bring it up to date."

John Ahearn, a field representative for the MCAD, said Newton was considered within the Boston Standard Metropolitan Statistical Area and as such had a recommended MCAD goal of 10 percent minority staffing in the municipal workforce.

Ahearn said the MCAD officially commented on Newton's 1.8 percent minority staffing level on June 29 when the group placed employment conditions on a grant application for state funds for water and sewer collection.

Newton must make a "good faith effort" to hire more minorities and that the MCAD would review that effort before releasing the conditions, he added.

The grant application was for state Department of Enviromental Quality Engineering (DEQE) funds of various types known as a "collection system grant," Ahern said.

Mann also issued a statement on the recommendations prepared by Edmonds, saying, "The Edmonds' evaluation indicates that the 'The Plan is a good plan' and confirms that fiscal constraints, civil service entanglements, lack of competitive applicant pool and inadequate public transportation are factors which have an impact upon the City's affirmative action progress."

"Seemingly legitimate barriers may be overcome with creative action and determined effort," according to Edmonds.

The report suggested stating in the plan that, "the Mayor, as Chief Executive Officer, has the 'overall' responsibility for the affirmative action program."

BEVERLY HILLS, CA. (Special)—An amazing new "super" grapefruit pill has recently been developed and perfected that reportedly "guarantees" that you will easily lose at least 10 pounds in 10 days. Best of all, it allows you to "eat as much as you want of your favorite foods and still lose a pound a day or more starting from the very first day until you achieve the ideal weight and figure you desire."

This "super" grapefruit pill is a dramatically improved version of the world famous grapefruit diet. It is far more effective than the original and eliminates "the mess, fuss, and high cost of eating half a fresh grapefruit at every meal."

"Pill Does All the Work"

According to the manufacturer, "the pill itself does all the work while you quickly lose weight with NO starvation "diet menus" to follow, NO calorie counting, NO exercise, and NO hunger pangs." It is 100% safe. You simply take the pill with a glass of water before each meal and the amazing combination of powerful ingredients are so effective they take over and you start losing weight immediately.

Pill Has ALL Daily Vitamins

The powerful and unique combination of ingredients are what make this a "super-pill". It contains highly potent grapefruit concentrate and a diuretic to help eliminate bloat and puffiness. No need to take any vitamins to maintain your good health and energy. The pill is fortified with ALL (100%) of the U.S. Government daily vitamin requirements.

Contains Japanese 'Glucomannan'

Each pill also contains an amazingly effective amount of "glucomannan", the remarkable natural dietary fiber discovery from Japan (used successfully for over 1500 years) that expands in your stomach and gives you a full and satisfied feeling all day long.

The super-pill is already sweeping the country with glowing reports of easy and fast weight loss from formerly overweight people in all walks of life who are now slim, trim, and attractive again.

Now Available to Public

You can order your supply of these highly successful "super" grapefruit pills (now available directly from the manufacturer by mail order only) by sending $12 for a 14-day supply (or $20 for a 30-day supply, or $35 for a 60-day supply) cash, check, or money order to: Citrus Industries, 9903 Santa Monica Bl., Dept. W14, Beverly Hills, Calif. 90212. (Unconditional money-back guarantee if not satisfied.) Visa, MasterCard, and Amer. Express OK. (Send card number, expiration date, and signature.) LIFELINE saves lives

By Frank DeBenedetto
Correspondent

NEWTON - A device smaller than a cigarette pack and as convenient to wear as a piece of jewelry can save the life of a sick person during a medical emergency.

It's a remote control button, and it's all part of the new LIFELINE system now being used by Newton-Wellesley Hospital in association with the Chaulk Ambulance Service.

In a medical emergency a person would push the button on the remote control unit, worn around the neck, wrist or kept in a pocket, which signals the "home communicator." The communicator then automatically dials the ambulance service's Emergency Response Center. The center then calls the home of the patient while at the same time dispatching an ambulance. A "responder," a neighbor or friend, is also called to let the emergency personnel in the house.

If a person lives in Weston, Needham or Wayland, other areas covered by LIFELINE, the Chaulk people notify the respective police or fire emergency units.

According to Sharon Poller, coordinator of the LIFELINE program at Newton-Wellesley, the system benefits mostly older people with medical conditions who value their independence — people who choose not to live in nursing homes or remain under constant supervision. Other sick people who are medically dependent but live at home could also benefit, she said.

She is confident and excited about offering the new service to subscribers.

"I think it's just a wonderful program and a great service," said Poller, the former LIFELINE coordinator at Symmes Hospital in Arlington. "There are thousands of people on the program in this state and thousands of programs nationallly. I'd say in my past experience about 95 percent of the people have been pleased with the service," she said at the kickoff conference for LIFELINE at Newton-Wellesley Hospital's Usen Auditorium Tuesday.

According to Poller, the fee for using LIFELINE is $18 per month, plus an initial $20 installation fee.

"No one will be turned away if they can't afford to pay for the service," Poller said.

Curt Lovett, executive vice president at the Chaulk Ambulance Service, a Newton based company, is also confident.

The decision to implement LIFELINE, according to Judy Stone, director of social work and continuing care, came after social workers at the hospital repeatedly had to refer homebound people to other hospitals for similar services, fragmenting their medical care.

"They came to me and asked if we could do something like this at Newton-Wellesley, and now here it is after about a year of planning," Stone said.

The list of medical conditions worthy of LIFELINE care runs the gamut from cancer to arthritis to multiple sclerosis, and people of any age are eligible.

Newton 'radicals' take on D.C.

NEWTON — The lemonade and cookies at the White House may have "rotted," and the young men may have been cut out of the official photo with President Reagan, but Steven M. Anthony and Michael A. Thomas would not have traded their week at the nation's capital with any other Bay State boy.

The two Newton North seniors, Anthony, a first-generation Greek-American, and Thomas, a poet his friend says "will twist your mind," were the 1984 representatives from the Commonwealth at Boy's Nation, an annual conference in Washington, D.C., which gives two young men from each state the opportunity to act as senators for a week.

Anthony flips open his Boy's Nation yearbook to the "official" photo of the political neophytes with the President on the White House lawn. At Reagan's left is but a slice of Anthony's curly head, and only the crescent of Thomas' black hair shows over the top of a smiling, blond senator.

"Look at that. We were both cut out of the picture. It was supposed to be a photo of the whole group," Anthony snorts in disgust.

"Yeh," adds Thomas, "And the cookies at that reception . . ." He grimaces and raises an eyebrow. "We should have gone out for Keeblers or Cheesits."

Thomas sheds his jacket and tie, drops his sneakers on the floor and pulls on a blue, Adidas t-shirt. "I think we were the most well-known senators. Maybe not the most well-liked, but the most influential. We stuck in people's minds. They couldn't intimidate us."

"I say this without even a hint of conceit," Anthony says , "But we stuck out. We had a lot of color other states didn't have. A lot of the people jumped on the bandwagon," he says, tossing his tie on the couch and opening the first few buttons of his white shirt.

"We were both radicals there, by far," Thomas adds.

Neither let the capital city, nor the 96 other boys considered the cream of the nations's crop, intimidate them. Their mottos were "Shut up before we strip you of your pride," and "Disrespect is not the greatest sin, but lying and cheating yourself is."

Each ran for president and lost — "Let's put it this way — we voted for oursleves," says Thomas. And the two "free thinking" senators, both ended up with seats in the new cabinet, Anthony as Secretary of State and Thomas as Secretary for Health and Human Services.

But while each felt they had gained by the experience, their reactions, like their styles, differed vastly.

"I'd like to be an elected official and go to Harvard. Hey, I'd like to be president of the United States," says the future political science major whose first goal is to be a senatorial aide.

Beside him, Thomas sits half-Indian style, his feet bare. His dark skin is set off by his white pants and his long fingers twist the pukka- shell necklace around his throat.

"I found I couldn't stand politics," he says, "I like to make speeches, but you have to be so cosmetic. You can't express your true feelings. I want to be an English professor and a writer, and maybe go to Georgetown.

And despite a dance with the girls from Girl's Nation, and a jaunt to the Smithsonian Institute, the boys agree that the senate debates were the highlight of the week.

Each used strategy to speak out on the issues. "We had the president of the Senate under our thumbs," laughs Anthony. "I could just look him in the eye and point to one us, and he'd let us speak."

"The best part was when you could speak in behalf of a bill. We were both inspired. We wanted to speak," Thomas says. "We weren't there just to run for president, we wanted to be heard."

Anthony added, "When Mike spoke, you could've heard a pin drop. He's a lot more literary than I am. We have different styles. I speak in a much louder tone, loudly and briskly. I won't hesitate to insult someone if they interrupt me. I give them a real straight forward slap in the face. You have to have a way of getting attention. That's a fact of life."

Thomas, whose idea of the perfect government is the anarchy in Thomas Moore's "Utopia" says, "We made an enormous impact in a lot of ways. Many were blindly devoted to America and God. And when I spoke I wanted to show them the alternatives."

"I judge things by how reasonable they are to myself," says Anthony. "I'm not ashamed of my self-confidence. And for the most part I'm a Democrat, in my views, but I'm a totally, and I mean totally, independent voter."

Thomas agrees with Anthony when he says, "The major flaw in this country's politics, is how people vote ticket. All votes are already determined and that's ridiculous."

"When I arrived," says Thomas, "I said 'good-bye' to my party. It's weird to think that we have so many narrow-minded people in government. They have their minds all set and they don't even listen to the opposition anymore."

Thomas says the thing that he will remember the longest, is the image of a cleaning woman he saw in the Pentagon. "She was in a uniform and pushing a cart. She was black and young, but looked aged. The kids in the group ignored her. They just walked right in front of her. She looked so tired ..." His eyes flash, "I never want to have to wait for any snotty-nosed kids or look so tired."

Legislative briefs

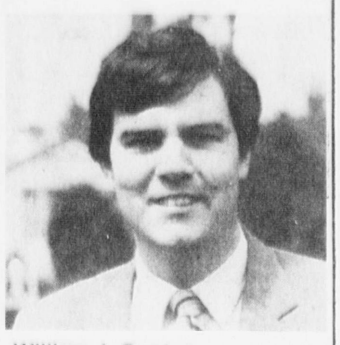

Gustus seeks re-election

Middlesex County Treasurer, William J. Gustus, announced that he will seek to retain his position in the upcoming Sept. 18 Democratic primary.

He states that he has been responsible for preparing the last four county budgets that, "have presented Middlesex County taxpayers with a decrease in the property tax assessments of over $6 million."

The Wilmington native was appointed to the position by the Board of Commissioners when former County Treasurer Rocco Antonelli resigned.

Gustus earned his BA from Wesleyan University and his law degree from New England School of Law. He is a member of the Massachusetts Bar Association.

Polio runs for county commissioner

Nicholas Polio

As Sudbury Republican Committee chairman, Nicholas Polio was asked by state GOP leaders to recruit candidates to run for state and local offices in Middlesex County this fall.

After casting about for a suitable young high-tech executive to run for county commissioner, Polio found someone, himself.

At 64, Polio is not quite the young hard charger he was seeking to break the stranglehold the Democrats have held on county office since the mid-50s.

But he is a former high-tech executive, having worked for Raytheon Co. as planning manager in the equipment division until his retirement in October 1981.

The two incumbents whose seats are at stake are being opposed in the Democratic primary by three other candidates: Robert Keough of Billerica, Albert Onessimo of Somerville and Anthony Pini of Cambridge.

But Polio expects the incumbents, Thomas Larkin and Michael McLaughlin, to be his adversaries come November.

Connolly: Public financing of elections

Secretary of State Michael J. Connolly, reacting to recent controversy on campaign financing involving two of his U.S. Senate race opponents, reiterated his long-held position that public financing of elections must become a reality as soon as possible.

Connolly said, "There is something wrong with a system that promotes fund-raising as the quickest route to success in electoral politics. It's time for a change, and that change is public financing."

Connolly's strong statement came in the wake of several days of verbal exchanges on campaign financing by Senate opponents U.S. Rep. James M. Shannon and Lt. Gov. John F. Kerry.

Lasell attends to women's needs

The Women's Center for Continuing Education, offering academic courses coupled with paying internships for women interested in career training, will open at Lasell Junior College on Sept. 11.

The Women's Center, located on Woodland Road, was established "in direct response to specific needs in women's education as articulated by area women and as also articulated by area businesses and industries," president of Lasell, Dr. Peter T. Mitchell said.

The program offers 17-week certificate programs in the fields of Fashion Merchandising, Travel and Tourism, and Electronic Office Management, Dr. Mitchell noted.

Ruth Ann Brooks, dean of continuing education at Lasell, called the new educational program, "a new concept in continuing education for women."

Brooks stated, "The Women's Center for Continuing Education will offer specially-designed programs for women who, for a variety of motivating factors, have stated their desire to attain new skills for managing change in their lives."

The academic half of the program will offer an overview of the professions, serve as an introduction to the chosen field of interest, and provide participants with the theory behind day-to-day professional activities.

The paying internships have been arranged with prominent local affiliates in both the corporate and small business sectors and are expected to help defray tuition costs.

Fashion Merchandising interns will be placed according to their needs and goals at such leading retail companies as Saks Fifth Avenue, Bloomingdale's, Neiman Marcus, and Bonwit Teller, among others.

Personnel director at the Chestnut Hill Bloomingdale's, Janice Fitzpatrick, stated, "We expect that graduates of this program will be well-skilled and self-assured because of the in-depth sales and merchandising training they will receive."

The interns in Traveling and Tourism will be working at area hotels and travel agencies, including Crimson Travel and American Express Travel Service.

Pat Patricelli, director of promotion for the Sheraton Corporation at Sheraton world Headquarters in Boston, stated, "It's a fabulous program because it offers women a new beginning. It's good for employers, too, because it opens up a whole new market of mature, capable women as interns and potential employees."

Electronic Office Management interns will work in a variety of organizations, such as banks, insurance companies, medical and law offices, and micro-computer service firms as well as at the Phase III Corporation in Dedham.

"The bottom line," states Dean Brooks, "is that both area women and local organizations are looking for the Women's Center for Continuing Education to provide solid programs to prepare women for success in their fields. I am confident that Lasell stands ready to answer its community's needs."

City accommodates voters

The commission's executive secretary, Alan W. Licarie, said his office will be open from noon to 8 p.m. on Saturday, Aug. 18, to accommodate residents unable to come to city hall on weekdays.

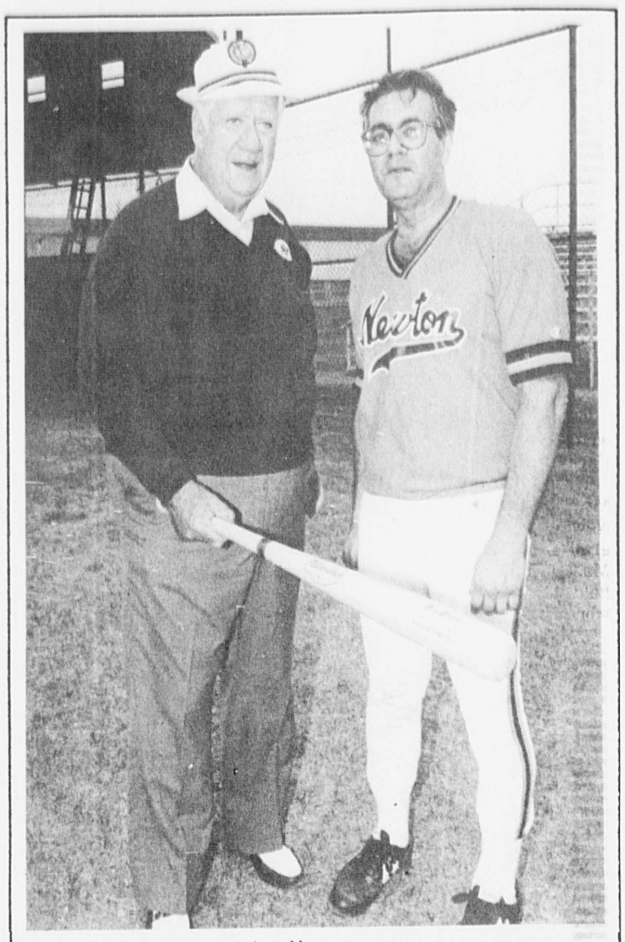

Voter registration for the state's Republican and Democratic Sept. 18 primary ends on Aug. 21.

Beside the usual office hours of 8:30 a.m. to 5 p.m., potential voters can also sign up on the last day of registration, Aug. 21, when the office will be open until 10 p.m., he added.

The state primary in September features a number of state and national races.

Republican candidates for the U.S. senatorial seat being vacated by Sen. Paul Tsongas are Walpole businessman Ray Shamie and former Att. Gen. Elliot Richardson, while the Democratic race features David M. Bartley, Michael J. Connolly, John F. Kerry and James M. Shannon.

Congressional ball

Congressman Barney Frank (D-Mass.) joined his Democratic colleagues for the first time in the annual contest between House Democrats and Republicans, which the Republicans won 13-4. Frank is shown with House Speaker "Tip" O'Neill, Jr. (D-Mass.).

Boys' Club National champ

NEWTON — Colin Ryan's two-run single in the sixth was the difference as the Boys' Club finally ended its four-year role as bridesmaid in the National League. The Boys' Club took a 6-4 win over the Mosca Club on Friday at Albemarle Field to take the championship series, 3-1.

The winners have appeared in the final in the last four years without winning the circuit crown, and have been thwarted in the last two campaigns by Mosca.

The winners parlayed only four hits into six runs with the help of 11 walks and quite a few fielding miscues.

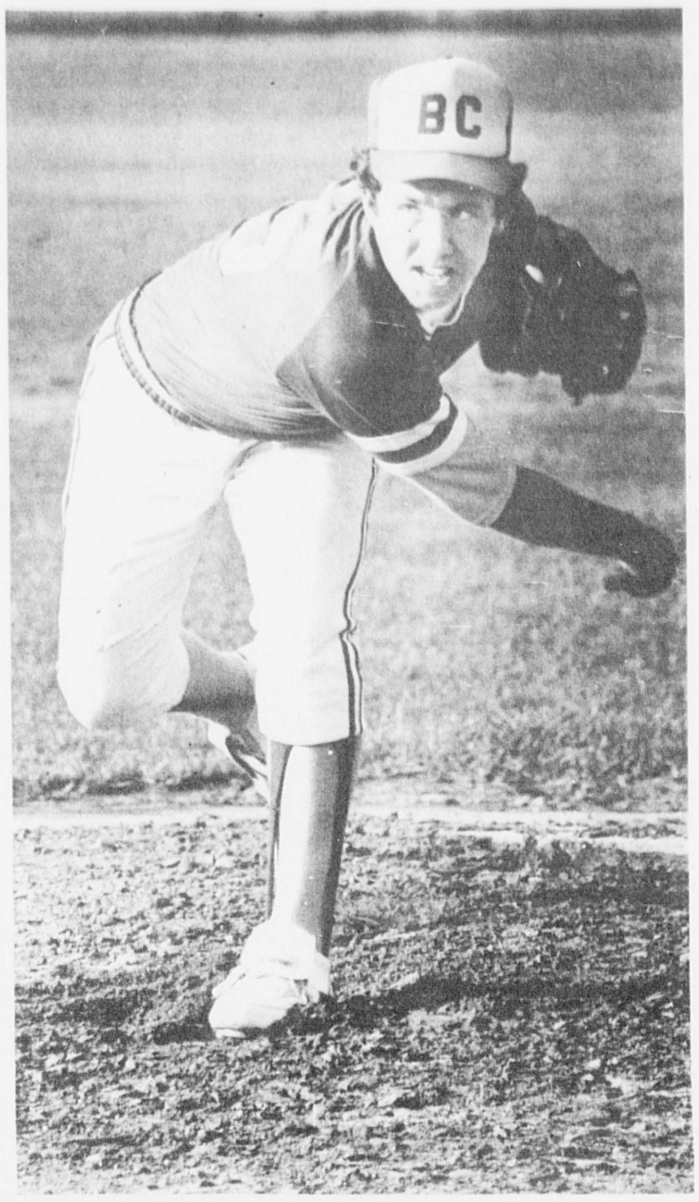

Ray Gladu, on in relief of Kevin Houlihan, had walked the bases full in the bottom of the sixth to set the stage for Ryan. He responded with a sharp grounder through the hole between short and third for the gamewinner and an insurance run.

Mosca had tied the game at four with a single run in the top of the stanza. Evan Kushner reached base on an error and went to third when a single by John Toyias was bobbled in left field. Pillan Thirumalaisamy plated the tying run with a fielder's choice ground ball to second.

Both teams exchanged big outbursts of three runs in the fifth inning.

Down, 1-0, Mosca Club's Thirumalaisamy led off the fifth with a single. Gladu, who took the loss, then walked to put runners on first and second. Adam Rosman delivered a towering three-bagger to right to give Mosca a 2-1 lead. Rosman later came home on a sacrifice fly to left by shortstop Matt Spengler.

Once again it was walks and poor defense by Mosca which sparked the Boys' Club rally. The winners got three of their own in the bottom of the fifth without benefit of a hit to take a 4-3 lead.

Boys' Club Relief pitcher Jim Proia

Walks to Joe King, Mike Walsh, and Mitch Nash loaded the bases, and Ryan drew a fourth free pass to force home the initial run of the frame. Jim Proia's grounder was misplayed at short to plate another run, and Fritz Phillips, pinch hitting for Alex DeNucci, hit into a fielder's choice for the third.

The only other run for the winners came in the third. Chris Pachus tripled to left, and he was delivered by a single to right by Newton North teammate King.

Winning pitcher King, a righthander, scattered eight hits, but more importantly, walked only two batters while striking out six. Although Houlihan and Gladu allowed only four safeties, they combined to hand out 11 free passes, and that was the difference.

The series was marked by the Boys' Club's ability to take advantage of Mosca Club's miscues. On Thursday, the Boys' Club had taken a 7-3 victory largely due to Mosca's five errors. The regular season champs, Mosca was hurt by inconsistent fielding and too many walks.

The summary:

BOYS' CLUB(6)-Coen 4-0; Connerney 3-0; Pachus 2-1; King 2-1; Walsh 3-0; Nash 2-1; Ryan 2-1; J. Proia 3-0; DeNucci 2-0; Phillips 1-0. Tot. 24-4.

MOSCA CLUB(4)-Spengler 4-1; Stoller 4-0; Paglia 2-2; Kushner 3-0; Toyias 3-0; Pappas 3-1; Thirumalaisamy 3-1; Pill 3-0; Gladu 2-1; Rosman 3-2; Houlihan 0-0. Tot. 30-8.

Score by innings:

Mosca Club	000	031	0-4-8
Boys' Club	001	032	X-6-4

3b-Rosman, Pachus. SO-King 6, Houlihan 4, Gladu 3. BB-King 2, Houlihan 8, Gladu 3. WP-King. LP-Gladu.

A 1982 graduate of Newton North, she is the daughter of John and Marion Ackerley of 17 Whitlowe Rd., West Newton, and majors in accounting.

Newton East in tourney loss

WEST ROXBURY — Newton East suffered its first loss in the Division 11-17 Little League Tournament Monday, falling to the only other unbeaten team, Walpole, in a 2-1 heartbreaker.

Newton ran into a hot pitcher by the name of Steve Traveri, and he tossed six innings of three-hit ball for the win. Traveri, an overpowering righty, struck out eight on the night.

Losing pitcher Derrick Fergus threw well, allowing six hits, and no earned runs, but didn't get much support in the field or at the bat. Both Walpole runs were the results of errors, as two dropped grounders, a double steal, and a dropped fly ball accounted for the two Walpole tallies.

Two of Newton's three hits resulted in the team's only run in the fourth. Chris Guzzi singled to right, he was moved to third on a walk and a bunt, and Nick Cheney beat out an infield hit to short to drive him home.

Fergus notched the only other safety, also an infield hit, in the fifth.

This is the only Newton outing which has been short on hitting. The team won its two other games in the tourney by scores of 14-0 and 15-3.

Hatton elected UMass lacrosse captain

AMHERST — West Newton's Karl Hatton has been elected a co-captain for the 1985 men's lacrosse team at the University of Massachusetts.

The junior played for Coach Dick Garber's squad this season, which posted an 8-4 record and was ranked 10th in the nation.

In the team's first eight games, Hatton had nine goals and three assists, including a hat trick against Boston College. Karl is a communications studies major and is the son of Mrs. Ruth Hatton of 14 Lodge Road, West Newton. Joining Hatton in the co-captaincy next season will be Perry Seale, of Simsbury, Conn.

Newton swim team captures second place in Regionals

NEWTON — The Newton Recreation swim team took second place in the "B" Regionals held at Canton recently, trailing Walpole, but placing above 10 other teams. The relays were the key to the finish, as Newton took top honors in the events six times.

Newton lost its second meet of the season earlier in the week to Sherborn, falling by a 195-188 score. The area swimmers got revenge, however in the regional meet by taking the silver while Sherborn earned third place.

The team improved its dual meet record to 8-2 with a 211-172 trouncing of Walpole earlier.

Newton's next home meet will be against Norwood on Thursday. Newton will host the "A" regionals on Saturday, when the team will attempt to take top honors in the meet for the second consecutive year.

Selective Service System

Young men born on or after January 1, 1960 are required to register with Selective Service within a month of their 18th birthday.

The registration process takes less than five minutes at the post office. A young man fills out a simple form asking only for his name, date of birth, address, telephone number and Social Security number.

Registration helps keep our country prepared with a pool of names to draw from in case of a national emergency... without interfering with people's lives. When you think about it... that's not a lot to ask for a country as great as ours.

It's quick. It's easy. And it's the Law.

Newton man indicted for alleged attempted rape of 14-year-old girl

By Middlesex News Service

CAMBRIDGE — A Middlesex County grand jury last Wednesday indicted a 35-year-old Newton man for the alleged attempted rape of a 14-year-old girl in Newton last July 22.

Indicted was John E. Davis, of 31 Northgate Park. Davis, who allegedly used a knife to assault the girl during the incident at his home, was arraigned in Middlesex Superior Court and he pleaded innocent to the charges. Bail was set in the amount of $30,000 surety with a $3,000 cash alternative.

Davis also was indicted on charges of assault and battery with a dangerous weapon, a knife, and indecent assault and battery on a child.

In addition, the grand jury charged Davis with possession of cocaine and marijuana with intent to distribute the drugs.

Police raided his home July 23 and allegedly confiscated 16 pounds of marijuana and an ounce of cocaine. Davis was sleeping when police entered his home about 6:30 a.m. holding search warrants.

The case is being prosecuted by Assistant Middlesex District Attorney Laurence Pierce. Pierce said that the attempted rape was interrupted by the child's mother who entered the room during the incident.

Teens arraigned for armed robbery

NEWTON — Three 15-year-old teenagers were arraigned yesterday in Newton District Court for armed robbery, police said.

Two of the teenagers — one from Webster Street in Newton and the other from Dorchester — were also charged with possession of a dangerous weapon (nun chakos). A third suspect from Charlemont Street in Newton faces a single count of armed robbery.

Police said they were arrested Sunday after the alleged robbery of a Newton resident inside the parking lot at McDonald's on California Street. Taken from the victim was about $10 in cash, police said.

Allegedly used in the robbery were nun chakos and a billy club, police said.

The victim, a Westland Avenue man, told police he was attacked by three young teenagers outside McDonald's at about 3:40 p.m.

Using the description provided by the man, police arrested two suspects about 30 minutes later inside the Dunkin' Donuts on Watertown Street. The third suspect surrendered to police at about 8 p.m., police said.

4 nabbed in Waban drug bust

By Eric Fehrnstrom
Staff Writer

WABAN — Four people captured in a late-night raid during an alleged heroin deal outside a Waban home last week have been charged in Newton District Court with several narcotics violations arising from the drug bust.

Two of the defendants are foreign nationals.

Police said all four were arrested by state police narcotics agents after a brief struggle following a stake-out of a single-family home at 135 Neshobe Rd.

The agents, members of the state police Narcotics Task Force, seized an undisclosed amount of heroin. One state trooper contacted said the amount of confiscated heroin did not exceed one pound.

Michael D. Berzon, 26, of 135 Neshobe Rd., Newton, was charged with possession of heroin with intent to distribute, illegal possession of heroin, assault and battery on a police officer and possession of a firearm without a permit.

A default warrant was issued for Berzon's arrest when he failed to appear at his arraignment Monday, but Judge Monte G. Basbas held the warrant until Aug. 20.

Berzon was reported in good condition at Massachusetts General Hospital. He was taken there for treatment of an unknown ailment following his arrest.

Tracy Stephens, 31, of 336 Concord Ave., Cambridge, was also reported in good condition at Massachusetts General Hospital following her arrest. She was charged with possession of heroin with intent to distribute and conspiracy to violate controlled substance laws.

A default warrant was issued for her arrest on Monday when she failed to appear at her arraignment.

According to sources, their ailments are not arrest-related.

Two foreign nationals arrested in the raid, Kin P. Lee, 22, of Quincy, and Robert A. Skeen, 34, of Boston, appeared at their arraignment in Newton District Court. Their countries of origin are unknown. Bail for both was set at $2,500 surety, or $250 cash.

Lee pleaded not guilty to possession of heroin with intent to distribute, illegal possession of heroin and assault and battery on a police officer.

Skeen entered no pleas to conspiracy to violate controlled substance laws and assault and battery on a police officer.

Vacation spurs trek to the Highlands

By Frank Mulligan
Staff Writer

NEWTON — Robert Sciegienny made a 2800-mile bicycle trek from Colorado back to his home in Newton Highlands because he said, "Well, it was summer vacation."

The 20-year-old Boston University student made the journey from Boulder, Colo. with his friend, Peter Sims, in 35 days, averaging 80 miles-a-day and picking up the pace to 100-110 miles on days when there was a tailwind, Sciegienny said.

The weather was ideal during practically the entire journey and, the Newton Highlands native said, the pair was delayed a few days by rain only after they reached New York.

"It was just something to do over the summer vacation. We went out to Boulder and stayed with friends for about a week and biked through the Rockies and then we started on our way back," he said.

Sciegienny added that it, "felt great to be back," and that once the two cyclists reached Greenfield, Mass. the race for home was on. "We did a lot of riding when we reached Greenfield. We did about 95 miles because we were anxious to get back."

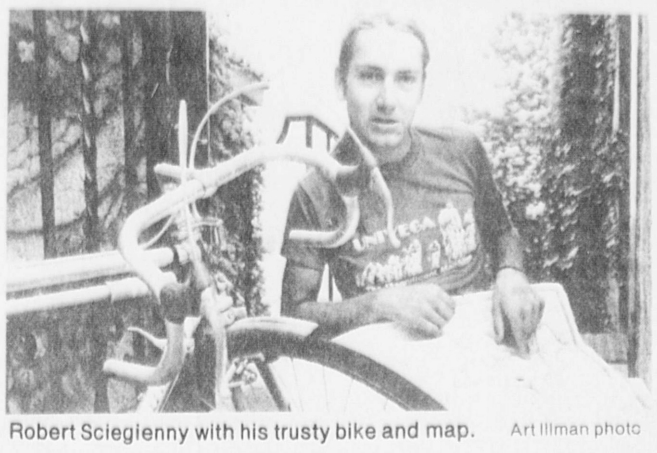

Sciegienny explained that their daily routine was to get up around 8 a.m. and "pretty much ride through the day," stopping two or three times for hour-long breaks to eat, rest, or do some sightseeing.

The duo made use of no special equipment or supplies to facilitate their journey, he said. His bike was a basic 10-speed with no fancy extras and he used a four-year-old saddlebag to carry clothing and tools.

For the most part, Sciegienny said, they slept outdoors, "under the stars," and, if the weather was bad, they slept in a tent they brought along on the trip.

The BU student said all that outdoor sleeping had somewhat altered his ideas of comfort. "We became used to sleeping on earth. I slept in a bed in Michigan and woke up with a backache."

Although he had had some long-distance cycling experience, he had never taken a trip of quite this length. "I rode to New Hampshire a few years back and I've driven along the Mohawk Trail from Greenfield to New York."

The pair sacrificed some time on the trip by taking a relatively circuitous route to enhance their sightseeing and to avoid going through Chicago where they felt the traffic could hold them up. The two cyclists traveled through Colorado, Wyoming, South Dakota, Iowa, Wisconsin, Michigan, Michigan's Upper Peninsula, Canada, New York and Massachusetts.

For the Canadian portion of their journey, the pair entered Sault Ste. Marie, Ontario, and exited through Kingston, Ontario, after taking some time out to admire the city.

Though the young men avoided setting a strict timetable, Sims estimated to Sciegienny before the trip that they would be returning on Aug. 1. He was off by a little over four hours.

The greatest hazard on the journey was not the weather, or attacks from hostile wildlife in the more remote areas, but simply motorists, Sciegienny said. "People don't watch out for bikes. We were sometimes forced to ride in some pretty hairy situations."

The people they met on the trip, however, were both supportive of the journey and helpful to the cyclists, he said. While stranded in Iowa by flat tires, one man opened his hardware store "in the middle of the night" to get them patching kits.

As the trip wore on and the thought of finally arriving back home began occurring with greater frequency, Sciengienny laughed when he recalled the one thing uppermost in his mind — "taking a shower."

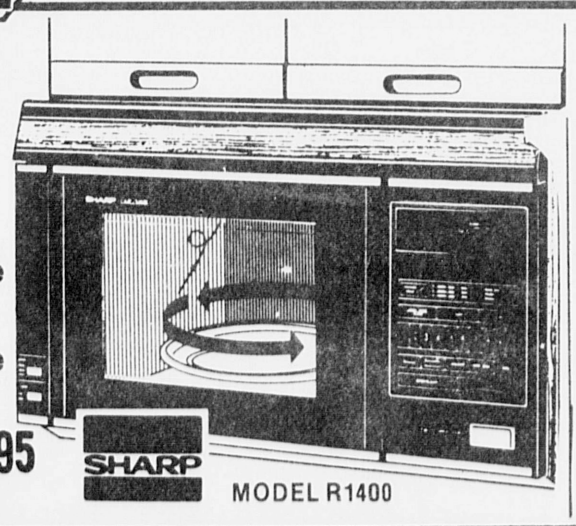

After all that outdoor living it was "nice to have a roof over your head again," he said.

Valley Girl lingo isn't really down

By Iris Krasnow
United Press International

Yo, chief! Get a clue. Hip-speak, punk talk, even Valley Girl lingo is OUT. It "ain't really down." Modern teen jargon from Harlem to Long Beach has shoved the likes of "far out" and "totally awesome" into ancient history.

Splitting the scene is a lost art; now you "peel off" or "blaze." "My man" has turned into "homeboy" or "cuz." To be superfine is to be "super bad."

"If you're cool, you're 'down'," says Darin Bembury, 19, who grew up in Harlem. He begins his sophomore year at Hofstra University on Long Island this fall. "We don't say 'groovy' or 'far out' or anything like that. I never really heard those expressions. Cool is sorta in — I think cool is a word that will never go out."

Even the word "word" has changed: "If we're talking with the homeboys and someone will say something you agree with, you say 'word'. It means, 'yeah, you're right'," explains Bembury, laughing. "I don't know how it got started."

Neither does Jackie Sundeen, 16, a student at the Arts Magnet High School in Dallas. "Word. Huh, never heard that one," she giggles. "Here, when something is outstanding or wonderful, it's 'wicked.' Or, it someone just walked up in a gorgeous dress she just bought and someone else is insanely jealous, she would probably say, 'ohhhhh, dude'."

"The movie, 'Fast Times at Ridgemont High,' gave us 'oh dude'. It also gave us, 'gnarley'," she adds.

Hmmmm, gnarley. "Yeah, if you say it in a really excited voice it means good. If you say it sort of sarcastically, it's a derogatory term," she says with authority.

"Get a clue" is what another generation meant when it said, "Wake up and smell the coffee."

Last year's West Coast rage, Valley Girlese, is yesterday's scoop. "All that 'for sure, for sure,' that's looooong gone," sniffs Scott Magidson, 16, a senior at Polytechnic High School in Long Beach, Calif. "That was just a fad. A few people still talk like that, but they're preppies."

And what are you? "I guess I'm kinda a heavy metaler. That comes from the kind of music we listen to — hard, hard rock, like Krokus, Ratt and Motley Crue." An "intense" heavy metaler, he adds, is a "headbanger." And getting nabbed by the cops is to be "busted by the bobby in blue."

Girlfriends are never called "old ladies" as they once were in hip circles. "Now, we call them 'wahinis'," continues Magidson. "It means wife in Samoan."

Surfing and partying, two prime Southern California pastimes, still play a key role in local vocabulary.

"We 'safari down to the beach and jam the waves.' It means go to the beach and do some surfing'," he says. "There are lots of words for partying. 'Go get the brew-has, means go get the beers. 'Go score the hooters' is go get the joints. 'Crank it up' is when you turn up the music really loud."

And when the party's over, "we say 'I'm blazing' or 'I'm jamming'," Magidson signs off.

In parts of New York, it's "smell you later."

A couple of perennial must-haves across the board are "like" and "you know." Kids still string the two terms together at the beginning of a sentence — "Like, you know ...."

"Everyone says 'like' all the time," says Kerry Celentano, 18, a senior at Suffield Academny in Suffield, Conn. "My father says 'beep' each time we say it. He gets really upset."

"Teens talk differently because they are brought up differently today," continues her brother Greg, 16, who grew up in New York City. "There are a lot of little slang words you learn on the street. Like, if you got drunk, you would be 'wasted' or 'pasted' or 'crocked' or ——faced'." Greg is unaware that these terms were probably used by his parents in high school — they're new to his generation.

All this is mild compared to real Harlem street language, says Bembury. "The slang of white people is different from the black people," he says. "They use slang more by the books, the 'like, you know' stuff. It's different for blacks. We use pretty outrageous words. We take words from the books and switch it over into our own language.

"Say if somebody would try to make a fool out of me, I'd say 'don't play me' or 'she tried to play me'. I was listening to some music just now and it said 'you ain't really down, playing those games you do'. That's black. A lot of fellows will see a girl walking down the street, and she has a good back area, they say, 'she has a good future behind her'. Or, they say, 'can I have a hamburger with that shake?'."

The same sentiment is expressed with equal coolness in a southeast borough of the city. "When a pretty girl walks in the room, people might say 'catch the ice'," reports Halstead York, 14, who was raised in Brooklyn. He is now a sophomore at West Town boarding school in Pennsylvania. "That's New York deli talk.

"Another romance term is 'interface' from computer jargon, you know, when two programs are interfaced. When two people are going together, you say 'they're interfaced.'"

As for why each generation of teens dreams up a dialect all its own, York calls it "a passing thing. While our vocabulary is building up, we tend to use slang words a lot," he says. "Most teens can't get their thoughts together real easily so there are a lot of ahhs and uhmms and a lot of likes and a lot of repeating themselves."

Victoria McGarry, 19, who grew up in Beverly Hills, feels adopting a second language is "an image thing, to be hip. You know, to be cool and blase about everything. Like, a lot of words, you don't even say the full word, you'll say a shortened version. All teenagers would say 'fridge' instead of refrigerator."

And once you catch on, it's tough to shake. "Slang is easy to pick up and hard to lose," says Bembury with a deep laugh. "Maybe we do it so the adults don't know what we're talking about."

Catch the drift? "Ugh, don't say that," groans Magidson of Long Beach. "That's really out. My parents say that."

Here is a partial list of words and phrases in current use among headbangers, homeboys and wahinis: ain't really down: outdated, not with the in crowd bad: good beemer: BMW car blasted: drunk or high blaze: to leave brew-ha: beer busted: getting caught doing something, not necessarily illegal; i.e. cheating on a test choke: to make a mistake, to flub cuz: friend dead: unhip down: cool, with it gnarley: very good or very bad, depending on tone of voice. headbanger: an extreme heavy metaler heavy metaler: person interested in hard, hard rock homeboy: a friend, my man hooter: joint hot: cool jam: to leave L-7: a square (note shape of L and 7 when put together) locking: holding a breakdancing move popping: robot-like breakdancing move slave: one's profession, as in "what's your slave?" smell you later: East Coast rendition of "see you later" space puppy: spaced out, flighty wahini: girlfried wicked: outstanding yo, chief: Hey, you

Parents, freshmen cope with shock

The heartbroken mother letting go the hands of little Johnny and Suzie as they leave for their first day of kindergarden has become a familiar sight that brings a lump to the national throat.

But what about 13 years later, when Johnny and Suzie are fleeing the family nest and heading for their first day of college? The wrench of family relations is often as great and sometimes greater, but few familys are prepared for it , according to counselers and psychologists at the University of California at San Diego who Advise parents and new students on life after high school-that first year of college.

"For the first time in their lives, many of your sons and daughters are going to face real academic competition and the results may come as ashock to both of you," Miriam Lewis Levens, a campus clinical social worker, warned the parents of a group of incoming freshmen. "For most of their lives they have probaly been top students, considered bright among their peers and with a long history of high grades behind them. But they will be just one of a whole host of bright students."

You and your child may be faced with their the first C or F grade of your lives, and you had better be prepared to cope with it."

Earlier seasoned students with two or three years of univerity experience told the parents to "expect some changes in your daughters and sons when you see them next Thanksgiving or Christmas". The predictions are part of the "orientation program" in which parents and freshmen are invited to the campus during the summer recess to tour the facilitys.

Like students themselves, th eparents sat nervously in the lounges and study rooms as their youthful guides coaxeds them toward a better understanding of what to expect as their children grow into the college experience. Sometimes the initial change is a little drastic, but most often students settle back to a reasonable position as they establish their new values.

"This is a time when your childrens views will start to crystalize. A lot of values you instilled in them as they have grown up will now start to show." said college senior Julia Whitworth, who served as a guide for the parents. The parents seemed satisfied. But, Levens warned the parents,"if your child suddenly arrives at home and says,'I don't like it there and don't want to go back,' they are not hallucinating." Across the United States, on average, 50 percent of the students who start on a campuss finish at a different campuss.

Levens urged the parents to understand the guilt their children might feel if they score low grades or don't want to stay at a university. "I see many student riddled with guilt because they think their parents have made huge sacrifices to send them to college and now they are not making it or not enjoying it."

But university life is not all "doom and gloom" said Levens, who conceded that most of her remarks pointed to the pitsfalls of the campus life. "Many of your children have been bored to tears at high school. They have been forced to hide their intelligence just to be accepted by their peers."

North Carolina supports school for the arts

WINSTON-SALEM, N.C. (UPI) — When students return to the North Carolina School of the Arts this fall there will be few of the traditional high school and college trappings, only hard work for those who crave performance careers.

Situated in south Winston-Salem on a small tree-dotted campus, the school caters to those with exceptional talent in dance, music, drama, stage design and production and visual art. It opens its iron gates to only a few — just over 700 — from around the world who are able to survive strenous auditions and testing.

"It's a personalized education where everyone is pushed to the limit," said Jim Houlik, director of special programs in music and a saxophone instructor.

Last year, students from 48 states and 13 countries attended the school that opened in 1965. About 60 percent were from outside North Carolina. Music had the largest enrollment with dance second.

The dream of Italian composer Vittorio Giannini, the school has survived such nicknames as "The Tippy Toe School".

The first state-supported school for the arts in the nation, it received $240,000 from North Carolina its opening year. Now, its state funds total $5 million. Tuition fees range from $20 per year for an in-state high school student to $3,000 annually for out-of-state college students. Everyone is billed $2,500 for room and board. Samuel Stone, development director, said 83 percent of all students last year received some form of financial assistance.

The old Carolina Theater in the city's downtown area underwent a more than $10 million renovation to became the Stevens Center for use by the school and professional performing artists. It seats 1,380 and has an annual budget of $350,000.

There are two smaller theaters and a concert hall on campus. The school offers a high school diploma, a bachelor of fine arts, and a master's in design and production to students ranging from 12 to 35.

Those attending a regular nine-month school year must be invited to attend and invited to return at the end of each year.

Invitation to re-enroll is by arts faculty review, and each student wanting to attend the regular nine-month session must audition.

Students attending the short summer school session may audition with tapes or portfolio. In the current crop, there are students from 54 of North Carolina's 100 counties, about 13 percent or them minorities.

The school gives 862 public performances annually, more than half of them off-campus, seen by audiences of more than 300,983.

There are general studies courses by grade level — a 10th grader studies 10th grade English and math in addition to arts courses. College students generally take just enough non-arts courses to satisfy degree requirements.

High school and college students stay in separate dormitories, and some college students have off-campus apartments.

"There are no education classes," said Janet Fox, public relations director. "We train them to be performers, not educators."

One can look at the school's alumni and see the philosophy works. The school has graduates in nearly every major orchestra in the nation, on Broadway, television shows, movies, and in touring companies.

They include Matt Asheford who portrays Cagney on the soap opera "Search For Tomorrow"; and Thomas Hultz, who was in "Animal House" and will portray Mozart in "Amadeus." Celia Weston is on "Alice." Belinda Tolbert played the daughter-in-law on "The Jeffersons."

A student hopeful is judged on ability to perform before grade point average is considered, although an 800 combined SAT score is required for entrance the college Admiswions Director Dirk Dawson said 1,200 to 1,500 auditions are conducted annually.

A day for a college student might begin at 6 a.m. and not end until 10:30 p.m. Dancers must initially practice a minimum of three hours a day and increase that time as they progress. Between dance, drama and music classes, the students must study their general courses, which often take an artistic slant.

"The physical exertion is incredible," said Ivan Rea, a ballet student from Charlotte. "You have to make it what you want it to be. A lot come through the school and become disenchanted with the work because it is so rigorous. They are not slave drivers; they just help you be the best you can be."

More than 400 performances are given a year. Senior drama students spend six weeks touring the Eastern United States performing, while senior music students learn about contracts, copyrights, and agents.

"They are truly motivated," Dawson said. "They are here because they want to be. The sophomore year is the crucial year."

Dawson said more than 70 percent of the school's graduates either work in the arts field in which they trained or continue their studies.

The school's toughness was noted by Michael McNeill of Silver Spring, Md., and Stacy Huntington of Chapel Hill, both senior drama s tudents. When they began their program three years ago their drama class numbered 51. This year, 15 remain.

Students in the various disciplines won't hesitate to say they've considered quitting the school.

"They give you no illusion here about what it's like in the working world," said dance student Michael DeVers, 19, of Mount Holly. "Every third or fourth day in class I'd get depressed and want to quit. I have no social life. I don't date and I don't go to parties. I spend my weekends catching up on my studies."

Rea said there have been days when he would return to his room, jerk every dance poster off the wall and throw his ballet shoes into the hall.

"After you're through with your tantrum, you pull yourself together," said Rea, who has suffered a stress fracture in his foot, jammed toes and tendonitis.

DeVers said he was initially apprehensive about attending the school.

"I had heard all those horror

Uncle Sam helps pay for college

By James McCormack

"Be all you can be." Everyone is familiar with the popular campaign todays Army. But, for the college bound student the slogan may be better sad as "Get all you can get."

For many high school students the dream of attending college ar often crushed by the soaring costs of higher education. One possible solution? Join the Army. The U.S. Army has several programs aimed at helping students pay for college.

The Amy College Fund is available to all eligible persons that enlist. The requirements are, a score of 50 or above on the Armed Forces Quali-fication Test, a high school diploma and enlistment for training in one of the selected Military Occupational Specialties (MOS).

An enlistee must sign up for the Veteran's Educational Assistance Program(VEAP), this along with the supplemental bonus makes up the College Fund. If an individual enlists for two years they may earn up to 15,000 dollars for college. The program works by having an agreed upon amount between 25 and 100 dollars deducted from the monthly pay. After twelve consecutive months the Army will match each dollar 2 for 1 This along with a bonus of upto 8,000 dollars will earn a student upto 15,000 dollars for college at the end of two years.

For those that have already compieted college and received a diploma along with a college loan dept, the army has something for them too. If qualified, for each year on active duty will reduce a student loan a third or 1,500 dollars, whichever the greater amount. At the end of a three year enlistment the student could see their entire loan payed off.

If going in the active Army for two or three years isn't appealling there remains the Army Reserve and the Army National Guard. Two part time jobs with fulltime benefits. The Army Reserve will give a qualified student upto 4,000 dollars over a six year period towardsa college. The Reserves and the National Guard also have a student loan repayment plan.

In the Commonwealth of Massachussetts, all members of the Mass. Army National Guard are entitled to a 100% tuition waiver to all state colleges and universities. These benefits along with the monthly pay and bonus' available make membership in the Guard and Reserves very atractive to enterprising students. JMC

Denim: Tips for Laundering the "Basic Blues"

What fabric found in every back-to-school wardrobe dates back to the Middle Ages? First manufactured in the French textile center of Nimes as "Serge de Nimes," its name was later shortened to "de Nimes." Today it's known as "denim," a fashion staple for every age.

Retailers report that the dark indigo blue, 100 percentv cotton variety of denim, less faded than last year, is the preferred back-to-school look for this year.

Since most youngsters will start school with at least one new pair of "basic blues,' the laundry experts remind washer users that, especially when new, the indigo blue dye of blue denim can fade during washing. Dark denim should be washed seperately, or with other deeply dyed items such as dark socks.,

Thanks to finishing processes such as Sanfoizing, shrinkige is no longer the problrem of years past if cotton denim is laundered in warm water , then tumble-dried on a medium or permanent press setting.

Relieve child's anxiety

Plan for first day of school

By Sandra L. Latimer

COLUMBUS, Ohio (UPI) — Ruth Varner took her first born to school his first day and he got lost.

After searching an hour and a half, the principal suggested a look in his classroom, she recalled.

"I poked my head in the room and there he was. He waved to me and said 'see you later, Mom.' That's when I cried," said Mrs. Varner. Her second child did his own crying — every day for his first week in class.

As coordinator of counseling and referrals for the social agency Action for Children, now advises other parents on how to handle that first day.

Sending a child off to school for the first time causes separation anxiety in both the parent and child, she said. It can be alleviated by advance planning.

Some of that advance planning can start in the summer. Parents should plan activities involving large groups so the child won't be overwhelmed by large numbers and extra noises, she recommends. And, she adds, it's good therapy for a shy child.

"Prior to the first day, visit the school. Take the child on the route he will be taking to school to get him familiar with the route," she recommends. "Make sure the child knows what to expect.

"Take him to meet his teacher," she added, pointing out that this is one of child's early contacts with people who have different personalities.

Mrs. Varner also recommends that parents, about two weeks before school starts, set up a schedule like that of school days so the child's body will be synchronized for school.

"Put him to bed and get him up at the hours he will be on when he goes to school," she said. "Get his clothes ready the night before. Spend the whole day doing things like he will be doing in school."

When a child gets to school, "it's good socialization to eat in the cafeteria," she said. "That way he can be with friends."

If the child carries a lunch, parents might take a lesson from Mrs. Varner, whose two boys brown bag it.

"Every Sunday night at 8:30 we start making sandwiches," she said.

She and the boys make enough sandwiches to last a week. They're labeled, and half go in the refrigerator, the other half in the freezer to be taken out Wednesday. The boys help sack potato chips and cut carrots.

"It takes a lot of hassles out of mornings," she said.

After school is an important time for both parent and child.

She recommends a snack be ready for the child — something nutritious like an apple rather than a candy bar. And she says the parent should take time to talk with and listen to the child.

If the parent works, she recommends the parent plan to be at home the first week when the child comes home. Then make sure he has some place to go after school and knows who is responsible for him.

When a child starts to school, he should know his given name, address and phone number and his parents' real names — "not just Mommy and Daddy," says Mrs. Varner.

She also says a child — and school officials — should know if he has any allergies and what he can and can't eat or if he can't be around any animals.

Once a child is in school, it's an opportune time for the parents to get involved, she adds. "Schools need volunteers and parents — both mother and father — need to know what's going on," she said.

And, she says, there is nothing wrong with an impromptu visit to the classroom to find out what is going on.

Selective Service System

Young men born on or after January 1, 1960 are required to register with Selective Service within a month of their 18th birthday.

The registration process takes less than five minutes at the post office. A young man fills out a simple form asking only for his name, date of birth, address, telephone number and Social Security number.

Registration helps keep our country prepared with a pool of names to draw from in case of a national emergency... without interfering with people's lives. When you think about it... that's not a lot to ask for a country as great as ours.

stories about perversions, pressures and drugs. That my body would be ruined," DeVers said. "I found out a lot of horror stories were quite exaggerated. You can always be led astray if you wish to be."

The school's international faculty of about 100 must be or have beer performers. There is no tenure system.

"It's the faculty that attracts the students," Stone said.

Houlik said, "The faculty really is tuned in to what you are doing. It's a feeling of Big Brother watching.

"The students receive minimum approval and maxium expectation. It's a supportive but demanding environment."

Gyula Pandi, a ballet instructor who danced with the Hungarian National Ballet, cites the faculty's dedication as one of the school's key assets.

"All the teachers live here for their job," Pandi said. "They are all here because of the school."

The school also hosts guest conductors and choreographers.

Lesley Hunt, assistant dean of drama, said a drama student's first two years are often called "boot camp" because of the intensity of physical and vocal training. Students give no public performance until their junior year and only then after they study dress, dance and mannerisms from the 17th, 18th, and 19th centuries. That includes the correct way to hold a China tea cup and to wear corsets.

"We don't encourage them to take summer jobs in acting until after their first two years," Ms. Hunt said. "We want them to do anything but act so they can observe people in life and use that."

How does your school system measure up ?

WASHINGTON (UPI) — You might want to check out your local school against 14 "attributes of success," compiled by the Department of Education. They are:

—Clear academic goals.
—High expectations for students.
—Order and discipliine.
—Rewards and incentives for students.
—Regular and frequent monitoring.
—Opportunities for meaningful student responsibility and participation.
—Teacher efficacy.
—Teacher rewards and incentives.
—Concentration on academic learning times.
—Positive school climate.
—Administrative leadership.
—Well-articulated curriculum.
—Evaluation used to improve instruction.
—Community suport and involvement.

Department staffers compiled the list after studying research on effective schools by Michael Cohen, National Institute of Education, and William Firestone at Research for Better Schools, Philadelphia.

Chopstick skills vs. test-taking

Critics of U.S. schools sometimes ask why America can't produce letter-perfect schools such as those in Japan, where students are models of deportment and even help clean their schools.

But it turns out Japanese schools are not perfect, says a report in "Education USA," the weekly education newspaper.

"The Japanese Ministry of Education reports that only 48.4 percent of elementary school pupils surveyed said they know how to use chopsticks correctly," according to the magazine.

"The fault, some say, lies with an educational system that focuses too much on test-taking ability and ignores teaching children how to get through the day."

Public vs private

By Willard Abraham, Ph D.

Are public schools better than private schools? is a complex question with the answer depending on which private and public schools are being compared, what the child's needs are and what teacher the child will have in the various settings. The most significant factor of all may be the latter-the specific teacher to whom a youngster is assigned.

In some communities the onlyreal difference may be the class size. However, the quality of the teacher and the teacher-child relationship have to be considered even when class size is noted. Many of us have had magnificent teachers in huge classes and incompetent ones in small groups, and vice versa.

Public education supporters often criticize private schools by claiming that private school teachers and curricula are inferior because they are not necessarily certified by state goverments.

Private school supporters, particulary for parochial schools, respond to this by saying that their schools are arms of their churches, and that state control of teacher certification and curricula violates religious freedom.

Since both private and public schools have the goal of ensuring quality education for children, conscientious parents have quite a job determining which type of education is best for their children. Parents can shop around to select a school for their children by comparing the programs of various schools. They should use every available source, including school visits, other parents, other children and their own, to help them arrive at the best decision. One obvious factor that cannot be ove ooked is cost. A private school education is often up in the thousands.

Even after the decision is made and enrollment has taken place, there is a need for cconstant vigilance, a continuation of contacts within the school and an effort to secure the best teacher (for a special child) each year. That effort doesn't mean switching a youngster from one school to another, a practice usually to be used sparingly, but looking ahead within the same setting.

No educationalprogram will be perfect . However, it's refreshing to find an increasing number of parents whose concern leads to active involvement in their childrens education. CNS

Bribery Backfires

ITHICA,N.Y.- Motivating a child with tha promise of a reward often produces the opposite results.Instead of trying harder at the task, concludes a study of nursery-school children at Cornell University, the child frequently loses enthusiasm for the project.

The study also found that chilkdren who are lured into tasks tend to complete the project merely to satisfy others. They achieve better results when working at a project they want to do for its own sake.

College enrollment remains steady

Dr. Jack Peltason is president of the American Council on Education in Washington, D.C., an umbrella group for higher education. He will be heading back to campus this fall himself, he revealed when asked for a size-up of the college scene.

"I'm going back to the University of California at Irvine to be chancellor," he said.

He was chancellor at the University of Illinois-Urbana before taking the ACE leadership job seven years ago. He likes returning to academia; dislikes leaving friends and associates in Washington.

Peltason pegs college enrollment at around the same as last year, 12.8 million, including 5.4 million part-timers. It may inch up.

"This confounds predictions that college enrollment would decline. It keeps going up," he said.

The fallacy of the predictions from seers who warned about "the coming depression in higher education," he said, is that they were based on the pool of 18-year-olds. Peltason never bought the predictions, and continues to believe higher education is a growth industry.

"The pool of 18-year-olds was only one of many variables," he said.

The long-predicted era of lifelong learning has become entrenched.

"Engineers will have to return to school to be re-educated at least three times during their careers to keep up with changes. That's one example of what I mean," Pelatason said.

"The trend is going to continue. Lifelong learning, brushup, updating are in. Some of it is job-required. And the business of a military career in peacetime, if you think of it, is going to school."

Financial problems are a major and continuing headache on all the 3,000 college campuses, public and private.

"Science laboratories, both for research and teaching, continue not up to date," he said, citing those as perhaps the most crucial area.

"We were a long time getting into this problem and we will be a long time getting out of it. I think it is bottoming out.

"Industry and government, federal and state, are aware now of the seriousness of the problem.

"Awareness is spreading and I believe the federal government must take the lead to correct this problem. Everyone must contribute to the solution. The government is not 'they.' It is the American government. And the American government isn't 'they,' it is us.

Turning to tuition, Peltason said it will be up about 8 percent. That puts the instruction part of the school bill at around $1,000 for the year at the average public college or university and "about twice that" at the average private institution.

One reason tuition is up is that schools are catching up, Peltason says.

During the era of high inflation, tuition increases lagged behind inflation. Schools delayed maintenance and did not raise salaries in step with rising prices.

Does Peltason expect any trouble on campus as a result of the Supreme Court ruling that students who do not register for the draft are not qualified to receive federal aid for education?

"It wasn't a problem on any campus during semesters preceding the Supreme Court decision and I don't anticipate it will be in the future," he said.

Grant, who directed compilation of "The Digest of Education Statistics-1983-1984" at the National Center for Education Statistics, provides these statistical highlights of the new school year:

—Kindergarten to grade 12, there will be 43.9 million students vs. 44.2 million the previous year, down 300,000. The total breaks down to 30.2 million in kindergarten to grade eight; 13.7 million in grades nine to 12.

—About one in nine students in kindergarten to grade 12 will attend private, independent or parochial schools.

—The education system includes 3.3 million teachers and about 300,000 superintendents, principals, supervisors.

Enrollment

—About 22 percent of the more than 12 million expected on the college trail will attend private schools.

"The big boom in college enrollment may be over but we just don't know," Grant said.

"The fact is that when employment is up, people get jobs," he said. "When unemployment is up, they tend to go to school."

Grant said a new wave of enrollment is expected in public schools at the elementary level.

"It won't show up until total figures in 1985," he said, "but the new wave bulge already is showing up in increased enrollment in the first and second grades."

The "bulge" is due to a baby boomlet among the original baby boomer. From 1973 through '76 the annual number of births was between 3.1 million and 3.2 million.

"Subsequently, there have been annual increases that have raised the number of children born from 3.3 million in 1977 to more than 3.7 million in 1982," according to the "Digest of Education Statistics, 1983-84."

A pediatrician's guide on meeting emergencies

The American Academy of Pediatrics Committee on School Health this summer issued "Guidelines for Urgent Care in School" for teachers, principals and other school personnel.

Purpose: to avert a tragedy when medical emergencies occur at school.

"It is important for school administrators ... to formulate a guide for emergency care," the committee says in a report in "Pediatrics," the academy journal.

"Minor injuries and illnesses can occur in children during the course of the school day. They are usualy well handled by the nurse in consultation with the school medical adviser; true medical emergencies are quite rare.

"Many school systems, however, have part-time school medical advisers and nurses who cover more than one school building and may not be readily available.

"Therefore, the burden of emergency recognition and management may fall on teachers, principals, or other personnel in the local school.

"Inappropriate and delayed care may result in increased morbidity or possible death.

"Finally, consideration must be given to the question of malpractice or assault charges being filed by the families of inappropriately treated children."

The guidelines:

—Every school district should have an identified, qualified administrator with decision-making powers.

—An emergency care manual and standing orders for first aid should be developed and made available to nurses, athletic staff and faculty volunteers.

—The school nurse should be the key person to administer a medical emergency program and must be trained to do so.

—As school nurses or physicians cannot always be available, two or more regular school staff members should be trained to handle emergencies until medical help arrives. Programs should include training in first aid, cardiopulmonary resuscitation and shock recognition and treatment.

—"Good Samaritan" legislation should be encouraged in each state to provide legal protection for emergency care providers.

—Emergency medical kits should be kept with the medications in each school, and the kits should be available to trained staff volunteers.

—Athletic emergencies may be handled by a coach or staff member who has received training in sports medicine and emergency care..

—Serious illnesses or injuries should be recorded and filed with the appropriate health care providers, as well as with the principal and in the student's health records.

15	$25,200	$42,000	$208.00	$347.00

Now that a single year of room, board and tuition at a state university costs about $4,500 and many of the more prestigious schools have topped the $12,000-a-year mark, most parents are wondering how they'll ever foot such a bill.

And inflation rates amplify their concern. According to an article in Redbook magazine, if inflation continues to rise at the current rates, tha average annual college tab will double in 10 years.

If your children soon will be of school age, the place to start looking for help, advised the article, is the financial aid office of the school they want to attend. This office will tell you how to apply for scholorships and grants, spell out the terms of educational loans made to students and parents and explain the state and federal aid programs.

Two other valuable sources of information are the U.S. Goverment's free booklet, The Student Guide: Five Federal Financial Aid Programs, available from the Consumer Information Center, Department 508K Pueblo, Colo. 81009, and "The College Cost Book," published by the College Scholorship Service of The College Entence Examination Board and available in bookstores.

City hopes to preserve marathon

By Edward Cafasso
Staff Writer

NEWTON — Mayor Theodore D. Mann, alarmed by recent reports that the Boston Marathon may cease to exist after 1985, has offered the city's help and support to race organizers.

In a recent letter to the Boston Athletic Association's board of governors (BAA), Mann responded to recently published reports indicating that an internal power struggle within the BAA may threaten the future of the historic race.

"I believe that would be a tragedy for racing - and for the greater Boston area, which values so greatly the tradition of the Marathon...If there is, indeed, any question concerning the future of the Marathon, then I take this opportunity to offer support," Mann wrote.

Newton, where the race course includes portions of Washington Street and Commonwealth Avenue, has basked in the international limelight created by the spectacle for over a half century as the home of Heartbreak Hill.

While the race has presented some logistical problems to the city over the years, including redeployment of emergency personnel and littering, the money spent by millions of spectators drawn to Marathon communities represents a significant yearly boon to local businesses.

With the focus of worldwide attention turned on the area, the Marathon also provides a good public relations medium for the cities and towns through which it passes.

A Primer For The Garden City

By Kevin C. Kennedy
News Editor

With the school year about to begin and complaints about the lack of "basics" in the school curriculum being aired regularly, the Graphic offers the following spelling primer for grade schoolers. The time-tested teaching tool offers a brief lesson in some of the city's distinguishing characteristics.

A A is for alderman — A member of the Board of Aldermen, the legislative branch of city government. The word may be changed to "alderperson" in the near future if some feminist members of the board have their way.

Ask your Mom or Dad about your local alderman. Chances are, unless the official has voted recently to approve the location of an outlet for decontaminated nuclear reactor parts next door to your home, they probably don't know his or her name.

B B is for Barshak — Edward J. Barshak, a Boston lawyer, made the headlines in your local newspaper again recently when the state Supreme Judicial Court ordered the city to pay him, finally, an undetermined, but considerable, amount money "for services rendered."

He is the lawyer the Mayor retained to defend him, successfully, against charges that he violated the rights of his former secretary when he fired her.

You advanced students would find an interesting arithmetic problem in this story. Mr. Barshak's original bill for $13,000 multiplied itself into $30 - $40,000 over the course of a couple of years, but we're not studying multiplication this semester.

Besides, it will be years before you understand the determination of a group of taxpayers who tried for years to keep the city from paying the Mayor's legal fees, thereby jacking up Barshak's bill. These citizens, ironically enough, are extremely concerned with what they see as a waste of taxpayers' money.

C C is for clone — A double or doppelganger. In modern usage: a mindless functionary. Certain aldermen have been described as "clones" of the mayor's office. Certain local newspapers have been described as "clones" of certain aldermen.

D D is for DPW — The Department of Public Works, deliverer of crucial city services like trash collection. The department comes under a lot of heat when things go wrong; for instance, when citizens (read: taxpayers) put their garbage out on the curb one night and find it still there the next night.

DA wants data on the formation of library committee

By Edward Cafasso
Staff Writer

NEWTON — Mayor Theodore D. Mann is being asked to explain the appointment and objectives of the Main Library Facility Committee in the first step toward determining if the group's closed door sessions violate the state's Open Meeting Law (OML), according to an official in Middlesex County district attorney's office.

Meanwhile, two committee members said last week there seems to be some movement toward opening their meetings to the public.

Rachel Park, a legal assistant to DA Scott Harshbarger specializing in the OML, said yesterday a letter requesting an explanation of the committee's origins has been sent to Mann by Assistant District Attorney Susan Beck.

Beck was assigned to the case after Harshbarger's office received a complaint last week from 70-year-old Auburndale resident Joseph Weinfeld, who believes the 12-member committee's deliberations on the library issue should be open to the public. Weinfeld recently submitted a library proposal to the group that would combine a new building with a geriatric research facility on his Stanton Avenue property, a project which he claims would require no municipal funding.

"Until we get a response, there won't be any official determination. We usually allow a week to 10 days to receive a reply. We're still in the first stages. Ultimately, we have to determine if this committee is a governmental body," Park said.

> 'There's no feeling that what we're doing needs to be closed.'
> Committee member Phillip Kubzansky

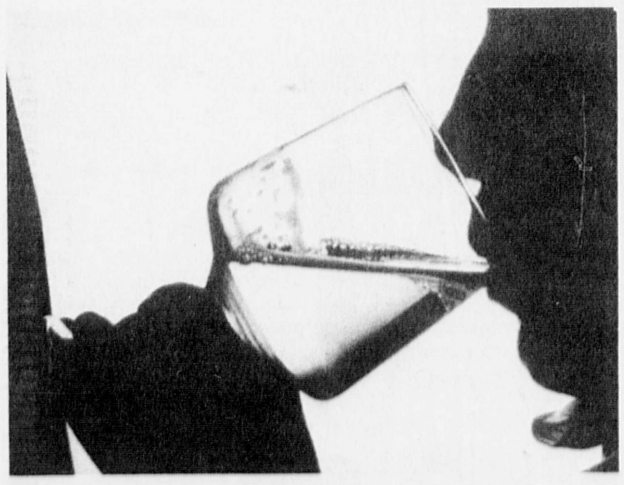

Committee member Philip Kubzansky, a former dean at Boston University, said yesterday there was "some discussion" about opening the sessions during last week's meeting of the group, a development confirmed by John Stewart, who is also a member.

"There's no feeling that what were doing needs to be closed," said Kubzansky, while Stewart said he was "pretty positive" the committee voted to open the meetings to the public.

Specialty fabric manufacturer and member Leonard Ansin said, "I think the committee has been working extremely hard and is doing the best it can do to generate ideas and get a library for the city," but left the decision on open meetings to the mayor and city solicitor.

Mayor Mann said yesterday he had not been informed of any vote to end the closed door sessions, but said, "If the committee members think the public interest would be best served by having open meetings, then I recommend they do so. There is no bar to having an open meeting if they wish to, but they do have a legal interpretation from the city solicitor that allows closed meetings if that is their desire."

'10 percent' rule dispute delaying needed housing

NEWTON — Mounting delays over the fate of two homes destined for city-sponsored family housing highlight problems city officials face when implementing the "10 percent" housing ordinance, according to the city's housing development chief.

Housing Cooridinator John Quatrale, a member of the Newton Community Development Authority (NCDA), said late last week his program and the Newton Housing Authority - faced with a waiting list of 103 families looking for homes - have been caught in the middle of a dispute between aldermen and private housing developers here over the ambiguous requirements of the law.

At the center of the disagreement are a pair of two family homes at 399 Langley Road and 15 Hawthorne Ave., which were purchased nearly six months ago by two local developers who ultimately will sell them to the NCDA in order to fulfill the requirements of the city's "10 percent" ordinance.

Under the law, when a private housing developer receives a special permit from the Board of Aldermen allowing greater building density at a development site, they

Opinions split in schools poll

NEWTON — A majority of residents with children in the public school system here believe the quality of education their kids receive is good, but those with children in private schools are less than pleased with the city's school system.

Approximately half the city's households used the "special issues opinion questionnaire" attached to the city's annual 1984 census to rate the quality of education here. Households with no children in either private or public schools gave all facets of the city's school system high marks.

Of those households with children in public elementary schools here, 72 percent called the quality of the education "good" and 23 percent termed it "fair." About 60 percent of those households with kids in public junior high schools called school quality "good" and 29 percent said it was "fair."

About 67 percent of those households with kids in the city's public high schools think secondary school quality is "good" and 24 percent called it "fair."

Those opinions contrast sharply with households that have children attending the numerous private schools here and in the area.

Only 25 percent of households with children in private elementary schools think that Newton public elementary education here is "good," 30 percent called it "fair" and 18 percent beleive the quality of education in the city's elementary schools is "poor."

Final minutes for city's happy hours

By Stephen Capoccia
Staff Writer

Newton has moved to join the growing ranks of municipalities seeking to ban happy hours as part of a state-wide push to end the practice of serving cheap drinks by the end of this year.

And in Waltham and Watertown happy hours have not always brought in the extra business that many think they do, according to some local bartenders.

Newton Licensing Commission executive director Carleton P. Merrill said, "I just typed a recommendation to the Licensing Commission to eliminate happy hours." The commission met earlier this week to discuss the idea and, on Sept. 18, a public hearing will be held, according to Merrill.

While Newton is not inundated with happy hours, public opinion across the state generally favors putting an end to them, Merrill said.

Several towns and cities in the state have banned happy hours. The Springfield Licensing Commission voted last week to end the practice Sept. 1, and it has been banned by Natick, Newburyport, Braintree, Framingham and Beverly.

The Massachusetts Alcoholic Beverages Control Commission has been holding hearings on the matter throughout the state and

BC's growth plans

By Edward Cafasso, Staff Writer

NEWTON — Boston College soon will be going ahead with its controversial plan to build a second parking garage along the western edge of Alumni Stadium, according to the school's new community relations director.

Laurence Barton said late last week BC also wants to build a new sports center along the stadium's eastern edge, but he said that project, which ultimately will replace the "antiquated facilities" currently housed in the Roberts Center and McHugh Forum, is still in the early planning stages.

The parking plan, which was the subject of considerable opposition by residents and local politicians early this year, will add 280 spaces to an already existing garage located just inside the Boston line between the stadium and Commander Shea Field, according to Barton, and hopefully will alleviate the student on-street parking that has bothered neighbors.

Rooftop seating will be built on top of the 3.5-acre garage extension to compensate for seats lost by the new construction, but there will be no change in the 32,000 person capacity of the stadium, he added.

Barton said the school also plans to "encourage" patrons of BC sporting event to use St. Thomas More Drive for access into the

The ABCs in the Garden City

There is another interesting arithimetic problem in this one. While the department virtually has been cut in half over the past several years, the payroll for top management positions continues to grow. Better wait a couple of years before you tackle this one, kids.

E is for environmentalists — They are concerned with keeping the world around us fit to live in. They drive Volvo station wagons with "Save the Whales" stickers on the back bumper. You probably wondered where the whales are in Newton. Have you checked Crystal Lake?

F is for Four Corners — The historic, old intersection of Beacon and Chestnut Streets that has existed since horse-and-buggy days. To find it, look for the corner where, despite widespread concern for the regulation of setbacks, a huge, new office building looks like it's sitting in the middle of the street.

G is for "Gosh!" — Just one of the expletives you might have heard your parents utter when they received their property tax bill.

H is for housing — If you're sitting in a cozy home reading this, you probably don't know that there is an awesome housing crunch in the Garden City. Many young men and women who grew up here can't afford to live here. There appears to be little relief for this bind in the near future as the city administration, threatened by "slow fiscal strangulation," pushes for high-tax-yield commercial development of its meager remaining stash of open space.

I is for income — There's plenty in your hometown. According to U.S. government figures, the City of Newton enjoys the highest average family income of any city of its size in the Commonwealth, slightly over $38,000 a year. It is also well up there in the national rankings. So, when your parents tell you they can't afford to buy you a new Apple II computer to help you with your elementary school homework, you tell them you know better.

J is for jealous — Resenting another's success. Don't tell your friends from surrounding cities and towns what you learned in the example for the letter "I" or they might become jealous.

K is for knee-deep — The "k" is silent, unlike residents of lowlying parts of Auburndale and Upper and Lower Falls who will be knee-deep in their own wastes again the next time we get a heavy rainstorm. Their plight is one symptom of a sewer problem that has reached completely unmanageable proportions throughout the city.

A plan was formulated in 1978 to improve the ancient sewer system in the hardest hit sectors of the city, but that plan was passed up in favor of one that address the problems of the whole city. As yet, nothing has been done, except that the city has punched a big hole in a sewer pipe on Christina Street to facilitate the outflow of raw sewage.

L is for litigious — The word means "given to pressing lawsuits." Newton has often been described as "the most litigious community in the Commonwealth." Citizens of the Garden City file lawsuits like people in other communities file their nails. If you don't have six or seven in the works, you're ostracized as "naive" in some sections of the city.

M is for Mayor — The city's chief administrative officer. The mayor's office on the second floor of City Hall has secret passageways behind the walls that lead to exits in other parts of the building. In Newton, the word has become synonymous with "Mann." Theodore D. Mann has been mayor of the City of Newton for the past 12 years. Lacking a strong opponent, his tenure apparently could continue until he decides to end it.

Interestingly enough, the word's antonym also begins with "M" — McGrath.

This primer will be continued in next week's Graphic. Study this week's material well; we might have a quiz.

Garden City robber puts dent in namesake

By Edward Cafasso
Staff Writer

NEWTON — Some thieves working in the Garden City have developed peculiar tastes.

Apparently dissatisfied with run-of-the-mill theft, like spiriting away jewelry, car stereos and other expensive portables, persons unknown have recently pilfered geraniums and American flags from various veterans' memorials and bubblegum cards from a newly-opened Newtonville memorabilia store.

Now their attention has turned to shrubbery - Canadian hemlocks, Hatfield yews, winged burning bushes, juniper and rhododendrons to be exact.

About 60 plants of those varieties, destined for the yards of households scattered throughout the city, disappeared in late July from the public works department's maintenance facility at 74 Elliot St. in Newton Highlands, according to Parks and Recreation Commissioner Russell J. Halloran.

The shrubs, meant to replace those destroyed last winter by public works employees plowing residential sidewalks, were among the 108 plants purchased for close to $2,000 by the department at the end of June, he said last week.

According to Halloran, the crime occurred sometime between July 19 and 26, while he and Hickey were away on vacation and forestry superintendent Richard Metro was busy with other matters.

The plants, transported from the Blue Hills Nursery in Canton, were stowed in a nursery at the rear of the Elliot Street facility, he said. Had they been purchased from a local vendor, who probably would have allowed the shrubbery to be picked up as needed from his establishment, the theft might not have occurred, Halloran added.

Hickey had little to say about the plant theft that occurred in his department's own backyard. He said he had "no idea" how, when or why the small shrubs were stolen and gave the same response when asked if he thought public works employees had pulled off an "inside job."

Hickey did strongly point out, however, that supervisors working at the Elliot Street Yard are under "strict instructions" to lock up the gates of the facility during non-business hours and weekends.

The incident was reported to police and the stolen plants will be replaced, he added.

The amount of money spent replacing plantings damaged by the small, but highly maneuverable city sidewalk plows known as "Bombardiers" varies "significantly from year to year," according to Hickey.

The most damage to residential property from the plows occurs "almost exclusively" in areas of the city close to schools, where they are deployed to clear the way for students, and during early or late in the winter season, when the snow-covered ground is soft from thawing ice, he said.

Residents who discover the plow damage to their property typically call the public works control center to report the incident and an inspector is sent out to verify the claim. The department then replaces any shrub or tree wrecked by plows once the planting season comes around, Hickey said.

you by route communities over the years, it has always been in the spirit of cooperation and betterment that we have found opportunities to meet together for the purpose of serving both the race and our respective community interests," stated Mann's letter, copies of which were sent to officials in other race communities and Gov. Michael S. Dukakis.

According to recent editorials in the Boston press, the seven-member BAA board of governors is not interested in advice or input on how to best manage the race, an attitude which has angered the R.M. Bradley Company, manager of the Prudential Center, location of the Marathon's famous finish line.

Relations between the two groups were further strained recently when the BAA turned down a request to allow three Bradley officials to sit on an advisory board that would have some say in how the Marathon is run.

The BAA currently has no race work force or race director and has no one on its board with such experience. The Prudential Insurance Company has also withdrawn its annual support, which includes $100,000 and personnel who helped organize the Marathon. Soon, there also may be no finish line for the 26 mile, 385 yard contest.

R.M. Bradley officials have indicated that unless the BAA leadership changes its stance, they will ask that the finish line be moved after the 1985 race, an action which would require a new starting line and could mean a totally different Marathon route or, at worst, no run at all.

'Typos' play softball in Easter Seal tourney

By Edward Cafasso
Staff Writer

> 'I knew we were playing for charity, but I didn't expect us to play like charity cases.'
> Edward Cafasso

WALTHAM — The "Transcript Typos," a ragtag collection of athletic-minded employees from Transcript Newspapers, Inc., held a Newton firm's softball team to three runs in five innings Saturday as part of The 7th Annual Greater Boston Easter Seal Softball Marathon.

Despite their heroic efforts, however, the "Typos," hindered by the inexcusable absence of News Tribune police reporter Eric Fehrnstrom and staffer John Ombelets, came out on the short end of the seven inning tilt, losing by a 12-2 margin to a spirited team sponsored by Fire Control Instruments, Inc., (FCI) of Grove Street, Newton.

"I knew we were playing for charity, but I didn't expect us to play like charity cases. The failure of Fehrnstrom and Ombelets to honor their commitments really shook us up," said Typos Manager and News Tribune Staffer Ed Cafasso as he looked for lucky four leaf clovers in the centerfield grass after the game.

Helped by a charitable donation to Easter Seals made by Transcript Newspapers, Inc., the Typos fielded a co-ed team made up of players from Transcript's Newton, Waltham and Dedham news departments. The team was given a runner-up trophy despite the loss.

Proceeds raised by the Easter Seals Marathon, which will conclude with contests scheduled for this weekend in Norwood and Burlington, will go toward programs in support therapy and recreational and advocacy programs benefiting handicapped children and adults.

FCI, led by manager and Nonantum resident Tony Gemma and spiritual advisor Maurice "Tex" Texeira, of Winthrop, tapped starting pitcher Steve Capoccia for six more runs until Transcript staffer Barbara Jorgenson took the mound in relief.

Offensively, News Trib staffers Dennis Hoey, Hank Hryniewicz, Ed Cafasso, intern Frank DeBenedetto and press technician Jon "Curley" Maloney all contributed hits, while, third baseman Roy LeBlanc and second bagger Sue Dulude shined defensively.

Dad, his 'little girl' produce how-to-study physics guide

By Charlotte Meryman
Staff Writer

NEWTON CENTRE — In 1982, while all of her University of Pennsylvania friends and classmates were getting letters from home detailing the latest family news, Robin Aaron's communiques read more like an abbreviated physics text.

They detailed the perplexing differences between wave and particle velocity and included pointers on rotational dynamics, kinetic energy and alternating current circuits.

"The only one who really knew (about it) was my roommate," the Newton Centre resident recalled with a sheepish grin. "She'd get all the letters and show them to people in the hall. She'd say, 'Here's another one on thermodynamics,' and everyone would laugh."

After a freshman year fraught with late-night phone calls on the exact significance of Gauss' Law and Bernoulli's Principle, Robin, a pre-med student at UPenn, and her father, Ronald, a physics professor at Northeastern University in Boston, decided to put their experience to work by writing a study guide for first-year physics students.

Published this spring by John Wiley and Sons, the guide takes a whimsical approach to the often-forbidding subject.

"Don't Be A Dodo," warns the book's cover. "Improve Your Physics Grade." Emblazoned across the light grey background is a large drawing of a Dodo bird trapped behind the black circle and slash of an international "banned" symbol. Throughout the book, the Dodo points out the wrong ways of doing things.

"I think it's sort of crazy, this perception people have — not only of professors, but of physics," Ronald declared. "They (professors) are not as serious as the physics books. ... We're always joking. ... Science is an international sport."

According to Robin, the popular picture of physics as staid and serious does a lot to discourage student interest.

"Most physics books are almost a deterrent to learning physics," said the 21-year-old senior. "They give this aura about it as if it's really impossible to understand."

The Aarons' guide emphasizes simple, but critical concepts and focuses on important errors frequently made by students and on questions often asked by professors.

The project took them two years to complete, with Robin taking a semester at Northeastern last fall to do the proofreading and her mother serving as production director for the project.

> 'Most physics books are almost a deterrent to learning physics ... They give this aura about it as if it's really impossible to understand.'
> Robin Aaron

Much of content was selected by Ronald. But it was Robin, who had just finished a creative writing course, who lightened the text.

"I guess when I write a book it tends to be like an old, pompous physics book," Ronald confessed. "Robin would say, 'I didn't understand a word you said.'"

But Robin also needed a little reigning in, the two noted, to keep the humor from getting out of hand.

The Aarons' text is illustrated not only with the standard figures and diagrams, but also with amusing sketches of animals, circus performers and machines illustrating the various principles of physics, most drawn by Peter J. Phillips.

In the months since the book was released, Ronald has been sending copies to physics professors across the country and talking up his new accomplishment at meetings and conventions.

So far, the response has been overwhelmingly enthusiastic.

Professors at the Universities of Washington, Texas, California at Santa Barbara, Delaware, Connecticut and, of course, Pennsylvania (both Ronald's and Robin's alma mater) have all indicated they will recommend or require the book in their introductory physics courses. Orders have also come in from such varied institutions as Brandeis University, Ricks College in Idaho and Appalachian State University.

A stack of letters fills a manilla folder marked "fan mail" in Ronald's drawer. But the 20-year Northeastern professor recently had to add the notation "and hate mail."

The new communication, from an instructor at a tiny New England technical institute, has been awarded a place of honor in the folder. It says, in part, "Physics is a serious subject, not to be taken lightly." It also declares that the writer "rejects this book out-of-hand" and would never send his children to any university using the manual.

Ronald and Robin seem to particularly enjoy this letter.

"Students always appreciate humor because it's so boring to study," Robin sighed. "It's the teachers you have to convince."

A costly ruling

With the latest Supreme Judicial Court ruling, which compels the City of Newton to pay Mayor Mann's legal fees in his defense against his former secretary, has come an attack on the 23 taxpayers who fought more than two years to hold up payment.

Critics point out that, while these same taxpayers are the first to complain about "fat" in the city budget and squandering of precious tax dollars, their aggressively pressing their suit to the end has probably tripled the original bill for the mayor's defense.

While there is considerable substance to the arguments of such critics, the taxpayers who continued to press their suit are not the real culprits in this matter. That inglorious role has to be attributed to the state Court of Appeals.

It was the appeals court that took a reasonably phrased decision by the SJC, combined it with state statutes that guarantee the indemnification of officials like the mayor and garbled the two documents into a mishmash of balderdash that made public employees across the commonwealth wonder if they were personally liable for their public actions.

The taxpayers whose suit cost the city enough to pay a tenured teacher's salary for one year do not have to defend their actions. They were exercising their rights, and they have their own legal bills to pay.

But who will speak for the state Court of Appeals?

A dangerous ruling

It is official: police are liable for the actions of drunk drivers whom they stop and then allow back onto the roadway.

The Massachusetts Supreme Judicial Court issued the ruling last week to the cheers of anti-drunk-driving groups.

According to the high court, Ware police bear some of the blame for the deaths of a Ware man and his 20-month-old daughter in a 1978 Mother's Day crash with a drunk driver.

Other recent court decisions have held bartenders, lounges and even private citizens accountable for the havoc wrought by the people for whom they pour.

So the clamps are closing in from all directions on drunk drivers, and that is good.

But the latest decision could prove a two-edged sword.

First, it may prompt police to arrest every driver they encounter with even a whisper of alcohol on his or her breath. That will crowd the jails and the court dockets, creating its own public outcries and beaureaucratic backlashes.

Second, the ruling could prompt some suit-shy police officers to turn the other way whenever they see a borderline drunk-driving case. By never stopping the driver, those few officers will avoid any potential liability from the driver's actions. Too, they will avoid any false-arrest problems.

While the ruling may make some people think twice before driving drunk, it offers no guarantee that the highways will be any safer than they were before the court spoke.

Senate race catches fire

By Ken Cafarell

The political climate in Massachusetts is continuing its warming trend as the state nears one of its most important primary elections in recent years.

The race for the seat being vacated by Sen. Paul E. Tsongas, D-Mass., emerged from the summer doldrums with a bang over the past two weeks, first with a campaign financing spat between Lt. Gov. John Kerry and Rep. James Shannon, the two perceived frontrunners for the Democratic nomination.

A few days later, former Massachusetts House Speaker David Bartley, desperate to revive his stalled drive for the Democratic nomination, went far out on a limb by repudiating a key campaign position of his party's presidential ticket.

Kerry, Shannon and Secretary of the Commonwealth Michael Connolly, the fourth contender for the nomination, immediately began trying to saw that limb off.

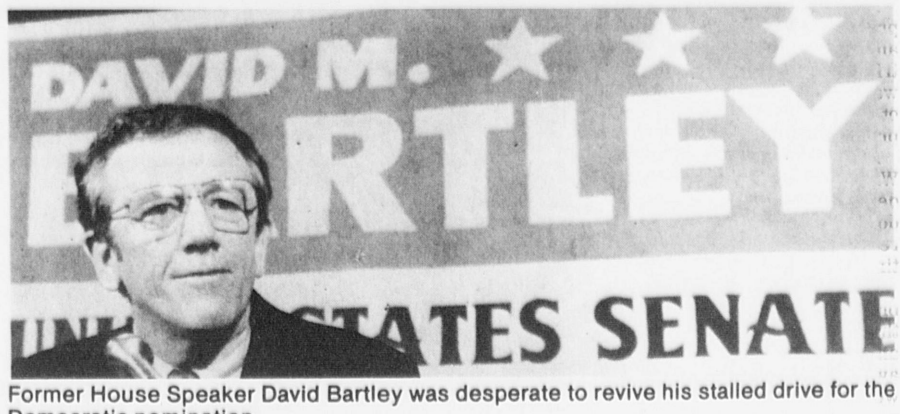

"I guess Mr. Bartley will have to figure out which party's nomination he is running for," huffed Kerry.

The break came last week when Bartley attempted to separate himself from the rest of the field by announcing he was "1,000 percent" against any increase in federal taxes and that the federal budget deficit could be covered by cutting government spending.

That pronouncement put him in direct conflict not only with the other Democratic senatorial candidates but with the party's presidential nominee, Walter Mondale, who has said repeatedly tax increases are necessary to cover a federal budget deficit of between $160 billion and $200 billion.

"I refuse to support any measure that would increase taxes for the average American," said Bartley. "I want to cut spending — not increase taxes."

At the same time Bartley insisted he would not only support the Mondale-Ferraro ticket but work hard for its success.

Former House Speaker David Bartley was desperate to revive his stalled drive for the Democratic nomination.

He outlined more than $150 billion in cuts that could be made over the next three years, including trimming the military budget by $50 billion, containing costs in Medicaid and other health care programs and plugging tax loopholes.

Bartley's position, in fact, more closely resembles those of President Reagan and GOP senatorial candidate Ray Shamie than it does other the Democrats'.

But it is a gamble that has been forced on Bartley, who spent a year as former Gov. Edward J. King's chief financial adviser, because he has apparently been unable to make a dent in the liberal constituency being contested by Shannon and Kerry.

The crux of the gamble rests on whether the voters will accept Bartley's attempt to have it both ways. On the one hand he wishes to appear true to the Democratic party and, on the other, he has rejected one of his party's key political positions.

It is a difficult stand to defend and it gives rise to some interesting questions, not the least of which is what would happen if Bartley did win the nomination.

How hard would it be for Mondale and running mate Geraldine Ferraro to campaign in a state where the dominent Democrats have repudiated a crucial campaign position? Would Mondale or Mrs. Ferraro even be willing to campaign on the same platform with Bartley?

Bartley responds — with some justification — that his position is in keeping with the cantankerous traditions of the Democratic Party, that he is merely a friendly foe spurring a reexamination of a critical issue.

"It is insanity to hand the Republicans the issue that we can't manage the economy of the country. All we can do is tax and spend — spend and tax," argues Bartley.

So Bartley now appears to be battling Shamie for the conservative Democratic vote while Kerry, Shannon and Connolly vie with the other Republican senatorial nominee, Elliot Richardson, for the more liberal vote.

The former House speaker's slim chances in the Sept. 18 primary will rest on whether he can find constitutency without losing his credibility.

Eagles Forum scratches at Ferraro image

By Mary McGrory

DALLAS — It was Women's Day at the Republican National Convention. The woman of the hour in this oven-baked city, however, was Democrat Geraldine Ferraro, whose current difficulties with financial disclosures are regarded as further proof that heaven is with Ronald Reagan.

"A godsend," breathed Rep. Vin Weber of Minnesota, one of the authors of a platform that has no mention of the Equal Rights Amendment, in contemplating Ferraro's decline from role model to "just another pol in trouble."

The Republican high command is trying to beat back smugness. It knows that the cloud once cast by the lady from Queens over Reagan's "four more years" is passing in recriminations and doubts about her handling of tax and financial disclosure questions.

When the president's political director, Edward J. Rollins, who once imprudently opined that Ferraro could be "the biggest political bust" of the season, was asked about her situation, he told a press breakfast, "No comment."

He hoped that discretion would overcome his compatriots and had taken the precaution, he said, of sending word to Phyllis Schlafly, foundress of the Eagles Forum, to take it easy on Ferraro. He had dispatched an emissary to request the scourge of abortionists, feminists and defense budget-cutters "not to trash Ferraro."

At her moment of triumph, however, Schlafly was not in the merciful mode. She was playing hostess to a defiantly traditional occasion, a luncheon-fashion show featuring Cabinet wives and Republican women officeholders as models.

Dresed in red, with her gold, diamond-studded eagle pin glittering on her shoulder, the leader said hardily to a cluster of reporters, "I think she is an embarrassment to the Democratic ticket."

Did she think any of the 1,400 women who had paid $50 apiece to look at fall outfits they probably would never wear had been tempted to vote Democratic to show approval of a woman's presence on the national ticket?

"Not a one," she rapped out.

"The real problem," she said, warming to her work, "is her failure to comply with the law, for which George Hansen (Republican representative from Idaho) is about to go to prison."

Had she received the message from the president's camp not to trash her beleaguered sister?

"That is ridiculous," she snapped. "No one has contacted me. No one has ever told me what to say."

As the women sat down in the close and perfumed air, word began to circulate that Ferraro's long-awaited disclosure had been delayed for three hours.

A quiet satisfaction that Ronald Reagan was right again settled over the tables. He had not been panicked into dumping George Bush to close the gender gap.

"You've gotten a DEMOCRAT hairdo!"

But there were pockets of sympathy for Ferraro. Several unhesitatingly called her "nice-looking, smart and capable and, despite her liberal philosophy, a very attractive woman" because she is seen as a victim of another institution as hateful as the Democratic Party, and that is the prying press.

Said LaNeil Wright of Dallas, the perfectly coiffed president of the Texas Eagles, "It is so hard to find people to run for office, and the press just makes it more difficult for them."

Phyllis Schlafly, however, did not sheath her eagles' talons for a moment. Before introducing the "most distinguished models ever assembled," she struck again.

"This is the day we have been waiting for, the day that Geraldine Ferraro discloses her finances," she said, occasioning a good deal of cackling. "And Mondale will call her up and say, 'Gerry, I'm behind you a thousand percent.'"

Then she brought on Jeane Kirkpatrick, the U.N. ambassador, who was the favorite, going away, and just about everyone's ideal of a vice presidential candidate.

The models provided an index of right-wing tastes. Mrs. James Baker, wife of the pragmatic White House chief of staff, was rather cooly received. Mrs. Jack Kemp, wife of the tax-cutter, brought the house down. So did Mrs. Jeremiah Denton, wife of the far-right senator from Alabama.

The fashion commentator, Bob Sakowitz, mogul of the store that provided the clothes and also a 3-foot mink elephant as door prize, explained that fashion can be "innovational" (that which is far out and only for the day), "directational" (that which is upcoming) or "acceptational" (that which is generally accepted).

The feeling at the lunch was, obviously, that Geraldine Ferraro, who was the rage a month ago, is now none of the above.

Pretty city

Dear Mayor Mann:

I would like to take this opportunity to compliment you, the Recreation Department and the Public Works Department on the appearance of our city. In my opinion, the recreational areas, parks and streets are being extremely well maintained, reflecting the concern of a well governed city.

On behalf of my family, I thank you and your administration for making it a pleasure to work and live here.

Thanks for Day Care program

I am the parent of two children who recently completed four weeks at Albemarle Acres, the Newton Recreation Department Day Camp held at the Horace Mann School. I wish to express my gratitude as well as commend Mr. Russell Halloran for this exceptional program. It was a stimulating, worthwhile experience for my two daughters, who loved every minute of it.

The staff is superb. They're well trained, capable and caring adults, who love being with children as much as the children love being there. They are real assets to the city and should all be recognized for their dedication and commitment.

Again I thank Russell Halloran and his entire staff for making this valuable experience available to all Newton children.

Deficit figures bend the mind

By Dick West

The presidential campaign thus far has dwelt at length on taxes and the annual federal deficit and, by inference at least, the national debt.

Both the deficit (approaching $200 billion a year) and the debt (about $1.5 trillion) have become so large, we probably need new figures of comparison in order to comprehend them.

According to Sen. Pete Wilson, R-Calif., if the national debt were converted into dollar bills end to end, it would reach to the moon and back 125 times.

Let's see. A dollar bill is approximately 6 inches long, there are 5,280 feet in a mile and the moon is 238,857 miles away. This means that ... Oh well, let's just take Wilson's word for it.

With all due respect for senatorial arithmetic, I have no clearer picture of $1.5 trillion than I had before.

If, to appreciate the size of the national debt, I've got to visualize the distance to the moon, I might as well give up right now. Even the distance to Gaithersburg, Md., which roughly is equivalent to the cost of a hamburger, boggles my mind.

Nor did I derive much meaning from the recent population meeting in Mexico.

By some computations, all the people in the world could live in Texas, with just a little spillover into Oklahoma.

But I can no more picture wall-to-wall Texans than I can visualize a stack of dollar bills 238,857 miles high. Oklahomans maybe, but not Texans.

One different way of portraying large sums is through time rather than miles or acres.

If geological time could be compressed into six days, then it took all day Monday and until noon Tuesday to create Earth. Big reptiles didn't arrive until 4 p.m. Saturday and were gone five hours later. Man appeared at three minutes before Saturday midnight.

If the national debt were converted into dollar bills, end to end, it would reach to the moon and back 125 times.

To me, that is a more meaningful scale than it would be to convert geological time into round trips to the moon.

We all have had weeks like that, although in this area the big reptiles tend to arrive a bit later, say after midnight Saturday, and to stay a little longer. Plus, they probably drink more than the dinosaurs did.

But it isn't so easy to relate time to the national debt.

Try letting each dollar represent one second. If there are 3,600 seconds in a hour, 1,500,000,000,000 seconds would take us back to ... Well, you can figure it out for yourself.

I heard somewhere recently that if the dollar-per-second ratio were used to measure the deficit, we would be back to 1944. Or maybe it was 1922. Anyway, it was a very good year.

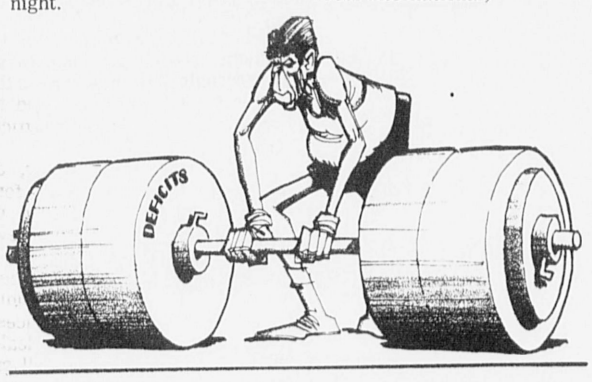

Admittedly, my math is a little shaky. When I tried applying that same ratio to the national debt, I ended up somewhere back in B.C.

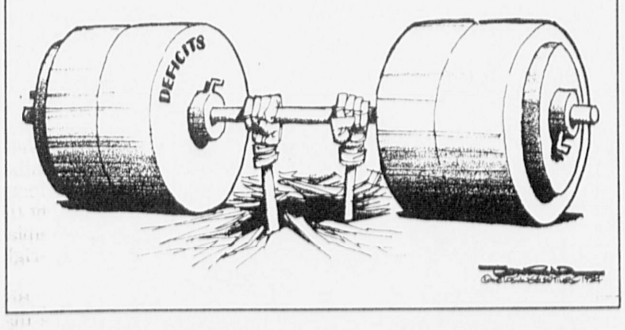

Another passage I have read states:

"If geological time could somehow be seen in the perspective of human time, Florida would be under the sun one moment and under water the next, rivers would arrive and disappear like rainstreaks down an umbrella, lakes would go away like puddles after rain."

I realize the author was trying to be helpful. Before calling a plumber, however, you might conclude it would be simplier to pay higher taxes.

Letter

Child's improvement assessed since leaving public schools

In May of this year, I wrote a letter to the Newton Graphic which discussed the social and academic gains which occurred as a result of my daughter's transfer into a parochial school program. I recounted that she has grown immeasureably in social confidence, and has aquired a good feeling about this as well as about academic prowess. I attributed this growth and change to a parochial school atmosphere which places a serious emphasis on individual kindness and cooporation, as well as on the acquisition of skills and knowledge.

Since that letter appeared in the Newton Graphic, I have received a great outpouring of support and agreement with the transfer, and have also collected other people's anecdotes about disenchantment with the Newton Public Schools. Newton residents who have acted and felt similarly have telephoned, written and stopped me on the street to report that neither had their children's academic and social needs been appropriatly or adequately met under Newton Public Schools' philosophy and curriculum requirements.

Some of these parents are still hanging in there, but they are also expressing discouragement about the academic deterioration so evident in their young children's public education. They remember the basic skills exposure and practice which was occurring in the education of older Newton siblings and graduates.

I was touched to have people repeatedly thank me for voicing what they have felt, but could not effectively communicate to school personnel, when confronted with bland educational environments. They reported a feeling of utter helplessness, as they watched their children stumble along from grade to grade, until the lack of academic discipline and basic skills, by age eight and up, was too appalling to tolerate.

It was then that they began the search for an alternative to: "laissez-faire" writing sloppiness, chronic math errors and inability to do standard calculations, a "catch-as-catch-can" attitude about science and social studies areas, teacher-tolerated "peer ranking" problems, and too many social and leisurely hours in the school day.

Many of us now see that our ex-public school students, formerly pronounced as "unmathematical", and in future need of hand calculators to do simple math problems, can function very well indeed. Standardized math testing, after a year or two in a responsive setting, is revealing either "on grade level" or often "above grade level" scores for these once-deficient math students.

Many of us are discovering that our illiterate youngsters, who produced chronic grammatical, spelling, and punctuation errors on their writing assignments, can now deliver lengthy, creative papers that reveal well-developed content and skills. Surely we see in their new environments that they have had enough consistent practice and exposure to pragmatic writing agendas.

We see more out-of-school reading going on and less nonsensical television viewing. We see a new found interest in science and social studies areas/- often curiosity beyond the text and unit material presented regularly at school. We also note that the children no longer regularly flick the T.V. dial when the current events or science shows are on the tube.

We note that it does not take money to enforce a quiet, orderly, and well-planned atmosphere in which each child can work independently and effectively, if given structured, meaningful direction. We have seen this in operation in our independent school settings.

We know that it costs not one penny to eliminate the long hours of holiday food-eating celebrations or long recess periods that too often occur in Newton Public Schools.

We feel that mandatory music organization trips and tours (at a cost to parents), which cut into public junior and high school academic days and often weekend study time, are truly out of line. Those rehearsals for musical productions which are regularly scheduled in place of school academics, are also begrudged by those parents concerned about basic skills continuity and development.

Not so long ago, parents either provided for these extracurricular measures, or were seriously caucused as to whether they approved of cancellation of academic time. After all, school time was just that - time to be dedicated to changing and unchanging knowledge and to the learning process itself.

All of us wonder what it takes for Newton Public Schools to place consistent, serious emphasis on what the outside working and academic world demands - developed competence for life beyond secondary school education, as well as a respect for knowledge itself through exposure to knowledge.

In closing, it is interesting to note that too many of our letters and comments to the NPS Administrators and School Committee members, at different times, have gone unacknowledged. Even a few sensitive public school teachers we have run into have commented that the above-expressed feelings and thoughts are most valid. When are the people in charge going to be as concerned as we all are, and then exert their power and influence to cause the public schools to fulfill their educational mandate to taxpayers and to all students?

Jaycees amendment hits home

By Suzanne M. Dulude
Asst. News Editor

For the first time since they joined the U.S. Jaycees, Newton Chapter President Sharon Yarkoni and Massachusetts President Jean Hudson have been recognized as full-time voting members of the leadership-training organization.

Until the bylaw amendment made by the 64-year-old group on Aug. 16, the two women leader assumed the role of associate members when they were outside the commonwealth.

Yarkoni reacted to the news with excitement by saying, "Women around country have a lot to gain and the Jaycess have a lot to gain." She noted that, in effect, the 270,000-member organization "could double its membership."

The decision also has personal impact for Yarkoni. "Now I don't have to be embarrassed when I go out recruiting for my chapter," she said, noting that all the national Jaycees literature that she distributed referred strictly to men.

In Massachusetts, where there are 2,200 Jaycees, the amendment represented what Yarkoni called "a non-decision." The status of women here will not change since the Jaycees have been required to admit women by the state's anti-discrimination law since last year.

Newton Membership Director and past president of the local chapter, Jeff Levine said, "Now we (Massachusetts chapters) can hold our heads high," explaining that he felt the commonwealth has been discriminated against because it recognizes women as full-time members.

Newton's Yarkoni...a first

Levine said the United States, which is part of an international network of Jaycees, was one of the few countries which did not recognize its female members.

Traditionally an all-male membership, age 18 to 35, the Jaycees began to accept women as associate members in 1975. Such membership status allowed women to participate in events, yet barred them from voting and holding office, Levine said.

The bylaw amendment was sparked by last month's U.S. Supreme Court decision that the state of Minnesota could not legally exclude women from membership. Since the court decision, chapters outside Minnesota have voted to admit women, but the national body had declined to accept the female members.

Jaycees Jane, the women auxilary organization set up by a bylaw in the national Jaycees, will also undergo some changes due to yesterday's decision. Strictly open to female members, now Jaycees Jane will be required to admit men as full-time members.

An amendment that, had it passed, would have dissolved the auxilary group, was withdrawn. Levine guessed that talk of opposition to the amendment caused the administrator to remove it from the agenda. Yarkoni saw the act as a plus. "By their (U.S. Jaycees) non-decision, the organization remains in place ... If the women's Jaycees had to dispand, its leaders would lose all their seniority.

"Many chapters do not want women ... They've been discouraged," she continued. Yet she feels the recent decision may change that. "In the long run, the U.S. Jaycees will be excited when they realize what they been missing all these years. The benefits are only yet to be seen."

Thursday's vote, which was deliberated for less than an hour, resulted with 5,372 in favor, 386 against, 77 abstentions and one absent, according to United Press International.

The Jaycees had voted three times previously on proposals to change their bylaws to accept women — twice at national meetings and once by referendum — and the proposal was rejected by a 3-to-1 margin each time. The balloting was held in 1975, 1978 and 1981.

Housing rehabs are rejected

must provide family housing units equal to 10 percent of the total units created by the development.

As an example, a developer who receives a special permit to construct 20 condominium units must also provide the city with two units of family housing.

In the past, most developers have built new family housing units "on-site," at the location of their development, although the law does not require this, according to Quatrale. The Hawthorne Avenue and Langley Road homes are the first 10 percent developments that involve "off-site" rehabilitation of already existing houses, he added.

That fact, coupled with the absence of any specifically defined procedure to guide aldermanic acceptance of off-site 10 percent developments and the aldermanic Finance Committee's dissatisfaction with the renovation work done on the Langley Road home, has delayed the final acceptance of the two homes, according to Quatrale.

The ordinance "has taken on a life of its own. The (aldermanic) acceptance procedure is developing unto itself. Whenever you get into an old home there are obviously more things that have to be dealt with. (Aldermen) have never held up approval requiring all the work to be done prior to the sale. They want to see all the work done and completed," he said.

"We're ready to do whatever the Board of Aldermen wants us to do. The authority is not going to try to get the city to buy anything they do not want to buy. I'm not complaining. It's their perogative," he said.

However, Quatrale said he is "not optimisitic" that the Barkan Construction Co., which bought the house for $95,000 and spent another $40,000 renovating it, will agree to FinCom's expansion request. He is seeking to sell it to the NCDA for $115,000.

Further complicating the situation on Langley Road, Quatrale said, is the fact that the state's Executive Office of Community Development (EOCD) has given the NCDA grant money to acquire the house and state inspectors along with building and fire department officials have already okayed the construction work and authorized the sale.

"It's very difficult for us to say (to the developer that) this is a substandard house. I'm not sure what's going to happen," he added.

Library comm. meetings may open up

Kubzansky also said recent reports indicating the committee was not receiving many library proposals were misleading.

"There have not been many proposals before us because no effort has been made to specifically solicit proposals," he said.

No other committee members, including chairman Melvin Wintman and planning liaison Alison Cohen, were available for comment.

City lawyers have consistently maintained that the group, which was appointed by Mann earlier this year, is merely an advisory arm acting as a consultant to the mayor on the library issue and, as such, does not come within the OML guidelines.

The OML, which applies to governmental entities at the state, local and county level, generally requires that meetings of such bodies be open to the public, that notice of such meetings be publicly posted and that accurate records of the sessions be kept and made available to the public.

Mann created the blue ribbon committee in response to the nagging problems that have plagued funding and finding a site for a new main library. Charged with coming up with a proposal that would require no municipal funding, the group is scheduled to present a report on the subject in late November.

Reaction to fume fears

Firm's chief refutes neighbors' claims

By Edward Cafasso
Staff Writer

NEWTON — The president of a Newtonville circuit board factory has angrily refuted claims by neighbors that his plant is emitting hazardous fumes and has suggested there are hidden motives behind residents' complaints.

Robert Spain, the 46-year-old president of Circuit Board Fabricating (CFC), Inc., on Norwood Avenue in Newtonville, said his plant has successfully passed about 40 surprise inspections by a variety of health and safety officials over the last two years.

Spain, a Waban resident for the last 12 years, also theorized that neighbors of the plant are attempting to force his relocation to boost their own property values, adding that they may object to the ethnic origins of his workers, many of whom are Vietnamese and Hispanic.

Residents claim over 20 neighbors of the plant, which has been producing circuit boards for computer firms for the past eight years, have experienced burning rashes, persistent headaches, itchy eyes and dizziness, symptoms which they attribute to ammonia-like fumes from CFC.

"You don't just get up on your high horse and say this company must be gone, because we're Newtonites too. We enjoy being able to live and work in the same town. I'm not putting anyone down, but after the number of inspections we've had, I'm just saying the problem is not here, it's in the minds of the neighbors or somewhere outside," said Spain. He added that CFC employs about 40 workers, mostly residents from Newton, Waltham and Brighton.

> 'I'm not putting anyone down, but after the number of inspections we've had, I'm just saying the problem is not here, it's in the minds of the neighbors or somewhere outside.'
> Robert Spain, CFC president

"We cannot continue to be harassed in this manner. There have been 40 visits to this plant by officials from the Department of Environmental Quality Engineering, the Metropolitan District Commission, the health department, the fire department and the state Division of Labor and Industries over the past several years. None has ever revealed any existing or potential health problem because there is none," he said.

In an attempt to dispel fears, Spain said he recently "insisted" to DEQE officials that they monitor the air outside the plant, but they refused because no evidence could be found to suggest such testing would be necessary, a statement confirmed by a DEQE engineer close to the problem.

He added that all his company's records are available for inspection by residents and anyone else, as is his plant.

Spain said there are also "some people" who do not want the factory in their neighborhood because "their property values would increase" if the area were completely residential.

The "worst part" of the dispute, according to Spain, is his belief that some nearby residents "don't like the element" of Hispanic and Vietnamese CFC workers in their neighborhood. He described those emnployees as "hardworking" and credited CFC with teaching them valuable trade skills and making them feel welcome in the community.

He made known his complaint of residential harassment in a letter sent yesterday to 11th Middlesex District Rep. David Cohen and Mayor Theodore D. Mann.

"To those neighbors who have certain health problems, we can only underscore that we are in no way the cause of these problems and their efforts might be better spent looking elsewhere. There are other companies in this area, for one, and anyone truly concerned with neighborhood air pollution problems affecting their health should examine whether they are capable of living so close to the Massachusetts Turnpike," the letter said.

He also refuted claims by some residents that their symptoms went away when the plant moved earlier this year from Newtonville Avenue, calling them "nonsense" because the relocation was completed overnight.

"The fact is we never shut down, not even for an hour. It's a credit to our employees that we didn't lose one day of work," he said.

Spain, who admits he is frustrated by neighbors' persistent but undocumented claims, pointed out that CFC does "a helluva a lot of good in addition to providing a service and jobs." He said he has hired many graduates from the Newton North High School Vocational/Technical Program who have risen to top level positions with the firm.

He added that the neighborhood's complaints in the past almost caused him to move his business out of Newton.

"We could have gone up to (Route) 495, or Woburn or New Hampshire, but the people who work here live here. We stayed here because we have a true sense of community. We know what we're doing and we do it correctly and safely," Spain said.

Rotary Club gives award, recognition

they hope to have the last call on cheap drinks by this winter. Michigan and Delaware have banned happy hours, and New Jersey is considering following suit, according to reports.

Merrill thinks the Newton proposal has a good chance of clearing the commission. "I think it has a good opportunity of passing." He is somewhat elated that at a hearing in Springfield, 19 out of 20 liquor servers spoke in favor of the move.

In Watertown some restaurants and bars that tried happy hours in the past think they are not worth the trouble.

"It was no bargain for us. People come in, drink fast and then they disappear and come back at the next happy hour," said bartender John MacInnes at the Union Market Station restaurant in Watertown. They stopped the practice a year ago.

Mark Haynes of Mark's Spring Street Pub said, "We had one when we first started, but it never really worked out."

Over at Lanno's restaurant on Main Street the feeling was the same. "We had one, but it wasn't worth it," said Mary Burke.

"I've never heard of anyone complain about them. I don't see them around Watertown," said Watertown Licensing Commission member Joseph Bannon.

In Waltham the Veteran of Foreign Wars Post 2152 on Felton Street runs happy hours on Friday and Saturday afternoons. Fifteen cents is taken off each drink. When asked how they would feel about a happy hour ban, a spokesman there said, "It wouldn't really hurt us."

On the other side of town, on Totten Pond Road, Chaplin's restaurant runs a happy hour from 5 p.m. to 7 p.m. and they give away food.

"I guess I really don't have a problem (with a ban). The average person would like to have a discount because they get something they enjoy for a little less," said Frank Bowen.

Waltham Licensing Commission member Wayne Brasco said, "I would be in favor of a ban, but I don't think it will stop habitual drinkers. They will buy it if it's free or $5 a drink. It might stop the one in 1,000, but it's not a catch-all to solve the problem," he added.

Newton wants to halt ladie's nights, two for one buys or any other promotion that reduces drink prices at anytime during the night or day, according to Merrill. But serving food during drinking hours remains a top priority. he added.

Over at the Newton Red Coach grill they have free food during happy hours, but not lower drink prices. Bartender Chris Walsh said he personally thinks a ban will not stop people from getting drunk. "It does not mean a Friday afternoon patron will stop drinking," said Walsh.

High marks for city services

By Edward Cafasso
Staff Writer

NEWTON — Residents have had their say and they have given mostly high marks to the city's performance when delivering major services, according to the 1984 opinion profile released this week.

Approximately 60 percent of all the city's households used the "services opinion questionnaire" accompanying their 1984 annual city census forms to rate the city's performance in a variety of service areas as "good," "fair," "poor" or "don't know."

A majority of those responding termed as "good" the city's performance in law enforcement, fire protection and trash collection, but gave low marks to the city's library services. The ratings take on greater significance when compared to residents' responses six years ago in 1978.

That comparison shows both a strengthening and deterioration of city performance in several service areas. A total of 77 percent today term law enforcement here "good," as compared to 73 percent expressing that opinion in 1978 and, on the whole, less citizens today believe law enforcement is "fair" and "poor."

Residents' high opinion of fire protection here has remained steady over the past six years, with 81 percent of those responding calling city performance in that area "good."

The public works department also appears to be doing a better job removing snow and ice now than six years ago. While there was litle change in the "good" category (36 percent in 1978 compared to 37 percent in 1984), more residents said they thought performance in this area was "fair" and less termed it "poor."

A similar response was also evident in residents' opinion of public building maintenance.

The city's efforts at animal control are better now than they were six years ago, with 42 percent of the population terming performance "good" in 1984 as compared to 34 percent using that term in 1978. Less residents today called animal controls efforts "fair" and "poor."

> Only 37 percent of the residents called the city's library offerings 'good' this year.

Six months after the city contracted out trash collection to a private company, SCA Services Inc., 72 percent of the residents here called SCA's performance "good," as compared to only 68 percent of the population voicing that opinion in 1978 when rubbish collection was on the city's hands.

Another service contracted out in the last year and a half, ambulances, also fared well in the opinion survey.

The most significant slippage in residential opinion came on the library issue. Only 37 percent of the residents called the city's library offerings "good" this year, a drop of almost 27 percent since 1978.

The city's recycling efforts appear to be slipping in quality among today's Garden City citizens, with 45 percent terming performance in this area "good," as compared to 1978 when 50 percent of the residents used that description. The 5 percent drop in perceived quality, some of which could be attributed to the bottle bill's inception early last year, was made up in the "fair" and "poor" categories in the 1984 opinion survey.

Also showing a slight downward trend is residents' opinion of the quality of street lighting here. Almost 60 percent of the citizens called street lighting here "good" in the 1984 survey, as compared to 62 percent voicing that opinion in 1978. The "fair" rating gained 2 percent over the last six years and more people (1 percent) termed the lighting "poor."

While some residents today appear to know more about zoning and zoning enforcement in the city, as compared to five years ago, a majority still do not know how to rate city performance in these areas.

About 47 percent of the city said they "don't know" about the city's zoning performance in 1984, compared to 54 percent claiming ignorance in 1979. In terms of zoning enforcment, 47 percent of the residents this year said they "don't know" how to rate the city's performance, while 50 percent used that description in 1979.

Almost 46 percent of those responding in the 1984 survey called zoning here "good" or "fair," an increase of almost 6 percent over the 1979 survey. Those terming the city's performance in zoning enforcement "good" or "fair" this year amounted to 45 percent of the residents, as compared to 43 percent using those descriptions in 1979.

Residents also gave somewhat higher marks to the city's preservation of open space, bicycling facilities, provisions for pedestrians as compared to the opinion expressed in 1978. The city's adult and elementary education programs received lower ratings compared to six years ago, but also showed an increase in the number of citizens who "don't know" how to rate city performance in those areas, signalling less usage of these services.

City opinion of traffic control and public parking facilities remained consistent with most terming performance "good" and "fair." City enforcement of building codes remained an ambiguous issue for the majority of residents, who said they "don't know" enough about the subject to give their opinion.

Citizens rate city school system

A mere 12 percent of those households with youngsters in private junior high schools called public schools educating students in those grades here "good," 35 percent said they were "fair" and 23 percent called educational quality "poor."

The trend continued when households with children in private senior high schools were asked for their opinion of the city's public senior high system.

Only 29 percent were willing to call the city's senior highs "good," 35 percent said they were "fair" and 14 percent voiced the belief that the quality of the city's senior high schools is "poor."

Flexibility + strength + guts = Olympics

By Susan Schneck, In Focus Editor

Sixty perfectly sculptured legs bend at the knees, propelling 30 lithe bodies skyward. Muscles flex, toes point and jaws tense.

Over and over the girls jump — forwards, backwards, sideways. Sweat beads shimmer on their foreheads and upper lips.

High above the blur of colorful leotards hangs a large flag emblazoned with the Olympic rings. Below, 30 young gymnasts work out for five hours a day, five days a week, hoping to someday compete in the Olympics.

Coach Bob Colorossi shouts to his team from the sidelines of the spacious gymnasium as they warm up for the long day ahead. "High knees, work those arms, let's go! Faster! C'mon girls, work that toe point! Work it!"

Turning from the bobbing, barefoot athletes, he says, "It takes flexibility, strength and guts to be an Olympic gymnast. And a special sparkle in their eye — internal drive."

The Massachusetts Gymnastics Center in Waltham offers classes to males and females from age one to 80. Each year, some of those 300 students will audition for the Masstars, Colorossi's competitive gymnastic team.

These select few are the ones who want to spend long, hours sweating, stretching twisting and catapulting their bodies through a variety of apparatus during workouts. They are the gymnasts with the sparkles in their eyes who hope to compete in the 1988 and 1992 Olympics.

"You can see it in some of them," Colorossi says as he surveys the team members who range in age from nine and 18. "Some are so aggressive, they'll try anything.

"Not everyone can handle five hours of training a day," he continues. "It takes a special kind of kid to do that as well as their schoolwork and home responsibilities. And 90 percent of these kids are B plus, A students."

A coach for only five years, Colorossi, 24, has not been at it long enough to see one of his students make it to the Olympics. But he plans on changing that.

"Yes, someday, I'd like to be in the Olympics," admits 11-year-old Gabrielle Budman of Newton, one of the Masstars. "I like to compete and to work out. I've been doing it since I was seven and I just really like to do it. It's fun."

There is a price for all that fun, however. Nine-year-old Siri Larsen of Cambridge winces with pain after dismounting from the bars. Colorossi stops in the middle of a sentence, walks toward her and asks to see her palms. She reveals reddened, blistery fingers and tells him "it hurts."

He quickly disappears and returns carrying leather, fingerless gloves. "Put these pads on your hands and try it again," he says, tenderly. She does, without much success. Dejection clouds her eyes. "They're very hard on themselves," he observes. "The kids get real upset with themselves when it doesn't work.

A gymnast since he was 13, Colorossi looks like someone who's spent most of his life exercising; he's trim and limber.

As the team practices, Colorossi is always moving: jumping down to all fours to demonstrate a movement; rearranging floor mats to fit the height of each gymnast; or spotting one of the girls as she works through a routine. The young athletes burst into happiness when he praises them. His manner is firm, but he is not a tyrant.

"The success of an athlete also depends on the interpersonal relationship between her and the coach," says Colorossi who is quick to boast that last March, his team blew away every other team in the division one state competition — the highest level in Massachusetts.

The coaches seem to be as committed as their students. When they're not conducting workouts or travelling to meets, they're choreographing new routines or scheduling competitions and other activities. They devote seven days a week, every week to training.

Gymnasts overcome language barriers.

As the endurance and muscle tone of the gymnasts improves, however, their coaches become less and less physically fit. "I can't work out and coach at the same time," Colorossi says, downing a bottle of coca cola.

At that moment, one of the girls straddles the high bar, flips her body through the air and lands on both feet, smiling. Colorossi applauds loudly.

"You get a real sense of personal satisfaction when a kid goes out and finally makes a routine you've been working on for three years," he explains.

Colorossi, who lives in his hometown of Norwood, competed while he was in high school and during college at the University of Lowell where he graduated with a degree in psychology. He's been coaching on a professional level for five years. Two weeks ago, he bought the Massachusetts Gymnastics Center.

Colorossi takes advantage of his training in psychology as well as gymnastics to coax his team toward perfection since concentration is vital in a sport that demands precision.

"We use visual imagery (creating mental images of the desired results before the attempt)," he confides. "We also do (mental) relaxation techniques to get them to loosen up — they tend to be very wired.

Colorossi says he often grabs strangers from the street and asks them to watch a gymnast for a few minutes. The method seems to work. "Sometimes, they'll be on an apparatus and I'll say 'Stop' and they don't even hear me," he says.

The gymnasts have just completed an hour of dance and they take a break to parade around the floor mats on their hands. Colorossi folds his hands across his chest and surveys the graceful movements with pride. "These are the future Olympic hopefuls for 1988 and 1992 games," he says, sweeping his hands across the group. "Some have more potential than others. But we're going to get them to reach their personal best. Then, we'll see where that takes them."

Newton athletes head for the games

By Frank DeBenedetto Correspondent

NEWTON - The Olympics may be over, but for a handful of Newton athletes another round of prestigious, international games is about to begin.

This week these athletes, ages 12-16, will join their counterparts from the rest of the U.S. and some foriegn countries, in the Junior Maccabeah Games held in West Bloomfield, Michigan, a suburb of Detroit.

According to Barry Mael, co-coordinator of the Massachusetts delegation along with Mark Garodetzer, the games take their name from the original Maccabeah Games, an Olympic-like event for Jewish althletes from around the world that takes place every four years in Israel.

The junior games, according to Mael, started two years ago in Memphis, Tennesee, and will take place every two years.

The name Maccabeah comes from the legendary Jewish freedom fighters, Judah Maccabees, Mael said. He also pointed out that the feast of Hanukah revolves around a celebration of the uprising of the freedom fighters.

"The kids have been working really hard," Mael said of the athletes making the trip to the West Bloomfield. "Some are training on their own with their own coaches and some are training at various Jewish community centers in Newton and Brookline," said Mael, who is coach of both the boys basketball and volleyball teams. "We do have some medal prospects," he said.

Leora Bloch, 16, of Newton, and Robyn Smith, 13, of Wellesley, are two gymnasts who are among those hard at work for the games. According to Bloch, they have been working out four hours a day, on the average, to get ready to compete.

"I'm excited but very nervous, because I don't know what it's going to be like," said Bloch, who is a gymnast, during the school year, at Newton South. "I've done alot of traveling, but never with gymnastics," she said.

Smith said she is also excited, even about the 14-hour bus ride that the athletes face after they leave Saturday night.

When asked about the recent success of American gymnasts at the Olympics in L.A., a simple "great" was all that was needed to be said.

According to Mael, about 1200 athletes from nine countries including the U.S. will compete in nine sports ranging from swimming to table tennis. Mael said that teens from 40 cities nationwide will compete. The Massachusetts team consist of 35 athletes, 15 from Newton, according to Mael.

The Newton athletes are:
- Girls Basketball: Karen Cohen, Rachel Borison, Rachel Decter, Sharona Karger
- Gymnastics: Leora Block, Robyn Smith of Wellesley
- Racketball: Mitch Nathanson, Ray Ellin
- Girls Swimming: Rachel Dector, Amy Freedman, Mimi Kaufman
- Boys Swimming: David Cohen, Douglass Kapp
- Tennis: Alan Smith

From Weston:
- Boys Basketball: John Slavet, James Slavet

Jones to head to Europe, Africa

By Charlotte Meryman
Staff Writer

NEWTON — The School Committee will be minus one member when it reconvenes in September.

Katherine Jones, vice-chairperson and one of the longest-term members of the board, is taking a four-month sabbatical to accompany her husband, Hubert, and three youngest children on a trip to Europe and Africa.

The journey will include a three-week stay in Nairobi, a two-week visit to Stockholm and stopovers in London, Paris, Geneva, Amsterdam, Copenhagen, Florence, Rome, Athens, Tunis, Cairo and Dar es Salaam, Tanzania.

The places were chosen for their relevance to the children's studies, to Jones' work as an educational consultant and School Committee member, and to her husband's work as dean of the Boston University School of Social Work, as well as for personal interest.

In her capacity as a city representative, Jones will visit several schools with which Newton has reciprocal student exchange agreements and will tour a number of others. She will be taking a close look at the variety and range of educational systems and teaching methods available for children.

Jones will also be doing a little educating of her own.

"(It's) going to be just phenomenal —I'm going to be teaching my children so they don't fall behind (in their schoolwork)," she explained. "I will find out what it's like to teach kids again. It's been a long time ..."

Tanya, 10, Cheryl, 13, and Hamilton, 15, have already launched into their studies for the coming semester, with the impetus that the more they read now, the fewer textbooks they'll be lugging around the world later.

Jones had nothing but good things to say about her kids' teachers here at home. They have gone to great lengths to provide her with the necessary books and course outlines, she reported, and have even thought up some special assignments.

"The teachers have been just extraordinary," she said. "People have tried to make the larger experience really relevant."

Her eighth-grader's science teacher presented her with a review of what her daughter should concentrate on as she travels from the Northern to the Southern Hemisphere. Cheryl has been instructed to pick one thing, such as geology, to focus on; and to collect samples of beach pebbles, for example, in each area she visits.

Despite her excitement over her upcoming adventures, Jones is not without reservations at leaving her School Committee post.

The most pressing problem facing the board this fall is its still-unratified contract with the Newton Teachers Association, says the four-term committee member.

"I hope we can get this contract thing resolved," she commented. "I think we have a very good chance (of doing so).

"There are only about eight meetings (I'll miss)," Jones pointed out. Eight meetings over seven years on the committee is a pretty good record, she noted.

"I think my priority at this point is to be with my husband and for my children to take advantage of this opportunity," Jones said.

WSES gets grant for vans

State Transportation Secretary Frederick P. Salvucci has announced that West Suburban Elder Services, Inc. has been awarded a grant for three 12 passenger vans equipped with wheelchair lifts. The value of these vans is estimated at $57,900.

West Suburban Elder Services, Inc. services the communities of Belmont, Brookline, Needham, Newton, Waltham, Watertown, Wellesley and Weston.

Salvucci explained that the grant was awarded through the state Mobility Assistance Program, which supplies funding to community agencies to purchase equipment for elderly and handicapped transportation.

The Mobility Assistance Program will this year award grants totaling $1,631,000 to 31 agencies throughout the state.

Grant continues home help

The Newton Health Department has been awarded a grant by the Community Development Department for continuation of the program providing counselling services for senior citizens in their homes free of charge.

The program enables senior adults who are experiencing emotionally difficult times due to social and/or health adjustments, loneliness, depression, retirement, etc., to seek the help of specially trained registered nurses and counselors.

If you are aware of senior adults who could benefit from the program please contact the Newton Health Department at 552-7058. Community Development funding requires that clients are low to moderate income Newton residents, (below $17,250 for one person and below $19,700 for two people).

Activities group helps many elderly patients

Last November, Mariah Daly, R.N., drew upon her nursing experience, her interest in crafts and in art therapy to initiate an activities group for patients on her floor, 4 South at Newton-Wellesley Hospital.

Many of the elderly patients on 4 South are unique to the usual patient population at Newton-Wellesley Hospital. They can sometimes spend months in the hospital. Several are waiting to be placed in a nursing home. For them, it is easy to lose track of time and to lose the desire to participate in projects or to talk and laugh with others. Ms. Daly believed they needed some stimulation in their lives.

The group meets twice a week. The group discusses current events, does simple exercises like playing catch, participates in story telling, listens to music and does simple crafts.

According to Daly, some patients tend to projects that relate to their life experiences. One man who was an avid hunter did a photo collage with pictures of hunting scenes.

Probably the most important function of the activities group is to provide the patients with a chance for social interaction, to meet each other and talk, she says.

Daly first proposed the idea for an activities group to Maisie Stevenson of Needham, instructor in Staff Development. She agreed with Daly on the need for an activities program and helped her with the proposal.

According to Daly, nurses on 4 South have been very supportive of the program. They are often the ones who make sure patients attend the group. Daly is also assisted by two volunteers, Mona Tolkin of Newton, who is assigned to floor duty, and Katherine Mahon, a Laselle Jr. College student, assigned to the activities program.

Daly says families also have commented on the new liveliness displayed by their elderly relatives. Some family members have even participated in the group.

What's all the excitement about? Well, we're makin' the biscuits ourselves fresh every morning. That's right. With quality ingredients like dairy-fresh buttermilk, and our own special blend of rich flour, baking powder and shortening.

We roll the dough out by hand, cut 'em and place each one on a baking tray. Then we bake 'em till they're golden brown, fluffy and light.

We make your biscuit breakfast two ways—with sizzling sausage or with sizzling sausage on a fresh Grade A Large egg. Each is a great new way to start your day!

Legislative briefs

County taxes

With an appropriation of more than $10 million for court rental for Middlesex County in the state budget this fiscal year, cities and town could expect a possible reduction in their county tax of about 40 percent, according to Newton Mayor Theodore Mann, chairman of the Middlesex County Advisory Board.

This represents the first attempt by the state to fund court rental at a level approaching the actual lease costs since the state took the court system out of county control in 1978. Only the personnel costs were assumed by the state while counties remained responsible for the building maintenance, security and ownership.

"This represents only an estimate," Mann warned, explaining the budget language restricts use of rent money for court maintenance and requires all maintenance-related budgets be submitted to the chief justice of the trial court for approval. Mann stressed this does not address the more than $30 million owed in back rent still unpaid by the commonwealth.

Frank endorsed

Congressman Barney Frank (D-MA), received the endorsement of the Massachusetts Women's Political Caucus (MWPC) for his 1984 re-election campaign to the U.S. House of Representatives.

"I am very pleased to receive the endorsement of MWPC, said Frank. MWPC has been in the forefront of the fight for equal treatment of men and women in our society, and I am honored that they have found my record in Congress worth endorsing."

Walpole abuse

"It is unfortunate that the administration is content to let the Department of Correction's whitewash report on the physical abuse of prisoners at MCI-Walpole stand without review," stated Sen. Jack H. Backman (D-Brookline-Newton).

"A compehensive inquiry into these incidents of gagging, gassing, hog-tying and chaining must be made - and must be made public.

"It is appalling that the administration considers their investigation complete though no prisoners have been interviewed. The Commissioner is even trying to discourage the legislature from hearing from prisoners. In fact, at this very moment, prisoners are being punished with solitary confinement because they spoke with me or my aide during visits to Walpole, or because they wrote a letter to my office.

"What is required is a mechanism for prisoners to express their grievances without fear of being put in solitary here or shippped out to a federal prison 2000 miles away, as has happened in the past to prisoners who objected publicly to unconstitutional abuses. It took a federal court decision to bring back prisoners exiled because they had spoken out. No wonder they are fearful of talking to the Department of Correction.

"The investigation summary released by the D.O.C. doesn't even mention that its report is based solely on statements by guards, with absolutely no input from prisoners themselves. This in itself is shocking and insulting," concluded Sen. Backman.

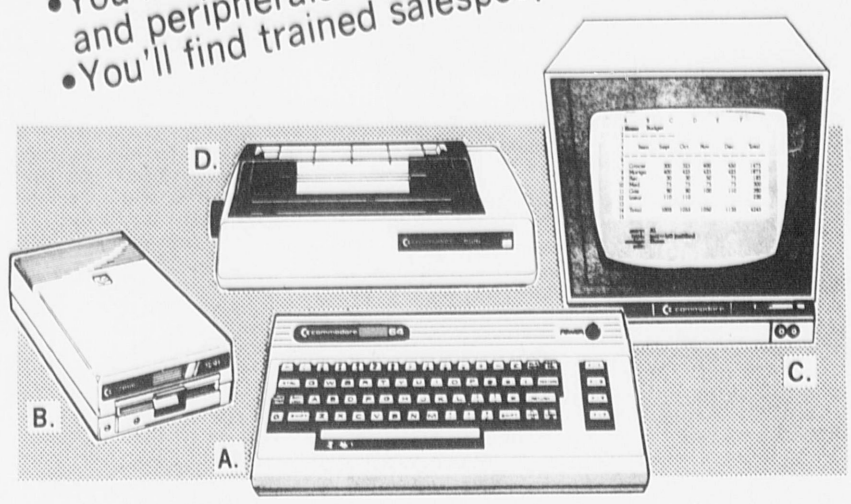

Common interests

Sen. Edward M. Kennedy (D-Mass.) and Albert J. Onessimo, a Somerville businessman, share conversation on their common interests in charitable work at a recent clambake at the Kennedy Compound in Hyannisport. Onessimo presented Kennedy with a check for $1,000 for the Masschusetts Special Olympics. Pledging to continue these kinds of charitable donations if elected, Onessimo, who is a candidate this fall for the Middlesex County Commissioner, has promised to donate the commissioner's salary to charities.

Business briefs

City's Ec. Dev. Director resigns; may no longer need full-time position

The current demand from businesses seeking to locate in the Garden City is so great that the city may no longer need a full-time lobbyist to encourage commercial development here, according to the city's chief planning official.

That's the view recently offered by Barry C. Canner, director of the planning and development department, who confirmed that Donald Silverson, the man he credited with helping bring the city millions of dollars worth of commercial development, recently resigned his post as the city's economic development director.

Silverson, who gave up his federally-funded position and his $28,868 yearly salary on June 28, decided to leave his role as chief city liaison to the business community when his wife was offered "a good job" in the couple's native Pennsylvania/New Jersey area, Canner said.

According to Canner, who has directed city planning for the last five years, the demand among commercial establishments to set up shop or relocate here is currently "as high as it's ever been" and while there may no longer be a need to encourage development, there is still a "need to maintain critical ties to both the commercial and residential" forces in the city in order to ensure "development acceptable to the city as a whole."

During his two year stint here, according to Canner, Silverson helped bring "many millions of dollars of investment to the city. He participated and worked with many developers who ultimately spent millions of dollars in the city."

The 32-year-old also played "a major role" in the creation of Commercial Area Revitalization Districts (CARD) in West Newton, Upper Falls and Nonantum. A CARD designation helps spur business development in deteriorating commercial areas of the city by making developers interested in locating to those areas eligible for low interest Industrial Revenue Bonds.

Because the position is federally funded with community development monies from the Department of Housing and Urban Development, adherence to all equal opportunity regulations will be required when filling the post, Canner said.

It probably will not be advertised and posted as available until a decision is made on whether or not to alter the post to fit the city's current development needs, he added.

University Bank recommends sale

University Bank and Trust Co. said its board had voted recently to approve and recommend a tender offer made by two men for the bank's outstanding common stock.

The bank said Harold Brown and Richard Krock had offered $24 per share to the more than 500 stockholders. The offer is subject to the condition that the bank receive written confirmation from three stockholders that they would drop a suit against the bank, its directors and officers.

There are more than 424,860 common shares outstanding which means getting control of the majority of shares at $24 per share is an investment of more than $5 million.

Jeffrey Rudman, the lawyer for the dissident shareholders, said he had heard of the board action, but received no detailed information. The suit concerns benefits for bank President John J. Nyhan.

Sumner Gladstone, a Lawrence businessman, previously made a controversial tender offer of $20 per share for the bank.

When the Secretary of the State's securities division held a hearing at the request of the dissident shareholders, Nyhan had referred to a better offer made by a then-unnamed party.

The latest offer would depend on approval of the Federal Deposit Insurance Corporation and the tender of at least a majority of outstanding shares.

The bank said Brown and Krock indicated they would give Nyhan a five-year contract paying his present salary and incentive bonuses if their offer is successful.

Nyhan agreed his "golden parachute," benefits to be paid if relieved of his position, would be reduced and he would waive his right to receive $175,000 he's now entitled to over the next three years.

The benefits were the subject of the dissident stockholders' suit.

University Bank and Trust has two branches in Newton, two in Cambridge, one in Waltham, two in Bedford and one in Woburn.

The strength of sisterhood

The Turner Family, life long residents of Newton, currently comprise two-thirds of the Massachusetts Home Health Services (MHHS) staff.

Identical twin sisters, June McGlaston of Auburndale and Joan Banks of Newton Centre comprised the initial nursing staff at Massachusetts Home Health Services which originated in May 1983.

Both sisters are graduates of Beth Israel Hospital nursing programs and hold adult nurse practitioner certificates from Peter Bent Brigham Hospital. They received certification as nurse practitioners by the American Nurse Association in 1980.

At MHHS Joan and June each carry a case load of 25-30 patients in need of skilled nursing care. Their services are medicare reimbursable and usually are coordinated by the Social Service Department at the hospital. In November, 1983, Massachusetts Home Care, a subsidiary of Massachusetts Home Health Services which provides home heath aides, homemakers, live-in and companion services was established.

When an opening for on call coordinator for Mass. Home Care was posted Mary Ellen Ricks of Auburndale applied and was hired. Mary Ellen is one of Joan and June's six sisters. During the day Mary Ellen can be found working as a customer service representative for the Middlesex-/Bay Bank in West Newton. Mary Ellen is a mother of two, a grandmother of two and a third on the way. Mary Ellen recently moved back to Newton after living 36 years in Chicago.

When asked why she returned to Newton she replied "I grew up in Newton and the majority of the Turner family live here. I got tired of living in the city and missed the warm feeling of Newton and its residents."

As Mass. Home Care grew, the need for a second on call coordinator was apparent. Thus, added to the staff was another of June and Joan's siters, Elizabeth Nichols, known to her family and friends as Cyd.

Elizabeth has four children and two grandsons and resides in Newtonville. For the past 17 years she has worked as a supervisor for the Newton Head Start program located at the First Unitarian Church in Newton.

As on call coordinators, both Mary Ellen and Elizabeth's responsibility is to assist Mass. Home Care patients after office hours. Thus, this allows Mass. Home Care to be in operation 24 hours, seven days a week.

Last, but by no means least, is Nancy Turner, the sister-in-law of all four sisters. Nancy, wife of William Turner, one of the five Turner brothers, is a mother of three and resides in West Newton.

During the school year, Nancy works as a secretary in the Pupil Services and Special Education Department for the Newton Public Schools.

For the past two weeks Nancy has worked as a vacation replacement for Office Manager Phyllis Bouzan of Newton Highlands.

When asked if she was a life long resident of Newton, Joan Banks responded, "I was born in the Newton-Wellesley Hospital." You can't get any closer than that.

Skeleton review committee looks at revision of contract

By Frank DeBenedetto
Correspondent

NEWTON - Only two voting members of the design review committee were present last week as revision began on the proposed document to contract Anthony J. Tappe and Associates, Inc. to begin the $30,000 Warren Reuse feasablity study.

According to Alison Cohen of the Planning and Development Committee, the contract, drawn up by city hall staff, is in the process of revision based on the comments of the committee. The contract must be reviewed by the city solicitor and the building and planning committee, Cohen said.

John Malloy, present at the meeting as the representative of Paul Snyder, offered input on behalf of Snyder and the board. Snyder is the chairman of the Warren Junior High School Joint Planning Advisory Board and a member of the design review committee,

A letter from the absent Snyder to Committee Chairman Sidney Shuman, who was also absent, was read by Malloy. According to the letter, Snyder feels that the study, "if properly conducted, can bring these separate issues together to the mutual satisfaction of both groups of proponents as well as those citizens concerned with municipal frugality."

The letter also stated that Snyder feels it is "imperative for this committee to either establish a maximum upset price for the rehabilitation of Warren or require Tappe to provide alternative design proposals to treat different aspects of the work with correponding cost information for each alternative."

Snyder was appointed by Mayor Mann to serve on the committee as a community representative.

According to committee member Leonard Loitherstein, the revisions will lead to negotiations of the contract with Tappe, and ultimately to its signing.

Also present at the meeting was committee member Kentaro Tsutsumi and Rich Griffin of the building committee.

No voting took place at the meeting because a quorum of voting members was not present.

On The Road rules International

By Mike Flanagan
Sports Correspondent

NEWTON — On The Road scored four insurance runs in the bottom of the sixth, and Craig McGary made a game-saving catch in left in the top of the seventh, to propel On The Road to an 8-6 win over the Boys' Club and a sweep of their International League championship series on Aug. 15.

The winners took a 9-6 decision for the first win.

With the score 8-3 going into the seventh, it looked like southpaw Mark Laughlin had the Club's number. The losers didn't go down easily however, plating three on the tiring pitcher. McGary made a great catch on the left field line to prevent a sure double which would have put the tying run in scoring position.

Center fielder Guy Clemente drew a leadoff walk to start the inning, and went to second on George Maxcey's single. Mark Maiocca then lofted a deep fly ball to left which was dropped, allowing Clemente to come home. Maxcey tried for the plate, but was tagged out by Evan Galanis for the first out, Maiocca going to second on the throw.

Lance Connerney lined a grounder to short which was misplayed, putting runners on first and second. After Billy MacDougall hit into a fielder's choice, George Haggie hit a tremendous shot to left-center. He settled for a triple with Steve Fontano coming up. Fontano drove ball down the line in left, but McGary came sprinting across to make a diving catch to end the game.

The winners had taken a narrow 4-3 lead into the bottom of the sixth, but finally let loose with the bats to score four runs.

With one gone, McGary lined a 1-1 pitch to center for a single. P.J. O'Toole hit a chopper back to the mound that losing pitcher Maxcey made a nice stop on, but his throw to second went into center, putting McGary and O'Toole on the corners.

After a strikeout, Stuart Ablon came to the plate. Boys' Club catcher Jay Cappello tried to pick off O'Toole, but his throw went into right, and McGary scored, O'Toole to second. He moved to third on a wild pitch, and came home when Ablon smacked a single up the middle.

Jim Core followed with another safety to center which brought Galanis to the plate. A wild pitch moved both runners into scoring position for the big catcher.

The backstop came through with a single to left which rescued both runners, and made the score 8-3. The lead seemed secure enough going into the last frame, but it took McGary's tumbling catch in left to put it away.

Boys' Club's biggest inning came in the third. The losers scored three runs to take a two-run lead. Joe Proia walked to start the inning, went to second when Cappello was hit by a pitch, and the bases were full when Clemente drew a free pass. Kirk Kaloustian then lined a grounder to short that Tom McGary threw home to get the force.

Maiocca lined a single to right to plate a pair, and stole second on the next pitch. Mark Cadman hit into a fielder's choice to third base, but Kaloustian came home on the play.

On The Road got a pair in the bottom of the fourth to tie the game at 3. After one out, Core singled to right, and went to second on an error. The speedy first baseman stole third, and came home when Galanis hit a grounder to short for an out. Tom McGary then looped a drive to right, and hustled to second for a double when the fielder had to chase the ball down.

McGary came home after three consecutive walks to Matt Selig, Laughlin, and Craig McGary.

In the fourth, the winner got a one-run edge with three walks and a balk that plated the lead run.

Laughlin won the battle of two leftys, but both hurlers did creditable work. Each went the distance, and Laughlin scattered only four hits. Maxcey chalked up seven Ks, but the nine free passes he allowed hurt him.

In the sixth inning the winners finally ended their habit of leaving runners on base. On The Road had left the bases full twice previously, and stranded 12 runners on the night.

The summary:

ON THE ROAD(8)-Core 5-2; Galanis 2-1; T. McGary 3-1; Selig 2-0; Laughlin 1-0; C. McGary 2-1; O'Toole 4-1; Berlandi 2-0; Scalia 1-0; Ablon 3-1. Tot. 25-7.
BOYS' CLUB(6)-Clemente 2-0; Kaloustian 3-0; Maxcey 1-1; Maiocca 4-1; Cadman 2-0; Connerney 2-0; MacDougall 4-0; Haggie 4-2; Fontano 2-0; Proia 1-0; Cappello 2-0. Tot. 27-4.

J. Burke at national racquetball camp

NEWTON — Janet Burke, 16, participated in the U.S. National Elite Racquetball Training Camp, which was held recently at the U.S. Olympic Training Center in Colorado Springs.

The juniors attending the camp were selected by qualifying in the U.S. Jr. National Championships in the age categories of 16-18. Coached by some of the top racquetball players from around the country, the camp is designed to train the elite athletes for national and international competitions.

The Newton resident is entering her junior year at Newton North High. A member of the Brookline Racquetball Club, she has been playing the sport for the past four years. She has competed in the adult and Jr. Nationals, the States, Regionals and other local tournaments.

The daughter of Thomas Burke, 27 Hillside Road, Janet also plays soccer for Newton North.

The U.S. Olympic Training Center has accommodated over 50,000 potential Olympians since it opened in 1978.

Hold Cosgrove golf Sept. 9 at Wayland

The 23rd annual Charles H. Cosgrove Memorial Golf Tournament is slated to tee off on Sunday, Sept. 9, at Wayland Country Club. The defending champion of the event is Bob Bestford, while Tom O'Rourke was the low gross winner last year for the fourth time in the history of the tournament.

Bestford's 53 tied the best net mark ever in the tourney, matching the figures turned in by Robie Nix in 1974 and Ed Desmond in 1969.

O'Rourke's 71 was two off the gross record, set by Len Devane in 1965 and matched by Dan Curtis in 1976. This year, O'Rourke will be gunning for his fifth low gross title, which would tie Devane's all-time mark. Devane took top honors in 1965, '68, '70, '72 and '74.

Awarding of golf prizes and scholarships will be made at a dinner after the tournament at St. Bernard's Hall in West Newton.

The tournament traces its history back to 1962 when 16 golfers played to honor the late alderman and golf devotee. It has grown to include some 120 golfers annually, with as many as 135 attending the dinner afterward.

By 1965, the organizers of the tourney had saved enough money to award a $200 scholarship to West Newton's John Rooney, who attended St. Anselm. That facet of the tourney has grown by leaps and bounds. Last year's scholarship, which was evenly split between William O'Connor (Norwich University) and Mark Negrotti (University of Lowell), totaled $1,000. The total amount awarded to date is $16,750, with the golf tournament and scholarship keeping Cosgrove's memory alive.

Applicants for the scholarships must be residents of West Newton or Ward 3, enrolled in or accepted at a college, junior college, or nursing program. Applications are available at the office of the scholarship chairman, Dr. Benjamin Antonellis, 130 Walnut St., Newtonville, MA 02160, and must be returned to him by Sept. 3.

Co-chairmen of the event are Edmond White and Paul Burke. Val Melideo, the 1982 winner of the tourney, is the golf chairman and Bill Hannan is ticket chairman.

Joe Cosgrove, John Walsh, Ray Demeo, Jim Ryan, Bob Cronin, Jim Picariello, Frank Vona and Ed Scarlett are all members of the committee. The cost of a ticket is $30.

Those wishing to donate to the scholarship fund may do so by contacting treasurer Ed White at 70 Rowe St. Auburndale, MA 02166.

USGA still depends on Gaquin

By Tom Murphy
Senior Editor

By far the most successful of all U.S. Women's Open golf championships staged by the USGA was that a few weeks ago at the Salem Country Club. Salem and the USGA reached out to take Jim Gaquin out of partial retirement on the Cape to be the manager of the tournament.

Jim is the former News-Tribune sports writer who at various times was press secretary for the PGA Tour, PGA tournament manager, executive director of the Royal Canadian Golf Association and tournament relations manager for the USGA. His track record was one of success. At Salem, he drew raves for masterminding an event which drew a record 42,000.

The tournament was staged to coincide with the 30th anniversary of Babe Didrikson's 1954 triumph at Salem. Gaquin got back to his typewriter as the author of an article in the program souvenir book titled "Golf's Most Incredible Victory." It follows:

By James F. Gaquin Jr.

The words of the Frank Sinatra hit put it best as far as 1954 was concerned...It was a "very good year."

Just to put it in focus for you:

President Eisenhower was in his second year in the White House...The big Washington story was the Senate Army-McCarthy Hearings...The French pulled out of Indochina as Dienbienphu fell, setting the stage for the U.S. involvement in what was to become the Vietnam War...The U.S. Supreme Court banned segregation...Salk vaccine was introduced...Three Peurto Rican nationalists shot up the House of Represenatives, wounding five congressmen.

And on the sports front, Rocky Marciano was world heavyweight champion...Australian Peter Thomson won the first of his five British Opens...Lame-armed Ed Furgol won the U.S. Open...Sam Snead won his third and last Masters...Little-known Arnold Palmer won the U.S. Amateur in Detroit...Maureen Connolly prevailed at Wimbledon for the third time.

As for entertainment, the big movie hits were The High and the Mighty, Executive Suite, and The Wild One...The most popular TV shows included The Life of Riley, Armstrong Circle Theater, Ozzie and Harriet, The Garry Moore Show, Arthur Godfrey's Talent Scouts, Studio One, and Ted Mack's Amateur Hour...And People were humming Hey There, Hernando's Hideaway, Fly Me to the Moon, Secret Love, Three Coins in the Fountain, Lisbon Antigua, Strangers in Paradise, Mr. Sandman, Cross Over the Bridge, Melody of Love, Skokion and I Love Paris.

Potatoes were cheaper and so was everything else. You could buy sirloin for 86 cents per pound and lobster meat for $1.49 per pound...An Olds 88 cost $2,363, gas 28 cents per gallon, and you could get The Boston Globe for a nickel.

And 1954 produced probably the most courageous, remarkable and inspirational performance in the history of tournament golf: Babe Didrikson Zaharias, dying of cancer, shot a three-over-par 291 to win her third and final U.S. Women's Open Championship by 12 strokes at Salem Country Club.

Women's Open Manager Jim Gaquin

She died a little more than two years later.

Perhaps the late Tom Fitzgerald, The Boston Globe's brilliant and witty golf and hockey writer, best appraised the significance of the Babe's astounding feat when he wrote:

Another fabulous chapter was added to The projected movie biography of Mrs. Babe Dirikson Zaharias this afternoon.

And No writer could have given it half the flourish that the gallant and remarkable lady from Texas did herself as she ran off with the Women's Open Championship on the Salem Country Club course.

Only 15 months after her operation for cancer, the Babe put together what probably were the four greatest sustained rounds by any woman golfer in history for a 72-hole total of 291.

Babe's 291 can be placed in better perspective when it is noted that pre-championship speculation estimated the winning score at over 300. Babe herself had predicted 307. So strong was the amateur field that former Open champion Louise Suggs suggested victory by an amateur was a distinct posibility. Patty Berg, winner of the first U.S. Women's Open, said she'd gladly settle for 300, and only defending champion Betsy Rawls prophesied a winning score under 300. (She predicted 298.)

Fifty-three contestants teed off in the first round, and when the dust settled, Babe shared first place at 72 with amateur Claire Doran, a 30-year-old vacationing school teacher from Cleveland. Only two shots off the pace was Mickey Wright, an obscure amateur from San Diego who would succeed Babe as the dominant player on the LPGA Tour. Veteran pro Betty Hicks was another shot back at 75.

Mrs. Zaharias was exuberant after her four-birdie 37-35. As she walked off the 18th green, she cracked to a group of golf writers, "Man, I don't know when I've felt so good, and I can't remember when I hit the ball so well and knew where it was going at the time."

Those opening round 72s constituted a women's course record for Salem C.C., but that record lasted only one day as Babe took complete control of the championship with a one-under par 71 in the second round, giving her a 36-hole total of 143 and a lead of seven strokes over Hicks and Doran. Babe's 37-34 round was a model of consistency that included bogeys on the first and par-3 14th holes and birdies on the 12th, 15th, and 16th.

The grueling 36-hole final on Saturday, June 3, finally took its toll as Babe went four over par on the last six holes, but only after firing a solid, one-over-par 73 in the morning round. This gave her a whopping 10-stroke lead with one round to play and she breezed home.

Babe's 12-stroke victory margin stands as a USGA record to this day.!

The esteemed and erudite Al Laney wrote golf for the New York Herald Tribune for years. Laney, an elegant literary stylist, was not easily impressed. In the argot of today, Laney "had seen it all."

But impress Laney the Babe certainly did! Of her 36-hole triumphant march on July 3, Al wrote: "She acted the part of champion to perfection with her nearest pursuers, already dimly seen in the far distance at the start, fading more and more out of the picture as the day wore on.

"At the very end, the champion's quality stood out most strongly. Over the last four or five holes, the Babe had begun to fly the first faint distress signals. Her tee shots, which had begun to fade and hook badly, a sure sign of fatigue.

"At the final hole, with all the people lining the course and waiting to escort her home, she sliced her drive badly into a wicked place among trees. She could have used as many strokes as she pleased to finish and the sensible thing to do was to sacrifice a stroke and play back to the fairway. But the Babe took the position that this was no way to finish. She found a tiny opening and she took a long iron and went through it toward the distant green. A champion's shot and a great roar greeted it. It gave her a chance for a par-4. She missed it by an inch, but she had finished in a champion's way.

"For the Babe has now completely outclassed all her challengers. She has set the pattern by which a champion should act on the course and off it and in the future all women golfers must be judged as they measure up to the standard or fail to do so."

Cotia's bat powers Faber Construction

NEWTON — Faber Construction took the first game of their Newton Women's Twi League Softball series with Buff's Pub, 9-7, to open up a 1-0 lead in the three-game series.

Pat Tower pitched for the winners, scattering seven hits in as many innings. Batting power was provided by Kathy Cotia, who had three hits, including a two-run double in the four-run third.

Ponkopoag record broken

CANTON - Eight women golfers broke the record set in 1982, net 70, at the third annual Agnes M. Crehan Memorial Tournament, two ball-best ball at Ponkopoag G.C.

Capturing first place with a net 65 were Mary Michaels and Edna Pinkham.

In second place was the team of Pat FitzGerald and Annabelle Fitzgerald with a net 66, with the team of Renee Bogie and Hilda Appel in third place with a net 68.

'Ambassador of goodwill'

BC names first community liaison ever

By Edward Cafasso
Staff Writer

NEWTON — When a tall young man in a tie appeared before aldermen last Monday night to speak in support of an ordinance aimed at curbing Boston College football game tailgate parties, the visit christened a new era of relations between the 121-year-old school and the community.

The neatly dressed man with a briefcase was 28-year-old Dr. Laurence Barton, recently named as the first director of community affairs in BC's history.

"The most important part of my job, for lack of a better term, will be to act as kind of ambassador of goodwill to the community," the former journalist and BC alumnus said.

His primary responsibility will be to act as liaison, reporting directly to President Fr. Donald Monan, between BC and city officials, as well as civic, neighborhood and community groups, and to strengthen University-community relations, activities that all boil down to one word - communication.

"I want to try to become more effective in letting people know we are open and accessible to them. We're really right down the street. We're here and people should use us. ... This is a major step on the part of Boston College to show we care about our hometown," he said.

According to Barton, his post was created this summer in response to the increased demands on the time of Vice President of Student Affairs Kevin Duffy caused by burgeoning residential inquiries and concerns and the perceived need for "a unified voice to speak to the community."

Relations between the nation's largest Catholic university and city officials have been marked by mutual cooperation since Mayor Theodore D. Mann and Monan coincidently began their respective leadership roles 12 years ago, but for groups like the Chestnut Hill Association, who has battled the school on traffic, parking and noise issues, things have not always been so pleasant.

"Every university has 'town/gown' problems. Whenever people have moved into the neighborhood, BC was here. When you move into an area with a university, you have to take the good with the bad. I think the good has easily outweighed the bad. BC is here and it's going to be here. We have always been considerate of our responsibility to be a good neighbor and now we have created an office just to satisfy community concerns," Barton said.

Critics say BC's relationship with the city is lopsided - the school owns over 100 acres of tax-free land here and uses all of the city's public safety services, but offers little in return. Barton begs to differ.

The school accepts more high school students from Newton than from almost any other neighboring community. Of the 105 public, private and parochial school graduates who applied for admission, 42.8 percent, or 45 Garden City students were accepted for admission into BC's class of 1988, according to Barton.

The buying power of Boston College's nearly 2,000 workers and 14,000 students represents a significant "economic presence" in the community and makes the school, along with the Honeywell Corporation, the city's largest employer, he said.

A $28 million, 700,000 volume main library scheduled to officially open on Oct. 24, which Barton described as "the most modern research facility in the United States," will be completely accessible for free to any resident with only a slight charge for those taking out books.

The "Humanity Series" lectures and seminars sponsered by the school are also open to residents along with a variety of courses in the BC Evening College and the school's theater complex has featured performances by the Newton Symphony Orchestra, he said.

City officials are also allowed to use BC's extensive computer system to complete extremely lengthy print-outs and statistical projects and many professionals from the school play key roles in the city's social programs, day care centers, the Chamber of Commerce and the Jewish Community Center, according to Barton.

BC's athletic program, especially contests featuring its popular football, basketball and hockey teams, also serves as a major form of entertainment for sports-minded residents.

The biggest resource offered by BC - its wealth of world-renowned professionals in every field of academia - is one Barton would like to make more accessible to the community.

"I'm sure that if Newton has a need and they approach us, I'm sure we'd be glad to help. We are not a monolithic structure that is insensitive to community needs. We're caring more and more as time goes on," he said.

As Boston College's national academic and athletic stature continues to grow, problems regarding land use, traffic and development both here and in Allston-Brighton will undoubtedly keep Barton busy fielding complaints from local governments and residents, but the Arlington native seems to be approaching his task in the Garden City with relentless optimism.

"We like to think what we give back to the community is our payment in lieu of taxes. I think we're good for Newton and Newton is good for us, there's no doubt about it," he said with a smile.

Graphic staffer wins recognition

Charlotte Meryman, Newton Graphic education reporter, has recieved an award from the Massachusetts Association of School Committees, for her story "Romeo binds North, South."

Meryman earned first place in the feature article category for circulations under 50,000. There were 123 entries in six categories in the second year of the comepetion which recognizes "excellence in education reporting."

Meryman, employed by Transcript Newspapers for one year, will be honored at a luncheon in Hyannis in November.

BC appointment gets mixed reaction in city

By Edward Cafasso
Staff Writer

NEWTON — Local politicians are greeting the appointment of Boston College's first community relations director with guarded optimism, while at least one longstanding critic of the school's development policies believes the new post will do little to correct problems in Chestnut Hill.

Eleventh Middlesex District Rep. David B. Cohen, Ward 7 Alderman W. Arthur Reilly and BC Sociology Department Chairman Michael A. Malec, who is the Ward 5 alderman, all said this weekend the creation of the community relations position was a step in the right direction for the school.

But, Bill Britt, a 46-year-old Brookline native, who has lived alone in a self-made wigwam on Metropolitan District Commission land near the school for the past several years, is not so optimistic.

Their comments came as the school readies plans to expand campus parking facilities. Leaders of the Chestnut Hill Association were unavailable for comment.

Cohen, who represents the Chestnut Hill area on Beacon Hill, said yesterday, "Any effort Boston College makes to improve its relations with the surrounding community will be greeted very favorably by the community. The important thing is to determine whether the change in form will be accompanied by substantive improvement in the way the college deals with the community."

He added that the thought Kevin Duffy, the BC vice president of student affairs who in the past had dealt with community concerns, was "always a person you could talk to...he represented the University well."

Reilly, the area's freshman representative, said yesterday the appointment of Laurence Barton as community liaison "certainly should indicate to the neighbors that Boston College will continue to have a representative" who will give community concerns the full-time "attention they should warrant."

Reilly added that the school had always been "fairly responsive" to neighborhood interests, although those responses had "not always met with the satisfaction" of BC's residential neighbors.

Malec, who in the past has grappled with school administrators over their commitment to academics, said he thought the new post is "a positive step in the right direction" and an admission by the school that a good working relationship with neighboring communities is important.

However, Britt, who lives on Boston-owned land across the St. Thomas More Drive, said Thursday Barton's appointment will have "absolutely" no impact on the traffic congestion and environmental problems that plague the area.

Bill Britt, long-time squatter in the area of proposed development, is pessimistic about the future. File photo

Britt believes the presence of the school is destroying the environmental balance of the MDC-owned Chestnut Hill Reservoir and threatening the animal and plant life. An environmental impact study similar to the one required for new industry should be done in the area to determine the full extent of damage caused by the school's encroachment, he added.

Instead of constructing a parking garage, he said BC officials should consider using nearby lots at the Riverside and Woodland MBTA station, where he estimates 1,100 combined parking spaces are available, to shuttle sports fans back and forth for campus events.

He also criticized the school for the lack of crosswalks and crossing lights in the area, the absence of pay phones on streets outside the campus and its refusal to provide dormitories as a source of temporary low-income housing during the summer recess.

BC's plans

parking facility in order to take some traffic pressure off Beacon Street.

Despite the fact that only four BC football games will be played at Alumni this season, the parking is needed to accomodate the recent growth of interest in BC's varsity sports, especially in the women's program, he said, adding that last year the school had to "turn away fans."

BC is also negotiating for the purchase of the Baptist Home of Massachusetts, which was sold in May and is located on Commonwealth Avenue between Alumni Hall and St. Ignatius Church.

The Baptist building will be converted into a combination dormitory and infirmary in response to increased on-campus housing demands, Barton said. As of last year, 92 percent of all the students who applied to BC said they wanted to live in Chestnut Hill dorms, but the school can only accomodate 63 percent of those with existing on-campus housing, he added.

Barton also quelled rumors that the school intends to build dormitories on portions of Commander Shea Field, a triangular piece of land situated at the intersection of St. Thomas More Drive and Beacon Street, saying the school has "promised" to maintain that land as open space.

"The Newton campus will probably be preserved, with very few changes, the way it is" in the future, Barton added.

Wooden car for Africa

By Charles Mitchell

NAIROBI (UPI) — A car made of timber and epoxy resin, cautiously termite-proof, may just be the better mousetrap that British engineer and part-time dreamer Tony Howarth set out to design.

The Africar is wood sculpted into a durable, fairly attractive conventional-looking auto body. Howarth claims it gets 40 miles to the gallon and insists it is no passing fad.

He believes his "sort of strange-looking wooden vehicle" is the answer to the monstrous cost of motoring in the developing world.

"I set out to build a better mousetrap: a better mousetrap capable of handling bad roads, mud and sand," he said. "There is nothing clever about it. It is a vehicle designed for manufacture in the Third World.

"I don't like to call it a wooden car. It is not back-stepping. In fact it makes a Mercedes-Benz, or Porsche, or Volvo look like last century's product," the bearded designer said.

The Africar is not only a car but an ideal. Howarth, 46, will only part with the technology providing the car is built in the Third World. After a decade in Africa he knows some of the roots of the continent's problems.

By the time the Africar's wooden frame and kitchen-cupboard-like interior are ready for production in 1986, Howarth estimates he will be in debt $5 million for design and development — mostly to his "friendly neighborhood bank."

There are three Africar designs. Howarth said he expects the one based on the Land Rover to cost about $2,000 to produce. In Kenya, a real Land Rover sells for close to $80,000, including nearly 200 percent import duty and taxes.

Along with its tiny price tag, the Africar can be produced now with 50 percent local imput in the developing world, Howarth claims. As an added bonus, minor damage can be repaired with a saw and glue.

Designed with high clearance for rough ground and an extra-wide wheelbase, the Africar now uses a Citroen engine although Howarth has nearly completed his own design for both gasoline and diesel engines.

Howarth claims that the cars with wooden chassis, steering racks and interiors have tested far beyond expectation.

Bright orange prototypes of the three versions — a six-wheel, 17-passenger car capable of being transformed into an ambulance, a four-wheel six-passenger Land Rover type and a two-passenger pickup truck — completed a 18,750-mile test drive from northern Sweden to Nairobi along some of the worst tracks that Africa calls roads. The five-month drive ended July 23 in Nairobi.

"There wasn't a road — be it mud, ice, snow, sand — that could beat us," said Howarth.

"The biggest problems were suicidal reindeer in Sweden and camels in the Sahara," said co-driver Carolyn Hicks, 39, a film editor from Hawaii and a co-director of the Africar Project.

Despite its wooden frame, "crash tests" have proved the car durable and, in some instances at slower speeds, more damage-resistant than metal.

But it is its potential as a boon to the Third World that excites Howarth and company.

"This car would not have been possible to make economically five years ago," he said. But now a computer-controlled lathe and turner can grind out all the necessary components for 5,000 Africars per year.

The basic components of the car are cut into 200 patterns from 320 pieces of west African marine wood worth about $65. Resin to stick the car together costs about $30.

The engine and gear box can be built in a Third World country on existing machines costing about $500,000 each, Howarth says. For a total investment of about $5 million, a developing country could produce 5,000 cars that would normally cost about $40 million to import, he said.

"We are looking to put the future into Africa — reverse the trend," he said. "It is a vehicle designed for manufacture in Africa and the Third World."

He expects the first production of Africars to be rolling out of Fiji in the Pacific within two years. The Africar would then be exported to Australia and New Zealand.

Howarth says he is close to clinching franchise deals in Uganda, Zimbabwe and Nigeria. More than 90 business concerns in 30 countries have expressed serious interest in building the Africar.

ALBANY (UPI) — New York State's capital will hold a four-day celebration called "William Kennedy's Albany," in honor of the Pulitzer Prize-winning author whose novels take place there.

The tribute, to be held Sept. 6-9, will celebrate the author who described himself as "a person whose imagination has become fused with a single place, and in that place finds all the elements that a man ever needs for the life of the soul."

Kennedy's novel "Ironweed," the third in a series of stories set in Albany, won the 1983 Pulitzer Prize and National Book Critics Circle Award.

The author's other books include "Legs," "Billy Phelan's Greatest Game," and "O Albany! An Urban Tapestry — Improbable City of Political Wizards, Fearless Ethnics, Spectacular Aristocrats, Splendid Nobodies and Underrated Scoundrels."

Kennedy said he finds Albany "an inexhaustible context" for his stories, "as abundant in mythic qualities as it is in political ambition, remarkably consequential greed and genuine fear of the Lord. I saw it as being as various as the American psyche itself, of which it was truly a crucible."

The Celebration will be coordinated by the Capital District Humanities Progam of the State University of New York. It will include panel discussions at the state museum, a lecture on Kennedy's writing by Doris Grumbach, an American Unitersity professor and literary critic, and an exhibit of photographs and political cartoons from the 1920s and '30s.

NEW YORK (UPI) — A new winery tour brochure that highlights New York's Hudson Valley is now available free of charge, according to the New York State Department of Commerce.

Produced by the Hudson River Region Wine Council, the brochure lists 16 wineries and provides travelers with wine tasting informaton, tour hours, and directions to each facility.

Last fall, Hudson Valley wineries squeezed more than 2 million gallons of wine from local grapes.

"Many folks aren't aware when they travel to this region that we have some quality wineries here," said Bill Wetmore, a spokesman for the wine council and owner of a vineyard in Amenia, New York. "When you think of New York wines you think of the Finger Lakes. For that reason, this brochure has been produced by our council as part of a progressive promotional campaign for Hudson River Valley Wines."

To obtain the Hudson River Winery Guide, write to: Mr. William Wetmore, Cascade Mountrain Vineyards, Flint Hill Road, Amenia, New York, 12501. Or call (914) 373-9021.

The City of Newton's monthly department head meeting was a bit different in July as Mayor Theodore Mann hosted the gathering of city officials at Boston Edison's IMPACT 2000 energy efficient house in Brookline. The group toured the house to view state-of-the-art energy technologies incorporated in its design. The house is now open for public tours by appointment only. For an appointment call 232-1195.

Restaurant, manufacturer sit atop list of city construction permits

By Edward Cafasso
Staff Writer

NEWTON — A clock manufacturer seeking to erect a new office building in Auburndale and the creation of a restaurant at a site formerly housing a vault company in Newton Centre marked the building permits issued by the city last month.

One hundred permits for construction worth over $3.5 million were issued in July, according to building department records. It was the second highest value of permits issued for the month of July since 1981.

Only four of the permits granted involved the construction of new housing — single-family homes at 5 Derby St., 8 and 32 Pontiac Road, and 15 Woodlawn Road.

The most notable commercial work planned comes from the Gardner-based Simplex Time Recorder Company, which manufactures clock parts, electronic alarms and security equipment. Simplex sought the permit to build a new office building at 11 Bennett St. in Auburndale.

Officials from Sally Ling's, a Boston-based restaurant featuring gourmet Chinese cuisine, were granted a permit to convert the former site of the MHA Valut Company in the Langley Place Complex into an eatery.

The Newton Community Development Foundation was granted a permit for $100,000 worth of work to renovate a home at 14 Newtonville Ave. for use as a group residence.

Boston College was also granted permits for several building conversions stemming the recent construction of an ultra-modern main library for the college. BC is seeking to convert classrooms in Lyons Hall at 140 Commonwealth Ave. into offices, while library space in Cushing Hall and Fulton Hall are also scheduled for conversion into offices.

Central American referendum locally

Voters in approximately 40 state representative districts will have the chance to voice their feelings on U.S. policy in Central America in the November election.

Residents of Boston, Cambridge, Newton, Waltham, Brookline and other cities and towns across the state have collected enough signatures to assure the placement of a peace in Central America public policy question on the ballot.

The non-binding resolution instructs the state representative to vote in favor of a resolution calling for the withdrawal of all U.S. troops and advisors from El Salvador and Honduras, as well as the halt to any aid and advice to the forces fighting to overthrow the present government of Nicaragua.

Massachusetts Gov. Michael Dukakis aired support of the referendum. In a letter addressed to Vicki Lewis, who coordinated the signature drive in Boston, Dukakis wrote: "I commend your efforts to educate the American people to the perils of President Reagan's policies in Central America.

"I am honored to join your efforts to stop the military intervention which can only lead to involvement in yet another undeclared war," he continued.

Local heroes

By Eric Fehrnstrom, Staff Writer

NEWTON — Robert Gorgone and Michael Kelleher became a pair of local heroes over the weekend, leading Police Chief William F. Quinn to put them up for commendations.

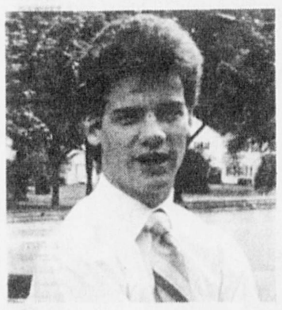

They don't wear badges or blue uniforms, carry guns or ride in marked cruisers, but their quick-thinking action early Saturday morning put them smack in the middle of a 2½-mile car chase through the city's streets to capture an allegedly drunk hit-and-run motorist.

"I just figured we'd get this guy," said Kelleher, 21, of Weston, a sales representative for a Lexington firm.

Both men were outside the Store 24 in West Newton Square when they witnessed a bloody hit-and-run accident involving a red car they claimed was speeding in an easterly direction after swinging onto Watertown Street from the square.

The car rammed a 21-year-old Auburndale woman who was crossing the street at about 1:45 a.m. and was struck near the center line. Police said the woman was thrown over the hood of the vehicle, smashed her head against the windshield and was carried about 400 feet atop the car before being thrown to the pavement.

Dunkin' munchkins

NEWTONVILLE — These days, children are performing Mozart's masterpieces on the violin by age five, pitching on full-fledged baseball teams by age seven and, a few years later, teaching their parents how to use computers.

So it comes as no surprise that thousands of parents across the country enroll their tots in classes at local swimming pools as early as six months after birth.

The infants sing songs, play splashing, kicking and bouncing games and are towed around the pool at water level, with their chins skimming the surface.

"I think it's terrific," said Gary Green, director of the Waltham YMCA. "I think the exposure to water at that age builds confidence — as long as it's not overdone and as long as the child is not pushed to hard."

The water classes provide a social outlet for moms, dads and tots, improve the infants' motor skills and often give a boost to the child's self-esteem. They also make for a pleasant, close experience between parent and child.

"It's nice to have something to do with him at this age," said Waltham resident Debbie McDowell as she dried off 20-month-old Andrew after a class at the Newton YMCA.

"I learned how to swim when I was real small," she added. "I think it's a better way to do it because they don't have any fear and ... it's easier to learn things when you're small."

None of the parents in the Newton YMCA's summer classes seemed interested in raising future Olympians, but they were eager to teach their kids a little something about water safety.

"I live near the Charles River and I wanted (my daughter) to respect the water and to understand that she can't just walk into it," explained Joanne Wojcik, who lives with Amanda, age 2½, on the Watertown-Newton line. "She's a kid who doesn't have a lot of fears."

Video poker persists

By Edward Cafasso
Staff Writer

NEWTON CORNER — Video poker machines, supposedly put out of commission during a police crackdown in May, are still in widespread use throughout the city as are the illegal pay-offs that sometimes accompany them, according to a Newton Corner businessman.

While the gaming devices themselves are not illegal, monetary pay-offs involving the machines do constitute illegal gambling.

Henry Munevar, owner of Newton Corner Bowlway at 29 Bacon St., told Licensing Commission members last week he has "no trouble finding" the machines, but refused to divulge their locations because he fears retribution. "I don't want any of my windows broken," he told the commissioners.

In a phone interview, Munevar was reluctant to discuss his comments and said he would prefer to just "drop it."

"The problem is I want to keep my business. If I confront the powers that be, I don't think I'll get too far," he said, adding that all officials here have to do is "look around" and they'll find the games.

Central America referendum

Grassroots bear fruit

By Suzanne M. Dulude
Asst. News Editor

After six months of hard work — of house meetings and knocking on doors — the grassroots effort of the Central American Referendum Campaign (CARC) is paying off.

For Barbara Clark, the campaign's organizer in Newton, the placement of the non-binding referendum on the Nov. 6 ballot, which calls for a complete stop to all military aid and the immediate withdrawal of troops from Central America, represents quite a triumph.

"I got a lot of support from a lot of people," she said in her Auburndale apartment last week.

She first became involved in the campaign in April, having moved back to the Boston area after pursuing her masters degree in psycho-social nursing in Seattle. The 36-year-old mother of one learned about the campaign through an article she read in the Central American Solidarity Association newsletter, which sought support for the referendum.

"Being the mother of a small child (two-year-old Rachel) makes it all the more compelling that I work for justice and peace in Central America," Clark said of her involvement in the campaign. "It tears me apart when I hear about or see, the horrible suffering of innocent civilians, particularly mothers and children ... The hope and social reforms of the popular movements keeps me going."

City services elude threat of Prop 2½

By Edward Cafasso, Staff Writer

NEWTON — When tax cap legislation called Proposition 2½ went into effect three years ago, municipal officials in communities across the state — unable to raise property taxes every time a project needed funding or their city faced dire financial straits — warned of cutbacks in basic services.

But, it now appears that Garden City officials have been successful in staving off the problems Prop. 2½ has wrought on neighboring communities. According to city census data, residents, on the whole, think just as highly of service delivery here today as they did in 1978, three years before Prop. 2½ became a reality.

Mayor Theodore D. Mann, saying the city faced "slow fiscal strangulation," was among those initially concerned with the effects the tax cap might have on services here.

A Primer for The Garden City

By Kevin C. Kennedy
News Editor

With the school year about to begin and complaints about the lack of "basics" in the regular curriculum being aired regularly, the Graphic offers the following spelling primer for grade schoolers. This abecedarium combines the effectiveness of a time-tested teaching tool with a brief lesson in some of the city's distinguishing characteristics.

(The second of two parts.)

N is for Newton — A contraction of "Newtown," the name given the city around 1630 when English settlers like the Rev. John Eliot decided to bring the Christian faith to the Indians. While the Indians were muttering, "There goes the neighborhood," the settlers took over. The Indians, like many ethnic groups since them, decided to move out of town rather than deal with the newcomers.

O is for Ossinger — Diane Ossinger, the mayor's former secretary, was fired when it was discovered that more than $24,000 worth of the mayor's paychecks had "disappeared" over the course of a few years without his even noticing it.

Coping with school phobia

Fall brings out the fears

By Charlotte Meryman
Staff Writer

NEWTON — In the flurry of activity surrounding back-to-school time, much attention is paid to the terror and anxiety of nursery-schoolers, kindergarteners and first-graders facing their first day in class.

But there is another group of children for whom the fear of school can be equally acute and, sometimes, more difficult to accept and understand. According to experts, a large proportion of school phobics are teenagers.

For these adolescents, transitions into junior high or high school, crises or shifts in family situations, the pressures of academic expectation and even the turmoil of adolescent emotions can trigger unmanageable fears.

School phobia — defined generally as a child's partial or total inability to attend school — normally surfaces after vacations. September and January are key months.

Frequently, a child will be fine for the first week or two of school and then will suddenly be overwhelmed by panic and dread.

Irwin Hoogheem, attendance supervisor for Newton Public Schools, estimates his office handled 30 to 40 cases of school phobia in junior and senior high school students during the past school year. Newton North High School guidance counselor Vaunita Schnell believes the total number of cases is much higher, as many counselors work on their own with students, without involving the attendance office.

'(Going to school) was like being told you have to jump into a pool from a thousand-foot platform — and you don't even know how to swim.'

A former school phobic

"There are certainly more teenagers (who are school phobic) than anybody would ever believe," says Schnell, who headed the Day Junior High School counseling department before moving to North last year, and who takes a special interest in the disorder.

Schnell suggests school phobia may, in fact, be more serious among older students than among elementary-aged kids because of the danger that teenagers may leave school forever.

PHOBIA — See page 6

The ABCs of The Garden City

Accusations that Ossinger was responsible for the mysterious disappearance were backed up in one court and denied in another. The case is still hanging fire. There has not yet been any official determination of where the money went.

P is for police — The Garden City's finest continue to be extremely effective in controlling crime, despite rumors that morale in the department is at an all-time low. If morale hinges upon labor-management relations, it might well be low. The men and women in blue had their last contract stuffed down their throats after more than two years of negotiations failed to produce any settlement.

Q is for Quinn — William F. Quinn is the city's highly respected, well-spoken Chief of Police. Few residents or city officials speak ill of the chief, at least in public. They never know when they might have to call upon his infinite capacity for understanding...and mercy.

R is for revaluation — The botched and bungled job Finnegan Associates did several years ago, in the process of updated the values of residential and commercial real estate throughout city, led to mass protests and more than 6,700 applications for abatements. The city's Board of Assessors thought the job was so poorly done they witheld part of the final payment to Finnegan.

Now, after two years, the work Finnegan did has been used as a base for another revaluation. Taxpayers' cries of protest have been relegated to a few voices in the wilderness as city officials insist revaluation is a "non-issue."

S is for SCA — SCA Services, Inc., took over the job of collecting rubbish in the city a little more than a year ago. Claims by city officials that farming the service out to a private contractor has produced savings of hundreds of thousands of dollars have been offset by residents' complaints over the firm's failings.

The city levied fines against the company, a couple of months ago, but the measures taken, when compared to the total cost of the contract with SCA, amounted to a vicious lashing with a wet noodle.

T is for Thompsonville — One of the city's many villages. The boundaries of the village are vague enough that only those who call it their home actually know where it begins and ends. Others know only that it lies somewhere between Newton Centre and the Chestnut Hill Mall.

Certain successful city officials place their roots in the village. In telling the Horatio Alger stories of their rise to the top, they lead one to believe "T-ville" is an assemblage of tenements overrun by impoverished urchins.

Actually, it is one of the quietest, unpretentious cand comfortable residential neighborhoods in the city, and no one who lives in it is bothered by the fact that so few people can find it. They like it that way.

U is for unwritten law — A custom which is observed as if it were formal law. For instance, it is an unwritten law that resolutions passed unanimously by the Board of Aldermen are worth approximately the value of the paper they are printed on.

Unwritten laws dictate much that goes on in City Hall. For instance, it is an unwritten law that department heads will enjoy the pleasures of air conditioning while their underlings, on whose cooperation they depend for their own effectiveness, swelter like galley slaves.

Because these laws are not written down, it is extremely difficult to amend them.

V is for village — The City of Newton is actually a system of a dozen or so villages (the actual number is still being debated), a fact many residents say lends the city a precious, somewhat rural flavor. Those who prize the village system complain that it is being threatened by a drive for commercial development that promises to secure the city's highly touted AAA bond rating.

Some city officials have commented that the village system pits parts of the city against each other and impedes the decision-making process in City Hall.

Ironically enough, several of the city's villages have already gone down the tubes. Residents of those parts of the city largely live in their memories of what things used to be like, ignoring the concrete canyons that have sprung up around them.

W is for Water/Sewer — The Water/Sewer Department, an orphan of the Department of Public Works, is the most ignored of any of the city's departments. It is ignored with good reason: anyone who looks into it closely enough will have to do something about it.

A couple of years ago, the aldermen tried to attack the multitude of problems that have been plagueing the department for years. They called the department head onto the carpet to tell them why water meters were installed backwards, why people were routinely being overbilled as a matter of policy and why the department's income was falling so far short of its annual quota.

The aldermen finally backed off when they realized that the department head's idea of an appropriate response to their questions was, "I don't know."

X is for xenophobic — Xenophobia is psychological lingo for a fear or hatred of strangers. It is all but nonexistent in the Garden City. We have been told that more than 50 foreign countries are represented in a demographic profile of the city.

Anyone is free to come into the city, as long as they can pay the cover charge.

Y is for "yuppie" — A "young, urban professional." Though the city's population is getting older all the time, there is a small, steady stream of "yuppies" moving into town.

The young men wear designer clothes from Marshalls and drive small BMWs. The young ladies wear $80 running shoes to work, where they change into expensive Italian slingbacks made of leather as smooth as a baby's skin.

Their rallying cry is, "Where's the quiche?"

Z is for zenith — The highest point...the culmination. Rumors are spreading, in some parts of the city, that, with the onslaught of commercial development that has been deemed necessary to bolster the city budget in the face of Proposition 2½ and ensuing "slow fiscal strangulation" property values might be nearing their peak.

When the commercial developments are in place, along with the revised infrastructure needed to accomodate them, some residents might feel the city has passed its zenith as a place to live and bring up kids.

(Students please note: it is very difficult to come up with words that start with X and Z. Hopefully, future scholars will attempt to remedy for this situation.)

NEWTON (UPI) — Children are being urged into "pill popping" by a television commercial for the caffeine stimulant Vivarin, the president of a nationwide consumer group said Monday.

The commercial, which has been aired on the NBC series "Knight Rider," depicts a student who grows fatigued while studying at night and obtains renewed energy by ingesting the stimulant.

"The message is that you need to use stimulants to get ahead in school," said Peggy Charren, president of Action for Children's Television, based in Newton. "It's outrageous to advocate pill popping on a program like Knight Rider."

The group took up its crusade against Vivarin after receiving complaints from parents, and is asking the FTC to not allow Vivarian to set a precedent for shows targeted toward young audiences, a spokeswoman said.

Coping with mental illness

Families ally in time of need

By Charlotte Meryman
Staff Writer

NEWTON — In retrospect, the signs of "Molly Anderson's" illness were evident two years before that January day at the University of Michigan.

There was the downslide in grades during her last high school years; the occasional periods of skipping school that turned into days and weeks; and the complaints that she couldn't study, couldn't concentrate, couldn't think.

In her freshman year of college, she missed her plane on the way home for a visit, missed it again on the way back and couldn't seem to manage packing and fastening her suitcase to leave.

She began to withdraw at school, closing herself in her room, sleeping for hours and not answering her phone.

Then, in January, her parents got the telephone call.

"Molly's" behavior had suddenly become bizarre and erratic. She had run, incoherent, to a nearby church and been rushed to the hospital.

Within days, her parents brought her home to Newton. Within months, she was diagnosed as having schizophrenia, described by mental health professionals as a major mental illness normally characterized by social withdrawal, hallucinations, looseness of associations and other disordered thinking. The symptoms often surface during late adolescence or early adulthood.

Once thought to be caused by one's upbringing and family experience, schizophrenia is now generally believed to have biochemical and/or genetic roots. Yet the stigma of mental illness remains.

"Molly's" parents do not want their identities known. The places in their story have also been changed, because there is always the fear that someone will laugh, point, or — worst of all — simply turn away.

But for families like the "Andersons," there are now support groups where stories can be shared and where family members of the chronically mentally ill can join together to advocate for their relatives and learn about medical advances and legal details.

> 'It (mental illness) affects the whole family. Your life is never the same again. That's why it's so important we band together.'
> Virginia Davis

One such group is the 10-year-old Alliance for Mental Health, with both national and state organizations and a dozen affiliated, local chapters in Massachusetts alone.

Two years ago, Weston resident Virginia Davis helped organize the first meeting of the Alliance for the Mental Health of Newton-Wellesley-Weston-Needham, held at Newton-Wellesley Hospital.

"It was such an emotional thing," she recalls. "The people there never knew that others were going through the same thing. I saw a friend I knew years back. I never knew she had someone mentally ill (in her family) and she never knew I did.

"It (mental illness) affects the whole family," says Davis. "Your life is never the same again. That's why it's so important we band together."

Micki Handel, coordinator of Aftercare Services at Newton-Wellesley, also stresses the isolation felt by families of the mentally ill.

"They go to social events and people ask about their children and they lie about the mentally ill one, or they tell the truth and people walk away," she said. "Here (at group meetings), family members get together and tell their pain, their stories and their worries. They listen and facilitate other feelings — like anger and resentment and jealousy of those with well children."

Medication and treatment had "Molly" back on her feet and able to work and drive a car for close to two years. Then, in 1978, she began to fall apart. She heard voices and became extremely paranoid and, at times, violent.

Now 26, "Molly's" adult life has consisted of a string of hospitalizations, interspersed by weeks, months and, at one point, two years at home. She has tried every medication used for schizophrenia and undergone 35 shock treatments.

For families of such kids, the pain is immense.

"Many (of these children) are quite brilliant," notes Davis, who was president of the Alliance until this year. "They were going to be doctors, lawyers, statesmen. Some have gone through college. Some have even been struck down in college. And when they have a good (period), you wouldn't know a thing was wrong with them."

The "Andersons" turned to the Alliance to learn about schizophrenia and how to cope with it. Many other members have relatives with manic-depressive and chronic psychotic disorders, two other forms of major mental illness.

Despite depressing statistics for recovery, these families draw strength from one other's successes and from the fleeting moments when the dark cloud of disease lifts.

"As one person (in the Alliance) said, 'When you get to the highs, all of the terrible times are worth it,'" says Davis. "If they just have a half a day that's good ..."

Support group aids families of mentally ill

The Alliance for the Mental Health of Newton-Wellesley-Weston-Needham, now presided over by Needham resident Eileen O'Toole, welcomes anyone interested in mental illness.

The local organization focuses on improving care for the chronically mentally ill, educating the public, and providing support for family members.

Its monthly informational and educational meetings, still held at Newton-Wellesley Hospital, feature speakers on such topics as research, treatment, after care, crisis intervention, social security and trusts. Members also promote national, state and local legislation to aid the mentally ill and learn about the latest advances in research and treatment of major mental illnesses.

The support meetings, called "Sharing and Caring," are held monthly in members' living rooms and provide time for practical advice and discussion of common problems, solutions, complaints and successes.

Members often learn what to expect from the mental illness they are dealing with and from the side-effects of medication. Families also share information about the doctors and hospitals that have been the greatest help to them.

Newton-Wellesley Hospital is also starting its own groups for families of the mentally ill. The sharing meetings will be run by a mental health professional.

For information on the Alliance, call 444-0750. For information on the Newton-Wellesley Hospital groups, contact the hospital's outpatient mental health department at 964-2800, ext. 2179.

Richardson's fame will hinder Shamie

No doubt about it, the hill has become steeper for Walpole's well respected Ray Shamie in his quest for the Republican U.S. Senate nomination. While his home state delegates were courteous and sympathetic, opponent Elliot Richardson saw his stature as a national celebrity pay off at the Dallas convention.

A simple fact of life would appear to be that while the state GOP establishment people appreciate the persistence of Shamie, they really haven't beaten the drums for him. It is not an example of party commitment to would-be candidates from the business community, who have to have a lot of desire to try to break into elective politics.

Richardson, of course, is a career man in government, a veteran of numerous campaigns and appointments to high federal office. It is not a charisma thing, like that of a Kennedy, but rather a professionalism which sets him apart. More than anything else, his rejection of the Nixon cabal's order in the Saturday Night Massacre when he resigned as attorney general, refusing to fire special prosecutor Archiblad Cox, makes him an American folk hero.

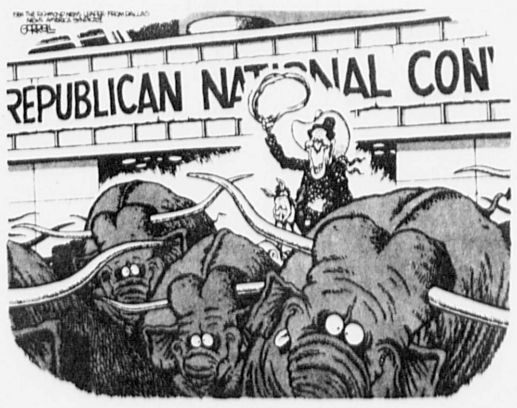

In Dallas, his repudiation of the convention platform was a typically proper Richardson act, sure to be welcomed by the moderate-liberal constituency back home. He has avowed support of Reagan while shunning the platform.

Massachusetts, despite the fact that it gave Ronald Reagan a slight edge over Jimmy Carter in 1980, is clearly a wasteland in the minds of the Republian hierarchy. With the exception of Richardson, it threw no weight at the convention and its role drew no attention on national TV. Apart from local station glimpses, Ray Shamie was an invisible man.

The GOP's premier contest in this state, with only a few weeks to go, has scarcely gotten off the ground. There have been the obligatory appearances around the Commonwealth, the press releases, a few direct confrontations and, more recently, the TV commercials. But no one yet seems really excited about the outcome.

The November finale will be something else again.

Shamie's best chance could be a small Republican turnout in which he obtains enough carryover support from his 1982 race against Ted Kennedy to prevail. It is more likely Republicans will be making a decision as to which man is the most formidable candidate and thus most able to defeat the Democratic nominee. That is where Richardson's credentials will probably count for so much.

Newton Graphic Opinions

A young man's opinion

Fear and Loathing in Dallas

By Edward Cafasso

As far as the GOP is concerned, if you can't raise your voice loud enough to be heard over the din of "Happy Days Are Here Again," then your problems aren't important enough to be discussed.

Anyone who fell for the high tech wizardry and mindless demagoguery of the recent Republican National Convention, might not realize that this country is suffering from a unilateral void of enlightened leadership.

Blame it on Vietnam, Watergate or the Ayatollah, the sad fact of the matter is that the vast majority of Americans, bolstered by material wealth from a short term economic comeback, do not want to deal with the less tangible issues of the future. They will go to the polls in a few months and give Ronald Reagan permission to strut around like an old rooster for the next few years.

Both political parties are to blame for this travesty of representative government. The Democrats know what has to be done, but can't stop arguing among themselves long enough to do it. The Republicans, on the other hand, are virtually without dissent as they pursue their one and only stated goal for this country - "Four More Years of Ronald Reagan."

Shivers ran up the spines of many Americans when Senator Barry Goldwater, the bug-eyed bastion of conservatism, whipped the Republican party's delegates into a frothing frenzy with "Extremism in the defense of liberty is no vice," which surely will be etched with care into his gravestone when he finally goes the way of all old soldiers.

Fresh from an exclusive black tie cocktail party, rodeo round-up or shopping spree at Neiman-Marcus in Dallas, it must be easy to be swayed by Goldwater's mindless rationalizations, especially the ones that conjure up the narrow-minded nationalism long the hallmark of GOP philosophy.

The Republican convention was a self-serving, scripted and superficial tribute to the status quo. Americans everywhere needed only to look beyond the haunting "Big Brother" image of Ronald Reagan floating above himself on a giant t.v. screen to understand what the Republicans are all about this year.

While the Democratic Convention nearly ripped itself apart arguing over how best to present the most important social issues of our time - the nuclear arms race, equal treatment for women and minorities, the deficit, America's military manuevers in Central America, the primary system and a myriad of other concerns - the Republicans made clear their belief that those issues do not exist.

Only Goldwater, the last Republican presidential candidate in the last 25 years to lose big to a Democratic contender, could get away with invoking God's name in a world dangerously bloated with nuclear weapons. Only he could call war of any kind "noble," "honorable" and the "ultimate expression of faith in our heritage."

Goldwater, exhibiting supremely selective memory, blamed every war in the last century on Democratic presidents, conveniently forgetting Nixon's useless escalation of violence in Vietnam and Cambodia and Reagan's fatally impotent sortie into Lebanon.

Only the Republicans could call on Moral Majority leader Rev. Jerry Falwell to bless their convention. Just as Falwell and his ilk have buried their heads in their own version of the scriptures, Republicans have lost themselves in their own myths of past prowess and prosperity.

As far as the GOP is concerned, if you can't raise your voice loud enough to be heard over the din of "Happy Days Are Here Again," then your problems aren't important enough to be discussed.

Only George "Limited-nuclear-war-is-a-possibility" Bush, who has used the public dole on 59 useless visits to other countries in his last four years, could get away with calling the Democrats "the party of the past," when it is clear they are the only party even attempting to address the issues of the future.

Only Ronald Reagan could state, "Government should do only that which is necessary" and leave unspoken the truly Republican remainder "and let the devil take the hindmost." Only the Republicans could equate the Democrats with toltalitarianism.

Let it be known that Ronald Reagan, 73, did not "run" this country for the last four years. Many of his philosophies may have been woven into actual policies, but he had nothing to do with it. Reagan has given new meaning to the word "figurehead," an ornamental or carved figure placed over the prow of the ship of state.

The seeds of today's headlines were actually sown in the disorder of the Reagan cabinet. The media's relentless attack on Attorney General candidate Edwin Meese's finances is the true reason behind the present Ferraro/Zaccaro financial bloodlust. How could they justify crucifying Meese to the Republicans without a similar campaign on Zaccaro? The Republicans revelled in it.

After all, it's easier for a voter to focus on $4 million in personal income than a clear national debt the dollar total of which is impossible for the human mind to comprehend.

The media brouhaha over whether or not to show Reagan's campaign film was even more ridiculous. Mr. Reagan begins, humbly enough, repeating the oath of office, and, by the end of the show, he has taken credit for everything from America's performance in the Summer Olympics to Independence Day.

When it comes right down to it, the only real difference between Russian propoganda and a Mobil Oil commercial, which is exactly what Reagan's promotional flick sounded like if you closed your eyes, is that the Russians don't have to pay their networks to get air time.

It was surprising to see Reagan, the first president in history with "mood hair" (well-placed streaks of grey at election time/brown, black and/or red the rest of the time), still awake at midnight when the "Show Me" state of "Mizura" ended all the suspense and put him up for four more years - or however long he lives.

Wasn't it Ronnie who fell asleep on Pope John Paul II? Didn't Nancy prompt him at a speech when his eyes suddenly glazed over and he couldn't answer a simple question? Wasn't it Reagan, the same man who publicly condemned Louis Farrahkan for his inflammatory rhetoric, who "jokingly" condemned the Russians to death "in five minutes."

If Reagan truly believes "weakness invites adventurous adversaries," how could he expect the Soviet Union, which sees America as just as hell-bent for world domination as we see them, to opt for something less than keeping pace with this country's spiralling defense spending.

The Republicans are not the only ones at fault here. Only the Democrats could be naive enough to accuse Reagan of planning a tax hike before he even made a public statement saying he was considering one. There's little doubt he would have raised taxes, but the Democrats' premature accusation left Reagan with an "out" on the issue and, in fact, gave him time to alter his "bread and circuses" approach and claim he is figuring out how to avoid a tax hike.

In the next two months, Americans will get a taste of the power an incumbent candidate wields at election time. He surely will not face questions from the press and almost definitely will stay away from more than two debates with Walter Mondale. He will make sure he is preceived as "the president" only, rather than a presidential candidate.

Many of my peers have messages for both parties. To the Republicans we say: Respect for the White House shouldn't be confused with blind obedience. Patriotism shouldn't be confused with suicidal nationalism. Doomsaying should not be confused with realism. "Fear and retreat" should not be confused with the rational pursuit of a better world. The status quo of economic prosperity may just get this country by for the next four years, but it is only a bandaid when major surgery is needed.

To Reagan, in particular, we say: You are as old as your beliefs. You have only a tenuous grip on the realities of the 1980's. You are scary as a person and horrifying as the leader of the free world.

To the Democrats we say: If you can't unify the nation's only truly representative party against as onerous a presidential prospect as Ron Reagan, you don't deserve to represent us in the White House.

To Mondale, in particular, we say: Gary Hart's right. You're "mush." Nice try. Goodbye.

When it comes time to deal with the serious, long term issues facing the nation and the world, not just the pragmatic or popular ones, Americans of my generation will call on the Democrats, but the pendulum just hasn't swung far enough yet.

For now, young Americans, many of whom probably will not tear themselves away from "MTV" long enough to vote in November, will just have to hold on tight for the next four years and hope Reagan/Bush don't find a way to send us all to war in time for the next election.

By Robert Walters
National Columnist

Dallas businessman Trammell Crow lives in a society of Texas plutocrats who measure their wealth in "units" — each equivalent to $100 million. In local parlance, he is worth "five units."

During the Republican National Convention here, Crow offered his thoughts about being selected to deliver a welcoming address to the delegates.

"When I was accorded this honor," explained Crow, "my reaction was: 'Why me? I'm not a politician or a party leader. I'm just a concerned citizen and a businessman.' Then I realized that ordinary Americans are what our party is about."

Crow may fit the convention's definition of a "concerned citizen" and an "ordinary citizen" but he doesn't qualify under any other standard. The world's largest developer and leaser of commercial real estate, Crow has a personal fortune estimated at $500 million, which makes him one of the country's richest men.

Crow was hardly a typical participant in the convention, but in many respects, he personified the materialism, elitism and insularity which were so vividly displayed here.

Almost 20 percent of the delegates had family incomes which exceeded $100,000 last year, according to surveys conducted by CBS News and NBC News. Nationally, only about 1 percent of all households are in that bracket.

The median family income of the convention delegates was $58,000 — about twice as high as the comparable national figure of $24,580. Fewer than 1 percent of all delegates were blue-collar workers.

The unrepresentative character of the convention extended well beyond those standard demographic measurements. The process of drafting the party's platform, for example, was marked by repeated displays of ideological arrogance on the part of conservative extremists who cannot be considered, under any rational standard, to be in the mainstream of either the Republican Party or the nation's political process.

No less an authority than President Reagan's daughter Maureen publicly complained about the "Neanderthals" on the Platform Committee who summarily rejected the views of those with whom they disagreed on the issues of abortion and the proposed Equal Rights Amendment.

"The vast majority of elected Republicans and women support ERA and are pro-choice," said Ms. Reagan. "This Platform Committee has taken the attitude that only they know what is truly right. It's an exclusionary process."

Those who dominated the frequently mean-spirited deliberations of the Platform Committee were proud of their work. Rep. Jack F. Kemp, R-N.Y., for instance, boasted that the final product was the most radical platform in the party's history.

There was no shortage of moral certitude elsewhere at the convention. Members of the Rules Committee, for example, insisted that they knew what was best for the GOP when they systematically rebuffed attempts to make future convention delegations more representative of both Republican voters and the nation's population.

That action inspired Kansas Attorney General Robert T. Stephan, a convention delegate and the GOP candidate for governor of Kansas, to complain that "we Republicans keep talking about broadening the base (of the party) but we never do."

The Rules Committee also created a new party organization, the Chairman's Executive Council, which will assume many of the functions of the Executive Committee of the Republican National Committee in directing the activities of the RNC staff.

The new group is far smaller than its predecessor, further isolating party officials from rank-and-file voters and transferring control of the GOP to an autocratic, highly centralized leadership unit.

"The Republican Party... (is) on its way to being America's party," President Reagan proclaimed here — but the smugness and elitism displayed at the Republican National Convention are alien to many of the country's voters.

Keep voting place at Hyde

The Newton Highlands Neighborhood Area Council urges the Newton Election Commission to maintain the voting place for Ward 6, Precinct 3, and Ward 5, Precinct 2, at the gym of the Hyde School for the fall election, in keeping with the August 13 resolution of the Board of Aldermen.

It has been past practice in the city that a polling place in an elementary school remained there when the school was closed, certainly through the time of the reuse decision process. Following that precedent, on Aug. 16, the new Hyde reuse advisory group voted unanimously to support the Aldermanic resolution.

The central location of Hyde as a polling place favors voter participation. It is near public transportation (notably the Highlands MBTA stop) and the Highlands business area, so voting may be combined with commuting and/or shopping, without an extra trip. About 73 percent of the registered voters of 6/3 are within half a mile of Hyde, a reasonable walk, whereas only 39 percent are within such a distance of Countryside, the proposed alternative. Effectively, the entire part of the precinct north of Route 9 would have to go by car or taxi to vote if the polling place were moved to Countryside. This would most greatly inconvenience the elderly and also young parents who do not drive or would not have a car available. Moving the polling place for 5/2 from Hyde to Zervas would similarly decrease its easy accessibility for a majority of voters in that precinct. (The polling place at Oak Hill School is also slated to be moved, but only across the street to Brown Junior High, a move with negligible impact on voter accessibility.)

For the Hyde gym to serve as a polling place, it need only be minimally heated through the first week of November, with heat only turned up on the election days. The advantages of the Hyde gym location to the voters are worth some small financial cost to the city, a matter the Board of Aldermen recognized.

Over the past several years there has been a high voter turnout in precincts 5/2 and 6/3. The city should want to encourage such political participation by maintaining polling places which are easily accessible to the majority of people in these precincts. The proposed removal of the polling places from a central location near the Highlands business district is a not so subtle attempt to disenfranchise our community.

Protests rental practices

I am writing to you in response to your article entitled "The Frustrations of Finding a Home."

I am a single parent (divorced) with two lovely, intelligent, friendly, well-behaved daughters, age 11 and 9.

I, too, have been looking for an apartment since last winter like Mrs. Leger, and I, too, get the same rhetoric as Mrs. Leger relative to lead paint, elderly landlords, too high rent, too small apartment, etc., etc. Sometimes I don't even get past the front door with the realtors, they don't even bother to take down any information so I know I will never even hear from them.

The lead paint "excuse" has really worn thin with me because my daughters are well over the age of six, but it is the landlords' most popular excuse for not renting to some one with children.

I am not a mother on welfare, expecting the government to take care of me. I have a good position in a large corporation; therefore, I am not a financial risk.

Everyone fights for a better economy, better education, everyone is against nuclear weapons, but why I ask, if no one wants kids to live in their neighborhood?

Are there more women out there like Mrs. Leger and myself? If so, let's band together and let our senator's and representatives know it is a major problem, not a minor one.

Jury proves system works

The jury decision in the DeLorean trial was a glorious affirmation that the "little man" can survive against 1984's "Big Brother Government".

It proves once again that the American (ex-English) judicial system of "trial-by-jury" stands as the most valid in the world. Government spies, set-ups, stings and scams have been relegated to their proper place..."sit-coms."

There are many times when Americans feel anger, and frustration at their slow-moving pondrous legal procedures. (Charles Dickens once wrote, "The Law's an ass!") The DeLorean decision gave us a moment of joyous celebration...it really works.

There is a big difference between school phobics, who are literally unable to attend school, and school truants, who simply do not want to come to school, experts stress. Typically, phobic children become panicked as it the time approaches to leave for school in the morning. They are overcome by feelings of dread and misgiving. They may sweat and shake or develop headaches, abdominal pain, nausea or extreme fatigue.

Their parents may not be able to wake them up or get them ready for school in the morning. Or the children may not be able to go to sleep the night before.

"(Going to school) was like being told you have to jump into a pool from a thousand-foot platform — and you don't even know how to swim," recalled one former phobic.

The reasons children often give for such dread are that the school is too big, they do not like the teachers, the teachers are not good to them, they do not like the kids, or they are afraid of getting harrassed or beat up.

Although such fears sometimes do prove to be at the root of the problem, the real, underlying cause of school phobia is often separation anxiety, experts say. Performance anxiety and the frustration of learning disabilities are also pointed to as occasional culprits.

"Sometimes there is something going on at home and they (phobic children) are afraid to leave because they're afraid something will happen," says Schnell. "Sometimes they're involved in such a struggle at home that they don't want to give in to what the parent wants. Sometimes there are unspoken messages (from the parents) to 'stay home.'

"And sometimes," Schnell notes, "it is not a parent issue; it has to do totally with school."

Both Hoogheem and Schnell say many teenaged school phobics have a record of similar difficulties in their early elementary years. Both point to "families in transition" as a key attribute of phobia cases.

Schnell also notes that a high proportion of the phobics she works with are youngest children or only children. This may be because the family has deteriorated over the years or because the youngest or only child is too closely tied in with the parents, she says.

Although Hoogheem says he has not noticed any change in recent years in the incidence of adolescent school phobia, Schnell believes the phenomenon is on the rise. She attributes the increase to a boost in average school size and a high divorce rate, accompanied by the frequent erosion of home and family stability.

Normally, when a student shows signs of being phobic, a counselor (or occasionally a housemaster) will step in immediately, try to connect with the child, and try to get him or her back to school as quickly as possible.

A home visit is usually first on the list for the counselor, so he or she can get to know the parents and pinpoint the cause of the anxiety. From that point on, guidance and/or attendance counselors will work closely with the family to help them deal appropriately with the child and with school staff to get the student involved and to facilitate the necessary bonds.

Often, counselors will visit the home in the morning to make sure the child is awake. They may offer to drive the student to school or take him or her out for a cup of coffee.

"Our specific instructions (to parents) are not to belabor the issue (of going to school) the night before and to be 'business as usual' in the morning," says Hoogheem. "We may use a modified (school) day or schedule. We will tailor it to their needs and gradually increase (the school time) until they get confident that they can handle it."

Phobia can be triggered or intensified by a very real fear of an overwhelmingly large school or a school "social danger zone," such as a bathroom, locker room, entryway, cafeteria or bus stop.

Schnell points to effective orientation for incoming students as a crucial means of giving kids a sense of control over their environment and of connection with their school. She also notes that fears about specific bullies need to be checked into and proper action taken if a problem exists.

If necessary, the counselors may also appeal to the court for special services for the child or family.

Occasionally, when a student has completely dropped out, a counselor may arrange for tutoring in a neutral location to try to get the child back to school.

At that point, says Hoogheem, "obviously, we will be looking for other kinds of programs, like 'Turnaround' and 'New Start' (two Newton programs aimed at helping kids stay in high school).

"Sometimes they (phobic students) won't come for four, five or six months," he says. "But there have been very few that, over the long haul, would not somehow reconnect to school."

City survives 3-year tax cap

But, rather than conducting wholesale lay-offs and service cuts, Mann moved to expand the city's commercial tax base, maintained the city's unique AAA bond rating, kept the budget out of the red, and pushed for increased state aid, while decrying the financial burden placed on the city by county government.

The 1984 version of the city's annual opinion survey shows that a clear majority of residents believe the quality of law enforcement, animal control, fire protection, education, snow plowing, street maintenance, public transportation, ambulance service, trash collection and maintenance of public facilities — all basic and highly visible services for taxpayers — is just as good or better then it was six years ago.

The extent of the city's success becomes even more evident considering it is now delivering services to more households than at any other time in its history.

Asked the secret behind the enviable quality of life in the Garden City, Mann replied, "We've been able to do more with less. I believe it was the willingness to do unpopular things for the right reasons.

"I'm fortunate to have been blessed with a wonderful community that responds in times of concern," he added, describing residents as "a community that demands excellence."

A declining student population, while leading to sometimes divisive school closing and consolidation decisions, has saved the city millions of dollars, most of which was invested into educational programs and teachers wages, he said.

The measure of success in this area is clear. The quality of education here is competitive with any other community in the country, and the city has one of the highest per capita education expenditures and best pupil/teacher ratios in the state.

On the municipal side of the ledger, contracting out rubbish collection and ambulance service to private firms has also amounted to millions in savings, according to Mann.

Those efforts have combined favorably with moves to consolidate the fire department, increased use of data processing as a management control tool, vast savings from energy conservation, a program to fight city employee absenteeism and better production, overall, with fewer employees, he said.

Grassroots campaign bears fruit

With the help of fellow volunteers, she collected the required 200 registered voters' signatures from each of Newton's state representative districts. Now that the administrative duties have been taken care of, including validating the names with the city's election commission and submitting the signatures to the state Secretary of State's office, the campaign is taking a turn back toward its original purpose — education.

The organization's educational efforts include a schedule of films, speakers and discussions to be presented at the Central and Eliot Congregational churches on Sunday evenings this fall. Clark also said the group is planning to set up tables and distribute informational literature at different places in the city.

According to CARC staff member Charles Glazier, the campaign's purpose is to teach the historical background of U.S. involvement in Central America. He said campaign organizers chose state representative districts as a focal point, as opposed to U.S. congressional districts, because, "We're trying to focus on communities, which have their own realities, qualities and needs."

Glazier said this referendum differs from others of its kind. "There have been referendum campaigns on the Central American issue before, but this is the first one to deal with the whole region. Each country has a unique situation, but, because of U.S. involvement, each country's problems are related to the other countries."

By the presence of referendum on the fall ballot, the group, which is actually a coalition of a number of Boston-based agencies, hopes to "move U.S. leadership to look for constructive and peaceful interests" in Nicaragua, Honduras, El Salvador and Guatemala, Glazier said.

The coalition's original members include Jobs for Peace, Boston Rainbow Coalition, Mobilization for Survival, Central American Solidarity Association and Catholic Connection.

Most of the CARC resources, which Glazier referred to as a "bare bones budget," come from this coalition.

After the ballot, the referendum campaign committee's purpose will have been overcome by events. Win or lose, Clark and Glazier said referendum supporters will remain involved with the Central American issue. Glazier said most of the volunteers will probably continue their work with any one of the numerous sponsoring groups.

Volunteer Mariam Benn-Ur of Newton Highlands said she will continue her involvement with an organization at Wellesley College, where she will begin school in the fall. The youngest member of the volunteer staff, 18-year-old Benn-Ur first became involved in the campaign about five weeks ago, following a trip to Central America to learn more about the situation there.

Initially afraid of travelling to the area, Benn-Ur said her "fear lifted" after she spent four days in Nicaragua talking to the people and reading their books.

She said her trip was sparked by a feeling of "ignorance" of the Central American situation. "It's so easy to be ignorant ... You don't hear much and what you do hear is so confusing."

'Stupidity" charged in library plan rejection

By Edward Cafasso
Staff Writer

NEWTON — Planning and law department officials have tentatively concluded that an elderly Auburndale resident's proposal to build a new main library on his property at no cost to the city is not feasible, prompting a charge of "stupidity" from the citizen.

Planning Director Barry Canner said last week Stanton Avenue resident Joseph Weinfeld's proposal to combine a geriatric care facility, elderly housing and a two-story main library on almost three acres of his property "wasn't feasible."

Many of the plan's details were "unclear" and the tentative decision was based only information supplied by Weinfeld, Canner said. He added that there was not enough data to "make a full judgement" on the 70-year-old resident's offer.

Weinfeld refused to comment on the latest development in his offer to the city, but, in a copy of his written answer to Canner, he blamed "stupidity" for the decision.

"I was stunned, stupified, shocked and totally confused by the total ignorance displayed by yourself and the assistant city solicitor assigned to help you in evaluating my proposal," Weinfeld wrote, adding that his "five-month-old granddaughter could have made more sense" out of the July 19 letter outlining his proposal for a new main library.

Weinfeld's plan, one of several proposals currently under consideration that would provide the city a new main library, calls for the construction of underground parking, one floor of recreation space and library music rooms, two floors of library, one floor of professional medical offices, four floors of subsidized, low income elderly housing, one floor of related medical offices and one floor of geriatric research laboratories. It would be paid for with federal bonds and rents charged for the medical offices.

Video poker evades crackdown

According to the city's chief licensing official, Carleton Merrill, it was the third time Munevar had approached the commission to request more games and the second time in the last year he made public statements to members saying video poker games were in use "all over" the city.

Merril said last week, "It's irresponsible on (Munevar's) part to make a statement like that without backing it up with information which we and the police could use in confidence."

Police Chief William F. Quinn appealed to Munevar and any other resident with information concerning the use and location of the games to cooperate with police. Quinn promised that such information, even if given anonymously, would be kept absolutely confidential by his department.

Video poker games were the subject of a police crackdown in late May after an informant told police of observing a $50 pay-off in connection with a game at American Legion Post 440 on California Street, Nonantum.

Post 440 officials, after meeting with Quinn, locked up six of the games in a supply room. Two similar machines in use at the Sons of Italy on Adams Street and three others at the Newton Lodge of Elks on Centre Street were also taken out of operation.

Use of the games as a source of amusement in this state has increased recently, but city legal officials say they are technically not illegal until the player receives a cash pay-off from a particularly high score. In the past, video poker games have been seized in Somerville, Revere, North Attleboro, Fall River and other communities.

After Licensing Commission Chairman Ernest G. Angevine informed Munevar he could not receive any more licenses for video amusement games and would have to submit plans regarding the restaurant project before being granted a license, the following dialogue took place.

Munevar: "Every time I ask you for anything I always get turned down."

Commission member Jerome J. Pearlstein: "You ask for things we can't say yes to."

Munevar: "I get all the pool tables I want, but you're very hard on these video games."

Pearlstein: "That's because the community doesn't want them."

Munevar: "It isn't the community. They told me it was no problem. I showed you a petition a while back."

Pearlstein: "That, in and of itself, is not sufficient."

Munevar: "They keep asking me for them. It just isn't enough."

He then continued on to discuss the increase in license fees for video games, from $20 to $100 each, and said this was "a free society" in which people could "spend a quarter" if they wanted.

Munevar: "I'm just saying that there are all these illegal games all over the place, one-arm bandits and so forth..."

Merrill: "There are not, presently in Newton. Any gambling device is presently out."

Munevar: "Well, I'm sorry to disagree with you, but I have no trouble finding them. This just isn't fair for these places to be here..."

Various commission members then asked Munevar to tell them where the games are currently in use.

Munevar: "I don't want any of my windows broken. Even as we talk, people are playing them."

Merrill: "Unless you're prepared to give us information as to where these machines are, I wouldn't make a statement like that."

Munevar: "I'd like to keep my windows."

Merrill: "I publicly challenge you to tell us."

Munevar: "I'd prefer to keep my windows."

Local heroes assist police

"I was just coming out of Store 24 and heard this loud bang," Kelleher said. "I looked over and saw the girl just as she was hitting the car's windshield. She was carried on top of the car and I thought she was dead at the time. I couldn't help her out, so I chased the car."

Gorgone, 21, of West Newton, was there with other friends when the accident occured. Both men gave chase in Kelleher's Chevrolet Camaro Z28.

"First I ran over to the girl," said Gorgone. "I said to the girl, 'You're alive,' and she was moaning and groaning and then Kelleher pulled up and I jumped in his car."

Chasing the car down Watertown Street, through sideroads and into the backstreets of Nonantum, both men caught up with their suspect in the backlot of an apartment building on Cottage Court.

"We followed him all the way down to the Lake and found him wiping the blood off his car," said Gorgone, a bricklayer. "He pulled his car behind a fence and I looked around the corner and said, 'Come over here' and he started walking toward me, saying, 'I didn't do it. I didn't do it.'"

Gorgone grabbed the man and led him to his friend's car, where the suspect attempted to escape again, but was tackled by Gorgone.

"We brought him back to the scene and said to the policemen, 'Here you are. This is the guy,' and they arrested him," Gorgone said.

Their heroics have put them in line for a commendation from Newton Chief William Quinn, who said they showed "outstanding desire and action to help police."

Sr. Joanne Frey

Active approach to religious life

By Suzanne M. Dulude
Asst. News Editor

NEWTON — Sr. Joanne Frey is an embodiment of her job contract — especially the part that calls her to be a "'living reminder' of the Good News." Her work as Pastoral Assistant at St. Bernard's Church in West Newton is proof of that.

Her contract continues: "Her speech, bearing, attitude and sense of mission should improve the Parish climate and environment by what she is, more than what she does." To see her smiling face and hear her enthusiastically speak of her nearly four decades as a member of the Mission Helpers of the Sacred Heart is to know that her work is her life.

Each day, after morning prayer and her own private prayer, Sr. Joanne begins her official work day by making necessary phone calls or attending to her morning appointments. She might be counseling someone who needs her guidance, perhaps a convert, a newly divorced or separated person, or even someone who simply has a question about his or her faith.

Later in the day, after 12:10 mass and lunch with the St. Bernard's staff, she might venture out into the community and bring parish news and monthly communion to shut-ins or visit a bereaved family or a new mother.

"A woman religious has to have a great many interests, because you have to feed your ministry," the energetic 65-year-old said. In addition to living with a family in Newton Centre, her involvement in the community spans almost every sector of civic life. One of her favorite affiliations is her membership at a local health spa, where she gets a chance not only to keep in shape, but, also, to meet all kinds of interesting people.

"I'm very much a part of the City of Newton," she said proudly. Having been a part of St. Bernard's for five years, she was happy to say she knows many of the Garden City's shop keepers, police officers, fire fighters, aldermen and other local officials, not to mention the people she meets going door-to-door in her parish.

Mission work, which focuses mostly on visiting and counseling parishioners, is what first attracted Sr. Joanne to the Mission Helpers. The West Virginia native, who had attended 12 years of Catholic school, graduated from high school in 1936 and attended two years of business school before working as a purchasing agent and secretary to the president of a glass manufacturing company.

During that time she considered the convent, but the options open to nuns seemed limited. "I didn't want to teach and I had no inclination to be a nurse," she said of the only two alternatives she considered for women religious.

Yet her interest in the church was strong. "I was very involved in church service. I think that's where my vocation came from." After some searching, she learned of the Mission Helpers of the Sacred Heart. Based in Baltimore, the group was what Sr. Joanne called "teachers of religion and teachers of teachers." Much of the work by the missionaries was "out on the street" where they could "catechize."

She was 27 by the time she entered the religious community — the first woman from Clarksburg, W. Va., to enter the convent in 25 years, since her brother's babysitter — and then underwent the required nine years of preparation before her final commitment.

After being missioned around the country, Sr. Joanne was sent to Washington, D.C., where she attended Catholic University and earned her B.A. in sociology and her M.A. in religious education.

Life on Capitol Hill grew more interesting for Sr. Joanne when President John F. Kennedy and his wife sought her services to teach religion to their daughter Caroline. Memorabilia from this time now decorates her office as an autographed portrait of the Kennedy family and a framed hand-written thank you note from Caroline make real the somewhat fairy tale past.

She recalled that, at that time. she was wearing a habit — "the typical sister thing," she said with a giggle.

A former president of her religious community, Sr. Joanne spoke candidly of her vocation. "Religious life is magnificant for the right people." But it is not easy. "Celibacy is difficult and doesn't get any easier," she said with a laugh. Obedience — "being at the call of my community at any time" — can be difficult also.

That is not to say that she does not find her work fulfilling. She said her work at St. Bernard's has given her a great deal of satisfaction. The diversity in the personalities and backgrounds of the six-member staff is what drew her to the parish. "I knew they would give me life," she commmented.

Now she considers her alliance with Fr. Gerard D. Barry, pastor of the West Newton parish, "one of the best working relationship I've ever had. We complement each other so much." Her respect for him and his position is obvious as she continues. "He is able to discern potential in all of us and invites us to use it."

Looking very much like any active woman, wearing a white skirt with coordinating sport shirt and earrings, Sr. Joanne obviously enjoys the freedom of dress once denied women religious. "I like to look the way I think is right" ... If for no one else, "for my own motivation," she added. "Sisters have to look good for who they represent," she said referring to a more lofty purpose.

However her views represent a less traditional stance. "I'm very much a feminist," she continued. But she was sure to stress that she is not "anti-male." She thinks it only fitting that "women are getting their proper place in the church." But "I don't look toward ordination," she said. Her only regret at being a female in the church is that she cannot forgive sin. She explained that, in her work, she hears a great many confessions, yet can only offer recommendations and consolation, not absolution.

But that regret seems so small to a woman who feels that the longer she lives life, the more beautiful it becomes. Admitting that she cannot do all the things she once did, she continued, "I don't feel any less alive or whole at 65. What I bring to my ministry at 65 is my wisdom of a life given to the church and God. I'll never have to apologize for that."

JVS receives $35,000 grant for older workers

NEWTON — Jewish Vocational Service was recently awarded a Job Training Partnership Act Older Workers Grant of $35,000 to develop part-time job opportunities for workers age 55 and older in Newton and 11 towns south and west of Boston.

The goal of the program is to work with business to expand the number of employment opportunities for the economically disadvantaged older worker, particularly flex-time, permanent part-time, job sharing or "mini-shift" positions. It is anticipated that 100 new jobs will be created over a one-year period beginning in September. The program also aims to increase employer awareness of the advantages of hiring older workers.

Home equity conversion program assists seniors

By Frank DeBenedetto
Correspoondent

NEWTON - Older homeowners who are "home-rich but cash-poor," can increase their income through the new Senior Home Equity Conversion Program now underway in Newton.

The program, started in April, allows moderate-income people over the age of 60 to live in their home while capitalizing on its value, according to Roberta Leviton of the Newton Corner Community Development Corporation.

"Many older people want to stay in their homes but their low income makes that difficult. Most of the time their home is the only thing of real value they own," said Leviton.

"This is a program whose time has come," she said, commenting on why the idea was put into action. "Until now, home equity was thought of as a frozen asset that couldn't be utilized. Now older people can use home equity for their benefit," she said.

The program, newly introduced into the Boston area through the Action for Boston Community Development, offers two techniques for a person to make money on their home:

Reverse mortgages, which are bank loans based on the value of the house, allow a person who owns a house with little or no mortgage to retain the title of the property and to benefit from its appreciation.

The sale-and-leaseback plan involves an older homeowner's selling the house to a lending institution, investor, or family, and leasing the home back for life. In this plan, the seller receives monthly income on the sale of the home while, at the same time, the buyer pays taxes and provides maintainance. The seller will be required to pay an affordable rent.

According to Leviton, other Boston-area communities such as Jamaica Plain, the South End, Watertown and Belmont are beginning the program, which originated in the San Francisco/Marin County area in California.

"Our goal is to act as a councilor to these people, and as a liason between them and various banks in the area," said Leviton, who declined to name the financial institutions already involved with the equity program.

Interest in the program, according to Leviton, has been good, but the community development corporation is still in the process of educating senior citizens through presentations at area senior drop-in centers.

Interested homeowners and organizations in the Newton area should contact the Newton Corner Community Development Corporation (969-3555), or the Newton Highlands Community Development Corporation (244-5551).

Philippine leader Aquino remembered

Friends hope to memorialize home

By Frank DeBenedetto
Correspondent

NEWTON - When Benigno S. Aquino, Jr., left his Newton home on Commonwealth Avenue a year ago and got on a plane bound for the Philippines, he may or may have not known that death awaited him. Now, an organization wants to make that home a monument to him and his long fight for real democracy in the Philippines.

The Benigno S. Aquino Memorial Foundation has been set up by a group of Aquino's closest friends, mostly physicians, to honor the memory of the Philippine opposition party leader, according to Dr. Steve G. Agular, of Belmont, president of the foundation.

The goals of the organization are to purchase the 175 Commonwealth Ave. home in which Aquino lived, and to set up a fellowship fund in his name, according to Agular.

"His sacrifice touches those who cherish freedom and democracy in this city and all over the world," said Agular, as he reasoned why the foundation was established.

The house, according to Agular, may be made into a memorial to the fallen leader, but the memorial foundation is still reviewing the legal ramifications of the home's purchase and use.

When the legal situation is clarified, the foundation will consider what will be done with the house, according to Agular.

"We are very busy gathering funds through donations. We have not contacted the City of Newton as of yet, and we will not until any legal problems that may arise are solved," said Agular.

The 51-year-old Aquino was gunned down on his Aug. 21, 1983 return to the islands after three years of self-imposed exile. According to the Philippine government, a Communist gunman was paid to perform the assasination, but a 10-month government study still has not solved the murder.

"The main goal is to preserve the home of Benigno Aquino, it is full with memorabilia and artifacts from his life, as well as books about the Philippines that belonged to him," Agular said.

Anyone interested in making a donation to the foundation should send it to the Benigno S. Aquino Memorial Foundation, 175 Commonwealth Ave., Newton Ma. 02167.

Poll of school system not useful, Strand says

By Charlotte Meryman
Staff Writer

NEWTON — The results of a recent questionnaire on Newton's public school system, included in the city's latest census, are not too useful, says Superintendent of Schools John Strand.

The survey asked residents to rate the city's services as "good," "fair" or "poor" and divided comments on the school section into elementary, junior high and high school levels.

While 60-72 percent of parents with kids in the public schools rated the schools at their child's level as "good," only 12-19 percent of parents with kids in nonpublic schools rated Newton's performance at their child's level as "good." Thirty to 35 percent of the non-public school parents responding described the city's school quality as "fair," while 14-23 percent saw it as "poor."

"To be honest with you, I don't think this information tells us very much," Strand said. "For one reason, we know a significant number of children in private school began there (in nonpublic schools). ... I'm more concerned about the comments and criticisms of those whose children attended (the Newton schools) and who decided it wasn't good."

In a detailed, 1982 survey of Newton's nonpublic school parents, 43 percent of the respondents reported their kids had never attended public school. The census questionnaire does not provide for such distinctions.

Strand asserted that most parents with kids in private schools have a low opinion of public schools in general.

The superintendent also said the percentages, themselves, are misleading — particularly for parents rating grade levels at which they have no kids in school.

The survey states, for example, that 41 percent of parents with no kids at the elementary level rate the city's elementary schools as "good," 10 percent describe them as "fair" and 2 percent say they are "poor."

The statistics are actually much better than they seem, Strand notes, because 47 percent of the parents marked the "don't know" category. So, in actuality, 40 of the 53 percent — or close to four-fifths — of those responding to that section rate the elementary schools as "good."

Newton's junior high schools received the lowest marks on the survey, regardless of whether the parents had kids in public or private school or had no children in middle school.

Strand listed greater structure and discipline and reduced class size as the reasons parents most freqently cite for moving their kids to nonpublic schools at the secondary level.

In the School Department's 1982 survey of nonpublic school parents, 42 percent of those responding listed class size and individual attention among their reasons for sending their kids to private school. Thirty-seven percent listed discipline, while 63 percent pointed to educational quality.

"The junior highs in our system are significantly bigger than the elementary schools and people have a lot of concerns about whether their kids will get enough attention," Strand said.

Newton's two 500-800-student junior highs, for example, cannot compete with the class size of a private school with 40 students in each grade level, Strand said.

The superintendent defended his recent recommendation that the city close the smallest of its three junior highs, noting that there is a "tradeoff" between small classes and a rich range of course offerings and extracuricular activities.

"The strength of a school lies partly in its size," Strand said, adding, "I think our schools have good discipline."

Coach Art Kojoyian looks ahead to another season

Lions ready to defend crown

By Mike Flanagan
Sports Correspondent

NEWTON — After capturing a league title, most teams have big holes to fill because of departing seniors. The Newton South football team, last fall's Dual County League champ, however, must replace only six graduates, something that head coach Art Kojoyian feels will be done with little trouble.

After fielding a predominantly junior team last autumn, Kojoyian returns a seasoned, talented squad with the key player, quarterback Steve Altman, back after posting a completion percentage of 56.6.

Offensively, the squad will miss tackle Charles Smith, and both gaurds, but Kojoyian feels that there are talented players on the line who can move into these spots.

Altman fits the mold of a good quarterback, a tall, lanky player who appears capable of taking over the huddle. While Kojoyian tries to groom a backup thrower, running back Derryck Harrell will fill the spot. Altman tossed four touchdown passes and was just shy of a thousand yards passing on the year. He notched 60 completions on 106 attempts, and led an offense that outscored their opponnents, 205-117.

The running game is the bread and butter of the attack, and the Lions will probably run very much after returning nearly all the team's best backs except for Chris Kiah.

Two big blockers are vying for the fullback spot, and Kojoyian feels that he is in a, "pleasant predicament" finding playing time for both.

Mike Welch and Dave Mosby both weigh in the 225 range, and promise to bust open many holes for the tailbacks. Both started games last year, and they have the size and speed to clear out any hole.

The backfield is stocked with plenty of talent, including senior Darvell Huffman. The leading receiver last fall with 28 catches, Huffman also scored eight touchdowns, and ran for a 5.5-yard average.

Other runners will include Kevin Rollins, who was the leading ground-gainer for the Lions last season with 761 yards, and Harrell, to provide Kojoyian with a potent running attack.

Up front, Leroy Rollins, Kevin Houlihan, and Ban Hochberger all saw extensive action at the ends, combining for over half of the receptions last year, and will be counted on for solid production this season.

Returning starter Tom Rogers, a 235-pounder, will man one tackle spot, while Gary Collins and Brian Burlingame will compete for the other spot. Burlingame has the upper hand now, after seeing game action on defense last season.

The guard spots this year will be manned by Mike Levine, and Rich Yerardi, with Jonathan Linder pressing the two for playing time. In the middle, Mike Acker, a 210-pounder, logged most of the playing time, and he'll be back to anchor the line.

On defense, Harrell led the team with seven interceptions, and he will be back in the middle of the three-deep defensive backfield. Huffman and Leroy Rollins will take the corner spots, and the experience they got last year should go a long way in improving their coverages.

Yerardi will man the middle linebacker spot in the Lions' 5-3 defense. Levine and Welch are competing for outside spots, while Kojoyian is thinking of moving Rogers to a spot on the strong side to cut down the running game.

The middle of the defensive line is pretty much set, with Rogers and Burlingame holding down the tackle spots, and Collins is a good bet to win the battle for the noseguard position. Kojoyian has an open mind about the battle for the two defensive end spots, and thinks that Houlihan, Acker or Linder could all play the position.

Another benefit of a championship season is that more players join the team the next season. This holds true for the Lions, as over 25 freshman took the field Monday for drills.

Overall, the players and the experience is there; the coach knows that the only thing capable of dethroning the champs would be an attitude problem, but that seems unlikely with Kojoyian keeping his squad loose and on an even keel.

"It's nice to be optimistic but you never know what's going to happen. I had no idea that we would perform the way we did last season, but now that these players have shown their potential, they have to live up to it," said Kojoyian.

Newton South faces Cambridge Rindge and Latin on Saturday in its first pre-season test, and will take on Littleton in the regular season opener on Sept. 15. The Lions took a 25-14 win in the opener last season.

The candidates:

Woodland golfers star in N.E. PGA pro-am

The New England PGA's major club member pro-am championship for 1984, played under extremely moist conditions at Woodland and Wellesley on Aug. 13, saw a share of the title coming to Woodland.

Joe Browning, long one of the region's finest professionals and a Woodland member for the past several years, teamed with former club champion, Bill Parr Jr. to tie at 138 with Rick Morus and Kevin Hester of Green Hill. The late finishing hour prevented a playoff.

While this competition draws little media attention, it once had top billing. Not since Francis Ouimet, Jesse Guilford, John Thoren and Ted Bishop scored victories in the distant past have Woodlanders figured in the top trophy award.

In 1923, one year after its inception, Ouimet teamed with Woodland's Charley Burgess and Guilford won at Charles River in 1924 with 148. IN 1940, Thoren and Ted Bishop, representing Woodland, put together 66-69-135 at Essex to finish out front. Francis "Ancy" Doyle and Bill Daley made a great run for the title in 1977, tying for third at 131.

In the 1984 renewal, Woodland played considerably tougher than Wellesley both because of heavier rain and more rugged rough. A 30-minute rain delay was required in fact.

A morning round of 70 for Browning and Parr Jr. was followed by a 68 at Wellesley. Their half dozen birdies offset bogeys, two coming on three-putt greens at short holes. As he does consistently, Browning kept regulation pace through the raindrops. For Billy, there was a double measure of satisfaction. Closing out the shotgun, he birdied Wellesley's long, tough second hole from 15 feet to bring the team to a tie after having engaged in a driving contest with tour player Dana Quigley.

Qiugley, well up among heavy hitters in tour statistics, saw the Parr Jr. tee shots pass him on a number of holes. Impressed, Dana paced off one of the wallops by the Woodland player and gave it a 300-plus reading.

Drew grid candidate at UNH

DURHAM, N.H. — Two area gridders will be part of the University of New Hampshire 1984 football squad. After winning their last six games of 1983, UNH opens its season this fall on Sept. 8 at Maine.

Bill Drew, of Newton, is one of several players battling for the split end position on the team. Drew was a back-up to three-year starter Peter O'Donnell last season, and figures to be seeing quite a bit of action for the Wildcats this fall.

With two years to go, he appears to have the inside track on the starting job despite missing spring drills. Drew is a 6-0, 185-pound junior.

Offensive tackle Paul Donnolly is slated for a backup position on the line this season, until the freshman learns the UNH system. A 6-5 270-pound Watertown resident, Donnolly's size assures him of being in the Wildcats future.

UNH, looking for its first Yankee Conference title since it won back-to-back crowns in 1975 and 1976, has eight starters back on offense and another eight on defense.

Wilgoren to play soccer

MIDDLETOWN, Conn. — Newton's Julie Wilgoren is projected as a member of this fall's Wesleyan University women's soccer team.

Wilgoren, a freshman back, joins a club which posted a 5-6-1 record in 1983.

Coach Don Long, who is in his fifth year of coaching the Cardinal women, feels that Wilgoren is the most talented of the freshmen, and he is hoping for an immediate contribution from her. The nucleus of last year's defense, including All-New England back Jessica Rizzolo, is gone to graduation.

"Defense is the key to the game in our league," said Long. "Most of the teams we play have strong defenses, so we'll have to keep pace. Goals just seem very hard to come by, making the games very even."

White aces 4th hole at Woodland

NEWTON — Edmund White, a three-year member of Woodland G.C., notched his first hole-in-one ever on the 131-yard fourth hole on August 18 at Woodland.

The president of Richard White & Sons Construction, he nailed the ball with a six iron, and it went in on two bounces. White averages in the mid-80s, and serves as the co-chairman of the Cosgrove Tournament. He was playing with former pro Francis Doyle, Dr. Jim Reilly and Dr. Tom Kegler.

St. Sebastian's 1st

NEWTON — St. Sebastian's won the Newton Parks and Recreation Department's High School Boys' Basketball championship, sweeping a best-of-three series with the Bobcats recently.

The champs posted a 58-53 victory and then followed up with a 58-46 win for the title.

Elvis can still pack them in

NEWTON — If anyone was wearing blue suede shoes in Hawthorne Park last Sunday, it's a good bet they didn't get stepped on, even amid the crush of 1,500 Elvis Presley fans celebrating "The King's" memory.

The occasion was the sixth annual Elvis Presley Day, sponsored by the Nonantum Children's Christmas Party Association, and organizers say it drew a bigger crowd than last year's version in spite of cloudy skies.

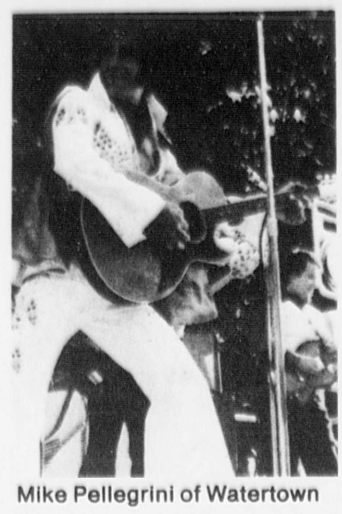

After all, it takes more than a little rain to douse the spirits of a true Elvis crowd.

Admission was free, though food, soft drinks, T-shirts, buttons and raffle tickets for Presley memorabilia were not.

But as one of the organizers said, "Mostly we just try to cover the cost to give people an enjoyable day. And the main point to remember is that we do it all for the King of rock and roll."

The highlight of the five-hour festival was a 20-minute performance by Monk Elvis & the Legends featuring Watertown's Mike Pellegrini.

Newton crime stats show increase in car theft only

NEWTON — Your car stands the highest risk of theft if it is a late-model sports or luxury vehicle parked in a Chestnut Hill shopping mall sometime between 4 p.m. and midnight, police statistics show.

That's the picture offered by the most recent set of crime figures compiled by the Newton Police Department and submitted to the federal Uniform Crime Reporting unit.

Of seven separate crime categories, car thefts showed the only percentage increase when compared with the same six-month period last year — up 18 percent from the beginning of the year through July.

The overall crime index, which includes incidences of burglary, murder, rape, robbery, assault and larceny, is down 5 percent, according to statistics.

Woman bites police officers

NEWTON — Two policemen were treated for human bite wounds after they tangled with a 28-year-old Newton woman who escaped last week from the custody of state social workers, police said.

The woman allegedly bit and clawed the officers when they attempted to restrain her during two separate incidents following her escape from state Department of Mental Health (DMH) workers, police said.

Claudia Felliciotti, of 117 Elm St., faces two counts of assault and battery on a police officer.

She was being escorted through West Newton Square by two DMH custodians when she escaped at about 6 p.m., police said.

Officer Steven Walsh, who was alerted to the escape by one of the workers, pursued the woman and caught her, but not before he was allegedly bit, clawed, and punched by the woman during the struggle, police said.

He received a tetanus shot from medical personnel at Newton-Wellesley Hospital, where the woman was taken for observation and restraint, police said.

When a second policeman, Thomas Ganley, was dispatched to the hospital to guard the suspect, now considered a prisoner because of the assault, he arrived as the woman broke free from her restraints and allegedly began to cause a commotion, police said.

As Ganley attempted to hold the woman down, she allegedly bit his right thumb, police said. He also received a tetanus shot, records show.

WORDY GURDY®

BY TRICKY RICKY KANE

Every answer is a rhyming pair of words (like FAT CAT and DOUBLE TROUBLE), and they will fit in the letter squares. The number after the definition tells you how many syllables in each word. YOUR OFFICIAL MASS. INSPECTION MAINTENANCE STATIONS
Now that your car is inspected just once a year, the last number on your plate determines when.
If your plate ends in 7, get inspected in July.
Zeros come in October, though, and plates with all letters in November.
We'll do the traditional safety checks as well as the new computerized tailpipe emissions test. Quickly and efficiently.

Mercedes draws owners' raves

By Micheline Maynard
UPI Auto Writer

DETROIT (UPI) — Only two American-made cars made the top 10 in an annual survey of consumers released Tuesday.

Owners of German-built Mercedes-Benz autos are most satisfied with their cars, while U.S.-made Renault models drew the lowest rating in the survey.

The only two American naeeplates in the top 10 were Lincoln and Mercury, according to the 1984 Customer Satisfaction Index compiled by J.D. Power and Associates, a Westlake Village, Calif., automotive marketing firm.

The results were outlined by J. David Power, head of the firm, in a speech to the Automotive News World Congress.

"Consumer satisfaction is the ultimate measure of how companies are meeting their customer needs," said Power.

"Consumers today have a much wider variety of choices in selecting a product — any product — and this increased complexity and competitiveness has resulted in a consumer who is not willing to settle for mediocrity."

The Power survey involved 10,000 new car owners one year after they purchased their autos and included 31 foreign and domestic nameplates.

In most cases, Power said regular warranties have expired and owners had more than 12,000 miles on their cars. They also had visited dealers two or more times for service.

"The honeymoon is over, and we ask them: 'Now what do you think of your car?'"

Mercedes finished first, followed by Japanese automakers Subaru and Honda.

Luxury Lincoln vehicles built by Ford Motor Co. finished fourth, while the leading Japanese seller in the United States — Toyota — was fifth.[7/8]

British automaker Jaguar — which was plagued by quality problems before the company was overhauled three years ago — came in sixth, followed in order by German automakers BMW, Audi and Porsche. Ford's Mercury models rounded out the top 10.

At the bottom of the list were cars produced in Wisconsin by American Motors Corp. for its French partner Renault. AMC's own cars came in 30th, with Renault's French-built autos just one notch above.

Others in the bottom five were two Japanese companies — Isuzu and he Mitsubishi cars imported by Chrysler Corp.

Major U.S. nameplates rated by the Power survey included Cadillac in 13th place, Oldsmobile 16th, Plymouth 17th, Ford 18th and Chrysler 19th.

Buick finished 21st, while Dodge, Chevrolet and Pontiac took spots 24 through 26.

Major imports included Nissan in 12th place, Mazda in 19th place while Volkswagen-U.S.models finished 21st and its German-made autos 22nd.

Police log

Alleged assault

NEWTON UPPER FALLS — A 37-year-old supervisor at a Newton Upper Falls biomedical company allegedly took a packing knife to a fellow employee after an ongoing dispute over job conditions at the plant led to the confrontation, police said.

David E. Marshall, of 45 Marlboro St., Belmont, pleaded not guilty at his arraignment last Wednesday in Newton District Court to charges of assault and battery with a dangerous weapon and assault and battery.

He is due back in court Aug. 30.

Marshall, a quality control supervisor for Nova Biomedical Corp. at 20 Ossipee Rd., allegedly attacked a fellow worker who, for the past several months, had argued with Marshall over job conditions at the plant, police said.

The alleged assault occured at about 2:30 p.m., when Marshall burst into the repair depot room, reportedly grabbed his victim by the throat, threw him to the floor and allegedly thrust a packing knife to his throat, police said.

Yelling "You cost me my job," Marshall allegedly sliced his victim's right hand when the man used his arm to protect himself from the knife, police said.

It was unknown whether Marshall's job status with the company had either changed or ended prior to the alleged attack.

Witnesses who heard the commotion broke up the fight, police said. The injured man was transported to Newton-Wellesley Hospital for treatment of lacerations, records show.

The victim told police he was involved in a continuing dispute with Marshall over job conditions at the company, records show.

Brae Burn robbery

NEWTON — About $2,200 worth of goods were stolen from four cars parked at the Brae Burn Country Club on Fuller Street Saturday, police said.

In a series of apparently related break-ins, the thief or thieves made off with a $1,000 woman's gold watch, from a 1983 Audi 5000; a $250 dictaphone and $250 radar detector from a 1980 Datsun 280ZX; some $400 worth of hockey equipment from a 1981 Jeep Wagoneer; and a $300 stereo cassette player from a 1984 Saab.

The breaks occurred sometime between 11:15 a.m. and 4:15 p.m., were all reported at 4:19 p.m., and in each case, the autos were entered by breaking a side window.

Police said the cars were also vandalized.

Vandalism at home

NEWTON CENTRRE — Vandals tossed a quarter stick of dynamite into the mailbox of a Newton Centre home early last Wednesday morning, destroying the postal box and sending mail flying across the street, police said.

The explosion was heard at about 12:30 a.m. by the neighbor of a home that sits near the intersection of Homer and Kenwood Streets, police said. The witness also heard a car drive away at the same time, but did not see the vehicle.

The U.S. Postal Service was notifed, police said.

4 women asaulted

NEWTON HIGHLANDS — Four Newton women were harassed and assaulted by a group of men who followed their car, chased them through the streets of Newton Highlands and began smashing their windows when they finally pulled over, police said.

Police said the women, all under 22 years old, were inside a 1977 Oldsmobile Cutlass travelling south on Parker Street when an unknown yellow car pulled up behind them from the Rt. 9 overpass at about 12:15 a.m.

For the next 10 minutes, the car pursued the women through various streets in Newton Highlands, police said. The women then pulled their car into a driveway at Malubar Lane, hoping their pursuers would pass, police said.

Instead, two men jumped out of the car and surrounded the womens' vehicle, police said. One of the men — white with blond hair and blue eyes, about 5-feet, 8-inches tall, between 16 and 18 years old, wearing a grey zip-up sweatshirt and white sneakers — attempted to open up the locked driver's side door.

The man then walked around the car and tried to open the locked passenger's side door, but was unsuccessful, police said. He then tried to smash the window with his hands while kicking the door with his feet, police said.

Then, jumping onto the hood, the man shattered the windshield with a foot kick, police said.

He then hopped into the waiting car with his friend and sped away, police said. The women told police there were a total of four men in the car at the time.
